I am advised by the Mersey regional health authority, which negotiates the national contracts for standard range models on behalf of the NHS, that demand for the dark brown models was very low until about two years ago. Since then an increased demand for dark brown aids led to a temporary shortage which caused a number of representations to Mersey RHA by hearing aid centres. I am pleased to say that this problem has been resolved and that both colours are now readily available.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hearing aids have been distributed by the National Health Service for each of the past 10 years to (a) children under 16 years of age and (b) adults over 16 years of age; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: This information is not held centrally.

Area Health Authorities (Devon)

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what requests for changes or amalgamations he has received from area health authorities in Devon; and what is his response.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: None.

Leicestershire Health Authority

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans his Department has to deal with financial problems affecting the Leicestershire health authority; and if he will make a statement on what progress has been made in this matter.

Mr. Dorrell: As the hon. Member is well aware, district health authorities are responsible for living within their cash limits. Leicestershire health authority has a budget of £222 million for 1990-91 and has produced prudent plans to make sure it can balance its books.

Cash Limits

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether any changes will be made to the cash limits and running cost limits for his Department in 1990-91.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimates, the following changes will be made:

The cash limit for class XIII vote 1 (hospital and community health services, family practitioner services (part) and other services, England) will be increased by £178,800,000 (from £13,724,057,000 to £13,902,857,000) to help provide, from 1 April 1990, for the pay awards recommended in the 1990 reports of the review bodies for nursing staff, midwives and professions allied to medicine, and on doctors' and dentists' remuneration, as announced by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 1 February 1990.

The cash limit for class XIII vote 3 (Department of Health administration, miscellaneous health services and personal social services, England) will be increased by £1,531,000 (from £686,387,000 to £687,918,000).

This increase provides for £1,200,000 to meet, from 1 April 1990, the review body recommendations mentioned above; for a £40,000 transfer from class VI, vote 2, (Department of Employment, other programmes and central services) in respect of the workplace advisory services and a net transfer (£291,000) from class XIV, vote 7 (Department of Social Security, administration and miscellaneous services) in respect of printing and office machines. The provision for running costs on this vote and the Department's running cost limit is increased by £3,594,000 from £198,493,000 to £202,087,000.

The public expenditure costs of these changes have been charged to the reserve and do not add to the public expenditure planning total.

Regional Health Authority Chairmen

Mr. Stevens: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he will make a statement on the appointment of regional health authority chairmen from 1 August.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The terms of office of 12 of the 14 regional health authority chairmen expire on 31 July 1990. I am pleased to announce that I have made four new appointments as follows:

Northern RHA: Peter Carr
North East Thames RHA: Tim Chessells
South Western RHA: Charles Stuart
Oxford RHA: Dr. Stuart Burgess

These appointments run until 31 July 1992.

The chairmen of the following eight RHAs have accepted my invitation to serve in these most important positions for another four years each:

Yorkshire: Sir Bryan Askew
North West Thames: Mr. William Doughty
Trent: Sir Michael Carlisle
South West Thames RHA: Baroness Cumberlege of Newick
West Midlands RHA: Sir James Ackers
Mersey RHA: Sir Donald Wilson
North Western RHA: Mr. Bruce Martin
Wessex RHA: Mr. Robin Buchanan

Infant Milk Products

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether guidelines have been issued to hospitals on the use of infant milk products containing soya.

Mr. Dorrell: Yes. Advice to health authorities about infant feeding issued in July 1989 drew the attention of health care professionals to the report from the Committee on the Medical Aspects of Food Policy "Present day practice in Infant Feeding." This report stated that soya-based infant formulas can be used where an alternative to a formula based on cow's milk is clinically indicated but that in such cases a dietician's expert advice is essential to ensure that this does not lead to any nutritional deficiencies.

Mental Handicap

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish a table showing, in the case of the Northern regional health authority, how the reduction in provision of hospital provision for the mentally ill and the mentally handicapped has been translated into increased community care provision, using both output indicators and input indicators.

Mr. Dorrell: We do not hold information centrally that would enable us to establish a valid correlation between hospital provision for mentally ill or mentally handicapped people in the region and community care provision.

I recently announced plans which will enable local authorities to increase the level of care they offer to mentally ill people being treated in the community. Health authorities will be required to ensure that any reduction in the number of hospital beds for mentally handicapped and mentally ill people does not outpace the development of alternative community services. The hon. Member may care to contact the chairman of the Northern regional health authority for more information.

Abortion

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list by health district, for the last available year, (a) the percentage of second trimester abortions and (b) the abortion rate.

Mr. Dorrell: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he has any plans to seek to change (a) the legal requirements concerning notification of abortions to the chief medical officer or (b) the penalties in cases where such requirements are not met; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The regulations relating to notification of abortions to the chief medical officer would need to be amended to meet the requirements of any changes Parliament decided to make to the law on abortion during the passage of the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Bill. We have no plans in relation to the penalty prescribed in section 2(3) of the Abortion Act 1967 as amended.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what explanations have been offered to the chief medical officer explaining late submissions of abortion notifications.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Most of the notifications in question were completed at the time of termination. The explanations given to the chief medical officer are usually admitted oversight, personnel changes, forms being temporarily mislaid through filing in hospital notes, or staff illness.

Smoking (Children)

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received about the voluntary agreement on tobacco advertising and sponsorship being circumvented by the practice of tobacco companies paying film companies for the placing of brand name tobacco products in films likely to be televised and watched by children; and what steps he will take to stop this practice.

Mr. Dorrell: We have recently received representations on the question of "product placement", as this practice is known, from ASH and Parents Against Tobacco quoting examples of American-produced films shown in the United Kingdom. We do not have any evidence that this practice is being used by the United Kingdom tobacco industry but if such evidence emerges we will raise the matter with it in the context of our system of voluntary agreements.

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received about the illegal sale of single cigarettes to children; and if he will take steps to prohibit the practice of selling cigarettes from opened packs.

Mr. Dorrell: We have received three representations on this subject, two of them from hon. Members.

The sale of any tobacco product to a child under 16 years of age is already illegal. My right hon. and learned Friend the Home Secretary is considering ways in which the relevant legislation can be strengthened.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans the Government have to bring in legislation to tackle the problem of children smoking; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: I have been asked to reply.

The Government are very concerned about children smoking and the way in which the law on the sale of tobacco to children is being flouted. The steps which might be taken to strengthen the law in this area are under review.

Cot Deaths

Sir Dudley Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what stage his official scientific inquiry into cot deaths has reached; when he anticipates receiving this report; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply that I gave the hon. Members for Oxford, East (Mr. Smith), for Merthyr Tydfil and Rhymney (Mr. Rowlands) and for Birmingham, Ladywood (Ms. Short) on 16 May at column 414.

Secure Accommodation (Young People)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many local authority social services departments provide secure accommodation for young people which can be used as an alternative to prison.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Local authority social services departments provide a range of facilities and services which may be used as an alternative to a custodial sentence or a prison department remand. This includes a national network of approved secure accommodation, currently provided by 27 social services departments in England in 34 individual secure units, to which all local authorities have access.

Accident and Emergency Units

Mr. Janman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the population served of each district health authority; and how many accident and emergency centres each district has.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 11 May 1990]: The available information is given in the table.

Comparisons between district health authorities based on the number of accident and emergency departments per head of resident population may be misleading as factors such as the population density, the numbers of holidaymakers or workers coming into the district, and ready access to specialised services in adjacent districts are taken into account when planning services. Furthermore the heading "accident and emergency" includes departments offering a wide range of levels of service.

Resident population estimates, by district health authority, as at 30 June 1988, and numbers of NHS hospital sites having accident and emergency departments, by health authority, as at 31 March 1989

WALES

Local Government Finance

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what are the latest figures for (a) the number of people on the community charge register, (b) the number who have applied for rebates and (c) how many of these have been successful, for (i) Carmarthen district, (ii) the borough of Dinefwr and (iii) Wales.

Mr. David Hunt: The latest figures notified to me state the position as at 1 December 1989. These are:

	Numbers
Carmarthen district	44,208
Dinefwr borough	30,028
Wales	2,215,187

Information about the matters listed under (b) and (c) is not yet available.

Health Care (Elderly People)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what provisions have been made to provide improved health care facilities for the elderly in Wales.

Mr. David Hunt: In addition to services provided specifically for them, the elderly have benefited from the considerable improvements made to health services in general. Since 1978-79, 41 per cent. more revenue resources in real terms have been provided and between September 1979 and September 1989 over 18 per cent. more staff directly concerned with patient care. Throughput of in-patients increased by 31 per cent. and new out-patients by 22 per cent. between 1979-80 and 1988-89. Further improvements are in prospect under the reforms proposed in the National Health Service and Community Care Bill. In addition, the Department's initiative on the elderly in Wales has funded demonstration projects testing out new ways of providing the elderly with health and social care.

Local Authority Dwellings

Mr. John P. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give the estimated capital investment on new buildings (a) in cash and (b) in real terms for each local authority for each year since 1979.

Mr. David Hunt: Information collected centrally for local authorities relates in general to the category new construction and works, which includes renovation work. The only area of local authority capital expenditure where separate information is available for construction alone is the building of dwellings, figures for which are shown in the following tables. Information for 1979-80 and 1980-81 was not collected on a comparable basis and is therefore not included.

Welsh Development Agency

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many new factory units have been built, and how much industrial land has been purchased by the Welsh Development Agency in Gwynedd during the past 12 months.

Mr. David Hunt: During the 1989-90 financial year the Welsh Development Agency completed 10 units totalling 19·5k sq ft at Porthmadog. Presently under construction are 18 units measuring 56k sq ft at Gaerwen and 14 units measuring 27k sq ft at Cibyn industrial estate, Caernarfon. The Welsh Development Agency will shortly be starting the construction of a 12k sq ft business centre at Parc Menai, near Bangor, which will be followed later in the year by four high specification units totalling 20k sq ft. During this financial year the Welsh Development Agency also intends to start construction on rural workshop schemes at Llangefni and Porthmadog each measuring some 10k sq ft.

Land acquisitions in the county over the same period total 45 acres, and an option to purchase a further 20·5 acres was also completed in the year. Efforts to identify further strategic sites in the region are continuing.

Chernobyl

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was his estimate of the likely radiation levels in sheep in Wales in the period from the Chernobyl accident to May 1990; and what was the actual level.

Mr. David Hunt: In view of the complex factors involved, it is not possible to make meaningful estimates of this kind. The percentage of sheep failing the live monitor test when leaving the restricted areas fell from 14 per cent. in 1987 to 4 per cent. in 1989.

National Health Service and Community Care Bill

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what mechanisms will exist after the implementation of the National Health Service and Community Care Bill to enable district health authorities to ensure that the wishes of their local communities are taken into account.

Mr. Grist: The interests of local communities in the health service in their district will continue to be represented by the community health councils. District health authorities will continue to consult on proposals for substantial developments or variations in the provision of the service.

University Health Studies Centre

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he is in a position to respond to the proposal for the establishment of a centre for health studies based on the university college of North Wales, Bangor; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Roberts: The proposal that a centre for health studies should be established and based on the university college of North Wales, Bangor, is being considered in the context of the Department's consultation paper "The Health Service in Wales Towards 2000: Manpower Planning, Education and Training", responses to which are currently being considered.

Employment Training

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much money in total will be granted by the employment Training Agency for training programmes following the restructuring of funding for local training plans.

Mr. Roberts: During 1990-91 the Training Agency in Wales' estimated expenditure on training programmes is £114,000,000. How much of this will be allocated to training and enterprise councils will depend upon their individual start dates. Currently in the development phase, all seven TECs in Wales are expected to be operational by about the turn of the year.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much funding has been provided for training programmes by the employment Training Agency since its inception.

Mr. David Hunt: Since the Training Agency was established in September 1988 to 31 March 1990, the latest data available, expenditure on training programmes in Wales has been £161,000,000.

Welsh Development Agency Properties

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list in the Official Report (a) the location of Welsh Development Agency properties sold to the private sector, for the last available financial year, where a sitting tenant existed, (b) the name of the sitting tenant in each case and (c) the rent paid before and after the property sale.

Mr. David Hunt: The information requested in (a) and (b) above is as follows:

Properties sold as Investments 1989-90
Hendy industrial estate, Hendy, Dyfed
Unit 3—Sooner Snacks Ltd.
Unit 4—Wave Computer Supplies
Unit 5—St. Teilo Training Services
Unit 6—Dyfed Building Supplies
Unit 7—Pavilion Engineering Company Ltd.
Unit 8—Finning Limited
Unit 9—Automotive and Industrial Chemicals Ltd.

Maesgwynne industrial estate, Merthyr Tydfil
Unit 2—Rayles Rewinds

Court Road industrial estate, Cwmbran
Unit 32—Data Stripe Ltd.
Unit 33—Data Stripe Ltd.
Unit 45—Photographic Images Ltd.
Unit 46—Autobind Ltd.
Unit 47—Easyscene Ltd.

Springvale industrial estate, Cwmbran
Unit 50—R. J. B. Glass and Double Glazing Centre
Unit 51—R. J. B. Glass and Double Glazing Centre
Unit 52—W. E. D. Automatics Ltd.
Unit 53—Sacol Hydraulics Ltd.

The above information excludes sales to sitting tenants, which have comprised the majority of WDA property disposals to date.

Details of rents paid by individual WDA tenants is commercially confidential information. In general however, it is agency policy to obtain the best consideration available under market circumstances.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what rights exist for a review of rent increases levied on sitting tenants in Welsh Development Agency properties sold into the private sector.

Mr. David Hunt: Both public and private sector organisations operate within the general framework of the Landlord and Tenants Act 1954 and tenants' rights conferred by this legislation would apply. In essence the Act provides that existing occupational leases and tenants' contractual rights will remain unaffected by a change of ownership, which means that rents will not be reviewed purely as a result of a sale. Tenants also have statutory protection in respect of security of tenure when the lease is due for renewal. There is a further provision for recourse to arbitration if settlement of rent cannot be achieved between landlord and tenant.

Nurses

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what assessment he has made of the problems that will arise in respect of nurse recruitment in the border counties of Wales if the full introduction of the Project 2000 training initiative for nurses is not implemented as originally planned in 1990-91;

(2) what assessment he has made of the problems that will arise in respect of nurse recruitment in health authorities in Wales if the full introduction of the Project 2000 training initiative for nurses is not implemented as originally planned in 1990-91;

(3) what assessment he has made of the problems that will arise in respect of nurse morale in Wales if the introduction of the Project 2000 training initiative for nurses is not fully implemented as originally planned in 1990-91;

(4) what assessment he has made of the problems that will arise in respect of administrative and personnel matters if the introduction of the Project 2000 training initiative for nurses is not fully implemented as originally planned in 1990-91;

(5) what assessment he has made of the problems that will arise in respect of manpower planning in health authorities in Wales if the introduction of the Project 2000 training initiative for nurses is not fully implemented as originally planned in 1990-91.

Mr. Grist: The decision to phase implementation of Project 2000 in Wales was taken in the light of information obtained from draft implementation plans submitted by district health authorities, the financial implications of a simultaneous all-Wales implementation set against the resource requirements of the Health Service in Wales generally, and the complex planning task at the local level in laying the foundations for the educational reforms which Project 2000 involves. The implications of the decision to phase for manpower issues are being addressed as part of the manpower resource planning process, and other work undertaken by the manpower steering group with health authorities in the wider context of demographic trends and increased competition in the employment field. There will also be administrative implications which each individual health authority will need to address.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he will make it his policy that the Project 2000 initiative on nurse training shall be implemented in south-east Wales, including Newport and Cardiff, in 1990-91.

Mr. Grist: No. It has been decided that there should be a phased approach to the implementation of Project 2000 in Wales with the new courses commencing in north Wales in 1991, in west Wales in 1992 and south-east Wales in 1993. The possibility of bringing forward the south-east Wales start to 1992 will be kept under review.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will announce the detailed timetable for the full introduction of the Project 2000 training initiative for nurses in each part of Wales, giving the specific implementation dates for each health authority in Wales.

Mr. Grist: Implementation of Project 2000 in Wales will proceed on a phased basis commencing with the introduction of the new courses in north Wales (Clwyd and Gwynedd) in autumn 1991, in west Wales (Pembrokeshire, East Dyfed, West Glamorgan and Powys) in 1992, and in south-east Wales (Mid Glamorgan, South Glamorgan and Gwent) in 1993. In the case of west and south-east Wales, it is possible for the courses to begin in the spring of the relevant year, thus involving a delay of only six and 18 months respectively over the original planning assumption.

The possibility of bringing forward the south-east Wales start to 1992 will be kept under review.

Health Authorities

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his policy as to whether the nine health authorities in Wales should continue to cover their present geographical areas during and after the implementation of the National Health Service and Community Care Bill.

Mr. Grist: My right hon. Friend has no current proposals to alter the geographical responsibilities of the existing health authorities but the position will be kept under review in light of the provisions of the National Health Service and Community Care Bill, including those for self-governing status.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make it his policy to issue a directive to health authorities in Wales directing that when a patient at a National Health Service hospital needs to be transferred to another hospital within the same area for treatment or examination, the authority shall bear the responsibility and cost of transport for that transfer.

Mr. Grist: This is an operational matter for the district health authorities, which decide on the advice of the patient's clinician, the transport which is appropriate to the patient's needs.

Gwynedd Health Authority

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will hold urgent discussions with the chair of Gwynedd health authority concerning the effects of the industrial dispute relating to the pay of senior secretarial staff, on the ability of the authority to meet its statutory responsibilities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: We understand a settlement has been reached and all medical secretaries returned to duty on 22 May.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales which officer members of the management team of Gwynedd health authority are appointed under fixed-term contracts; at what date each of these was first appointed; for what period; and when is their next renewal date.

Mr. Grist: Other than the district and unit general managers, no officer members of the district management team have been appointed on fixed-term contracts.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when the general manager of Gwynedd health authority was first appointed and for what period of time; and when was the contract renewed and for what period.

Mr. Grist: The district general manager for Gwynedd health authority was first appointed in February 1985 on a short-term rolling contract for an initial period of three years. The contract is renewable annually and was last renewed this year.

National Health Service Trusts

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what information he has on any formal or informal expressions of interest in the establishment of a National Health Service trust by (a) any hospital in Wales and (b) any health authority; and if he will list the bodies that have expressed any such interest.

Mr. Grist: My right hon. Friend has received no formal expression of interest to date. It would not be appropriate to list informal expressions of interest which may or may not have formalised.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will make it his policy to allow the individuals and communities affected by any hospital or health authority opt-out proposals in Wales to take the final decision themselves;

(2) if he will set out in full the requirements and pattern of consultation to be followed if any health authority in Wales or any hospital in Wales seeks to consider establishing a National Health Service trust.

Mr. Grist: Any application for self governing status will be the subject of consultation with interested parties, including, in particular, the health authorities concerned, hospital staff, general practitioners, community health councils and the local community. Detailed arrangements for consultation will depend on the nature of any particular applications received and decisions will take into account the comments of all consultees.

Ozone Levels

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will establish a monitoring system and introduce a strategy aimed at reducing high ground-level ozone levels in mid-Wales; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will estimate the annual effect of low-level ozone upon agriculture in Wales; and if he will make a statement;

(3) if he will estimate how adversely crop yield will be affected if (1) low-level ozone levels in Wales maintain their current rate and (2) they maintain their annual rate of growth; and if he will make a statement;

(4) by what percentage he expects the level of low-level ozone in Wales to increase in the next decade; and what effects he foresees of its impact upon agriculture.

Mr. David Hunt: On behalf of the Government the Warren Spring laboratory operates an ozone monitoring network designed to provide a continuous assessment of the ground-level ozone climate for the whole of the United Kingdom. It includes a site in Wales, and the extent and coverage of the network is kept under review. In addition my Department is currently funding the Institute of Terrestrial Ecology, Bangor, to carry out a study of the effects of typical rural concentrations of ozone and other atmospheric pollutants on the health of plant species in Wales.

The effects of ozone on agriculture were considered in a report by the Department of the Environment's independent expert review group on photochemical oxidants. Copies of its first report have been placed in the Library of the House. Its findings, on the basis of research carried out in the United Kingdom and the United States of America indicate that sensitive crops such as turnip, bean, radish, barley, pea and spinach could be expected to show marginally reduced yields during the peak ozone concentrations monitored in Wales. If the rising trend in ozone levels were to continue, the effects on agriculture could be expected to become more severe.

The Government are, however, already taking steps to reduce substantially emissions of the primary pollutants which react to form ozone. These are detailed in an answer given to the hon. and learned Member today by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment.

Community Mental Health Services

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if there are any plans to increase funding for community mental health services in Mid Glamorgan.

Mr. Grist: The county joint planning team (CJPT) in Mid Glamorgan has been offered initially £127,700 in 1990-91 to support developments under the mental illness strategy; these resources are in addition to those directly available to partner agencies in the team. Over £100,000 of the total relates to community-based developments of services for people with or recovering from mental illness. The CJPT has been invited to submit fuller details of its proposals in respect of community mental health teams, and we shall be considering these and the related bids for funding in due course.

NHS (Kings Fund)

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make it his policy not to use the formula proposed by the Kings Fund of half a million people when determining the scope and area to be covered by procuring authorities in the Health Service in Wales.

Mr. Grist: We have no plans at present to adjust district health authority boundaries in Wales.

Mental Illness

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what sums have been allocated on a health district or county basis in Wales to pay for the Welsh office strategy on mental illness;

(2) how much money has been allocated in total for the Welsh Office strategy on mental illness in Wales for the current financial year.

Mr. Grist: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Bridgend (Mr. Griffiths) on 30 April at columns 425-26.

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if any authority in Wales has received bridging finance for the implementation of the Welsh Office strategy on mental illness.

Mr. Grist: The mental illness strategy recognises the need for help in meeting the transitional costs of moving from existing to new patterns of service. Much of the £1·6 million offered to county teams for 1990-91, whilst not specifically described as bridging finance, is intended to enable the transition by supporting the development of locally and community-based services; these are a prerequisite for the redeployment of resources currently tied up in those existing patterns of service which are to be superseded in due course.

District Health Authorities

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what conditions attach to the use by district health authorities, when they sell land or buildings which they own, of capital receipts; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave him on 21 May 1990 and to the reply given to the hon. Member for Bridgend (Mr. Griffiths) on 30 April 1990.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what guidelines have been given to district health authorities in Wales in relation to their revenue performance related to their total asset base; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: Health authorities have a statutory obligation to manage both their revenue and capital within the cash provision allocated to them each year by my right hon. Friend. Additionally, they are required to commit at least 7·5 per cent. of their overall resource provision to the maintenance of capital assets. They are also required to submit performance reports for specific specialties and services against targets set by reference, as appropriate, to centrally prescribed strategic guidelines, published performance indicators and locally determined priorities within the framework of their financial plans. Authorities are also required to achieve in 1990-91 cash-releasing cost improvements in their delivery of services of at least 1·1 per cent. of their recurring revenue provision and to generate additional recurring income equivalent to a further 0·2 per cent. of their recurrent revenue resources; and those authorities which failed to meet equivalent targets last year will be expected to make up the shortfall in 1990-91 as well as achieving this year's minimum targets.

Health Services

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will list the authorities which will be responsible for providing health services in Wales and the area to be covered by each;

(2) if he will list the authorities which will be responsible for purchasing health services in Wales following implementation of his White Paper proposals.

Mr. Grist: The following health authorities will be responsible for securing the provision of services for the population of the areas indicated from 1 April 1991:

Authority	Area
Clwyd district health authority	County of Clwyd
Gwent district health authority	County of Gwent
Gwynedd district health authority	County of Gwynedd
Mid Glamorgan district health authority	County of Mid Glamorgan
Powys district health authority	County of Powys
South Glamorgan district health authority	County of South Glamorgan
West Glamorgan district health authority	County of West Glamorgan
Pembrokeshire district health authority	Preseli and South Pembrokeshire district councils
East Dyfed district health authority	Carmarthen, Ceredigion, Dinefwr and Llanelli district councils

Health Authorities (Management Structure)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales which health authorities in Wales have completed a review of their management structures in line with the Government's legislative proposals; and, in each case where this has been completed, whether the approval of his office has yet been given.

Mr. Grist: Health authorities are continuously keeping under review the appropriateness of their management structures and will be expected to look particularly at the implications of the Government's proposals set out in the White Papers "Working for Patients" and "Caring for People", and working papers issued subsequently, in that context.

Residential Homes

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many places there were, respectively, in (a) local authority elderly persons homes and (b) private residential homes for elderly persons in Gwynedd at the most recent available date; and what were the corresponding figures for 1980 and 1985.

Mr. Grist: The numbers of places at 31 March in each year were:

	1980	1985	1989
Local Authority Homes	853	855	848
Private Homes	141	630	1,119

Out-patient Clinics

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will list by district health authority in Wales, and by discipline, the non-district general hospital locations where out-patient clinics are currently held by consultant National Health Service staffs;

(2) if he will list, by district health authority in Wales and by discipline, the non-district general hospital locations where in 1980 out-patient clinics were held by consultant National Health Service staff, but which no longer offer such services;

(3) if he will list by district health authority in Wales, and by discipline, the non-district general hospital locations where out-patient clinics are currently held by consultant National Health Service staffs.

Mr. Grist: The latest available information is published in "Bed Use Statistics 1988-89" a copy of which is in the Library. Clinics run by general practitioners are identified separately. Comparable figures for 1980 have been published in "Bed Use Statistics" for that year, a copy of which is in the Library.

Cervical Screening

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on his further plans for the screening of women for cervical cancer in Wales.

Mr. Grist: My right hon. Friend and I continue to regard the development of cervical screening services as a priority. All district health authorities in Wales now have computerised screening programmes in place for women aged 20-64 years. Since 1986-87 the Welsh Office has allocated some £1·3 million of recurring central funds to health authorities to help them extend and improve their screening services. Officials of the Welsh Office will continue to keep in close touch with progress and a multi-disciplinary working group is to be formed which will produce further guidance on an all-Wales basis concerning the management and quality assurance of the programme.

Unit General Managers (Contracts)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many of the unit general managers serving health authorities in Wales are bound by fixed-term contracts; and whether any guidance is given by his Department as to the length of such contracts or the procedure for renewing such contracts.

Mr. Grist: All unit general managers in health authorities in Wales are appointed on short-term rolling contracts of between three and five years. Guidance on appointment procedures, the content, length and renewal of contracts and other related matters was initially issued in 1984 and again in 1986.

Surgical Procedures

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will list, for each health authority area in Wales, each of the non-district general hospital locations where surgical procedures are still carried out by consultant-led teams; how many surgical cases were treated in each such hospital in the most recently available 12-month period; and what was the number of cases similarly treated in each such hospital in 1980 and in 1985;

(2) if he will list the non-district general hospital locations in Wales where in 1980 surgical procedures were being carried out by consultant-led teams, but which no longer do so.

Mr. Grist: Details of in-patient hospital episodes in 1988-89 under the care of consultants in general surgery, ENT, traumatic and orthopaedic surgery, ophthalmology, urology, plastic surgery, thoracic surgery, dental surgery, orthodontics, neurosurgery, gynaecology, burns surgery and cardiac surgery are published in "Bed Use Statistics" a copy of which is in the Library. Comparable figures for 1980 and 1985 have been published in "Bed Use Statistics" for those years, copies of which are in the Library.

Educational Medicine

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many nurses are engaged in educational medicine and the care of children in hospitals in Wales; and if he will give similar figures for the last five years.

Mr. Grist: Information is available centrally only on the total staff in post for all nursing and midwifery staff. Breakdowns of these figures into occupation category are not considered reliable.

Cash Limits

Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he proposes to make any changes to the cash limits for class XVI, votes 5 and 8 in 1990-91.

Mr. David Hunt: Yes. Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimates, the cash limit for class XVI, vote 5 will be increased by £495,000 from £317,330,000 to £317,825,000 and the cash limit for class XVI, vote 8 will be increased by £11,125,000 from £951,713,000 to £962,838,000.

The addition to class XVI, vote 5 largely covers (i) an increase of £245,000 in respect of discretionary assistance for higher education students, particularly those facing high accommodation costs, and (ii) payments to flood appeal funds in north Wales (£150,000), as announced on 15 March 1990, Official Report, at column 348.

The remainder of the increase for class XVI, vote 5 (£100,000) and the increase for class XVI, vote 8 (£11,125,000) follow the decision to implement the recommendations of the review bodies for nursing staff, midwives, health visitors and professions allied to medicine and on doctors' and dentists' remuneration, as announced by the Prime Minister on 1 February 1990 at column 260.

The increase to class XVI, vote 5, in respect of the contribution to the north Wales flood appeal funds was offset by savings from class XVII, vote 5 in 1989-90. The other increases will be charged to the reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

National Consumer Council

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he has received a copy of the National Consumer Council report, "International Trade and the Consumer Working Paper 2: Textiles and Clothes"; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he has received a copy of the National Consumer Council report, "International Trade and the Consumer Working Paper 3: Shoes; the Cost of Neglecting Consumers' Interests"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: The National Consumer Council sent copies of its working papers 2 and 3, on textiles and clothes, and shoes, respectively, to all DTI Ministers. We welcome the general thrust of the NCC's conclusions in both papers that the cost to consumers should be taken into account whenever trade restrictions are under consideration. This is a point we regularly make in Community discussions. It needs to be balanced against other interests including those of our producers. I look forward to seeing the final conclusions of the NCC's study.

European Training Programme

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proportion of the young European executives who will be visiting Japan to improve management techniques and gain proficiency in the Japanese language, under the European training programme funded by the European Commission, are British nationals.

Mr. Redwood: Nine British nationals will participate in the 10th ETP due to start on 28 May, out of a total of 46 European company executives.

This is the highest ever number of British participants.

Cash Limits

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if any changes will be made to his Department's main supply estimates for cash-limited expenditure in 1990-91.

Mr. Ridley: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary revised estimate, the cash limit for class IV vote 2 (Support for industry, international trade, statutory and regulatory work, consumer protection and administration) will be reduced by £58,000 from £787,435,000 to £787,377,000, and the running cost limit by the same amount from £304,292,000 to £304,234,000. Provision of £4,850,000 will be sought for outstanding ex gratia payments to Barlow Clowes investors and for administrative expenses incurred by the Government's agents in respect of the ex gratia payments, and provision of £2,000,000 for legal costs in connection with Barlow Clowes recovery actions. There will be a corresponding reduction of £6,850,000 in provision for support for industrial research and development, reflecting an anticipated underspend. Additional provision will also be sought for the Companies House executive agency and the radiocommunications executive agency in order to enable them to meet their planned requirements: in both cases, the additional provision will be fully matched by additional receipts. In addition, provision of £38,000 will be transferred to class XIX vote 2 (the Cabinet Office) to cover the transfer of the post of Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, and provision of £20,000 will be transferred to class X vote 1 (the Lord Chancellor's Department) in respect of work being carried out for the Department.

The proposed outstanding Barlow Clowes payments and recovery actions are new services and it is expected that some payments will fall due within the next few weeks. Pending parliamentary approval for these new services, expenditure will therefore be met by repayable advances from the Contingencies Fund.

Transnor

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has made to the Commodity Futures Trading Commission following the Transnor case; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 23 May 1990]: My Department wrote to the Commodity Futures Trading Commission (CFTC) on 30 April about the implications of the interlocutory judgment in the "Transnor" case given on 18 April by the United States district court for the southern circuit of New York. Since then the Department has had detailed discussions with the CFTC, culminating in a joint statement issued in London and Washington on 16 May. I have arranged for copies of the letter and statement to be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Air Services

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what indications of support and opposition there have been to his own Department and to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission from (a) the regions of England, (b) Scotland and (c) Wales regarding (i) the British Airways investment in Sabena World Airways and (ii) its proposals to develop services to and from regional airports in the United Kingdom and regional airports in Europe; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ridley [holding answer 22 May 1990]: My Department has received a number of representations on this subject, the majority of them from Members of Parliament, including Members from Scotland, the north-west, the midlands, and the south-east of England. A number of the representations expressed views in favour of British Airways' investment in SWA. Fewer indicated support for proposals to develop services to and from regional airports in the United Kingdom and regional airports in Europe. Opposition has been indicated to the proposals from several quarters, expressing concerns about the impact of the BA/KLM/SWA arrangements on competition. As the merger created by BA's investment in SWA has now been referred to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission, it would not be appropriate for me to comment further. Any representations made to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission are a matter for it.

Computer-based Construction Models

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he proposes to take any steps to regulate the codes for computer-based models used for technical decision-making on new civil engineering projects, new building designs and alterations on existing buildings; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: I have been asked to reply. A person carrying out building work must meet the requirements of the building regulations, including those relating to structural stability. Computer programmes may be used for design purposes, but the building control authority will need to consider the basic design assumptions and be satisfied that the building will meet the requirements of the regulations. The possibility of allowing professionally qualified engineers to certify their own work is at present under consideration.

European Community Trade Mark Office

Mr. Mills: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if it remains his policy to secure the location of the proposed European Community trade mark office in London.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: It is our policy that the Community trade mark system should be introduced as soon as possible. Early introduction requires agreement in the Community on the location of the office. Our proposal that the office should be in London remains on the table.

Junk Mail

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the representations he has received on junk mail posted within the United Kingdom and from abroad; and what plans he has to ban such mail.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I receive a small but steady flow of complaints from individuals about unsolicited mail. Recently, this has included complaints about some mail posted from abroad. Those who complain are primarily concerned about how their names and addresses were obtained.

I have no plans to ban such mail.

Hairdressers and Beauty Suppliers

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what consultations his Department has had with the Institute of European Hairdressers and Beauty Suppliers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I am not aware of any such consultations.

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what are his responsibilites in respect of the operation of the Hairdressing Council under the Hairdressing (Registration) Act 1964.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I have no responsibilities in respect of the Hairdressing Council.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Grocott: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many staff are employed by his Department; and what proportion of them are employed in each of the standard regions.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 23 May 1990]: The table shows the permanent staff employed by the Department (part-time staff are counted as half):

Total staff in post (including executive agencies) as at 1 April 1990	11,793

Proportion by standard region	Percentage of total
Northern Ireland	0·04
Scotland	5·02
Wales	13·55
North	2·05
North West	3·10
Yorkshire and Humberside	1·99
East Midlands	1·46
West Midlands	3·89
South West	1·73
South East	66·39
East Anglia	0·78

Public Appointments

Mr. Grocott: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the full-time and part-time public appointments for which he is responsible, together with the salary and the date when the appointment is due for renewal.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 23 May 1990]: Appointments to public bodies for which my Department is responsible are set out in "Public Bodies 1989", a copy of which is in the Library of the House. A more up-to-date list with the full details requested by the hon. Member will be published next month by the Women's National Commission under the title "Women into Public Appointments". A copy of this will be placed in the Library of the House.

Recycling

Mr. Janman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on progress made so far by the advisory group on recycling.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 23 May 1990]: The recycling advisory group has met three times. Its latest meeting, held on 26 March, considered the reports of individual subject-specific working parties. These reports have now been revised to take account of the main group's comments, and the views and recommendations they contain will be taken into account in preparing the forthcoming White Paper on the environment.

Mr. Janman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if his Department has conducted a survey into the markets for (a) humus, (b) glass, (c) paper, (d) plastics, (e) metals, both ferrous and non-ferrous, and (f) other materials reclaimed from the domestic waste stream; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 23 May 1990]: Working parties covering these and other materials were set up by the recycling advisory group. They considered market and other factors influencing recycling rates. The working parties' reports will be taken into account in preparing the forthcoming White Paper on the environment.

Rain Forests

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is taking to encourage chemical and medical companies to identify beneficial uses of flora in tropical rain forests; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 17 May 1990]: My Department is taking no such steps. However such companies will no doubt have noted the recent conference on the rain forest harvest organised earlier this month at the Royal Geographical Society which highlighted such opportunities.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT AGENCY

Eastern Europe (Information Technology)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to encourage the involvement of further education's information technology programme with eastern European countries using the know-how fund.

Mrs. Chalker: We are discussing with the Hungarian authorities whether they would welcome a computing/information technology mission which would assess how best to use part of the know-how fund in this area. A similar mission is likely for Czechoslovakia. The terms of reference for the proposed mission would include determining which British academic or other institutions, firms or individuals should be involved.

Programme of Action

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has had urging support for SADCC's programme of action; and what response he has given.

Mrs. Chalker: I have received a number of representations. The Government's support for SADCC's programme of action is substantial; our total commitments to date for SADCC's regional programmes and projects amount to £70 million. British aid for SADCC member states since 1980 amounts to well over £1,000 million.

Mozambique and Angola

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list in the Official Report all projects recently undertaken or currently being planned to assist victims of conflict in Mozambique and Angola.

Mrs. Chalker: The table lists approved grants. A number of further proposals are currently under consideration.

Mozambique

In 1989-90 the allocations listed in the table were made under our emergency allocation for Mozambique. In addition we provided 19,000 MT of emergency food aid. For 1990-91 we have pledged £3·5 million plus 10,000 MT of food aid in response to the Mozambique emergency appeal.

Tobacco (Aid)

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the Government's policy on aid to the tobacco sector in developing countries.

Mrs. Chalker: Tobacco consumption is a significant health risk in developing countries. Nevertheless tobacco is a legal substance, a major traded commodity and a principal source of export earnings and budgetary revenue for a number of LDCs. The aid programme is used to assist agricultural development in a number of ways, including tobacco where it is an important cash crop for which no suitable substitutes are readily available. Aid funds are not used to finance imports into developing countries of tobacco and cigarettes. The Government believe that, as in United Kingdom domestic policy, the most sensible approach to reducing the damage to health from tobacco is demand reduction. Through our regular contribution to WHO we support that organisation's programme to reduce tobacco consumption in developing countries. We shall consider further support for developing countries in this field, both bilateral and multilateral.

DEFENCE

Reactors (Decommissioning)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, further to his answer of 15 May to the hon. Member for Makerfield (Mr. McCartney), if he will provide his latest estimate of the cost of decommissioning the reactors at Calder Hall and Chapelcross; and what proportion he estimates would fall to his Department.

Mr. Alan Clark: The responsibility for assessing the costs of decommissioning the reactors at Calder Hall and Chapelcross, and for meeting those costs, lies with BNFL. The Ministry of Defence share of the costs will depend on future usage of the reactors.

A90 Project, Aldermaston

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement upon the condition of the ducting used to carry inert gases and the supporting struts in the A90 plant at Aldermaston; and what reports he has received of gas leaks or potential gas leaks.

Mr. Neubert: The replacement of the A90 zone 1 ductwork and its supports by a pipework system was completed in April 1990. Memorandum No. 5 in the House of Commons Defence Committee's fifth report on the progress of the Trident programme (HC 374) gives full details of the reasons for the replacement of the zone 1 ventilation ductwork. Full leak testing of the replacement pipework system has been carried out successfully.

Nuclear Submarines

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress his Department has made in checking the health record of every sailor who has served in a British submarine since 1960; how many have been checked and when he anticipates the checks will be completed; whether from the initial checks any trend of cancer cases among nuclear submariners relative to the general population can be discerned; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Medical Research Council is currently conducting an epidemiological research programme into morbidity and mortality of submariners in the special environment in which they serve. Data are still being collected from the individual health records of submariners and I understand that this process will be completed by the end of this year. Analysis of the data will of course take some time after that and it would not be appropriate to speculate now on the study's possible conclusions.

United States European Reserve

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement as to the operational use of the United States European reserve headquarters at High Wycombe.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It is not our practice to comment on operational plans.

United States Hospitals

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the United States network of wartime-use-only hospitals in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: United States wartime contingency hospitals are currently prepositioned in the United Kingdom at the following locations:
RAF Chessington, RAF Little Rissington, RAF Nocton Hall, RAF Bicester, RAF Feltwell, RAF Upwood.

United States Submarines

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement as to the current operational role of the United States submarines operating from the River Clyde.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Details of the current operational role of United States submarines are a matter for the United States Government. However, United States submarines which visit the facility at Holy Loch generally do so in the course of deployment which contributes to the Alliance's strategy of deterrence.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list by year for the last four years, the number of United States operational submarines based on the River Clyde.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: None. All United States submarines visiting the Holy Loch facility operate from bases in the United States.

Nuclear Power Stations

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list by year for the last five years, the number of breaches that have been made to the exclusion zones at (a) Sizewell and (b) Bradwell nuclear power stations by military jet aircraft.

Mr. Neubert: Over the period concerned, only one complaint about low-flying military jet aircraft near the Sizewell and Bradwell nuclear power stations has been substantiated. This related to a 1985 incident in the vicinity of Sizewell. One recent complaint from Sizewell is currently under investigation.

United States Aircraft (Crashes)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list by year for the last five years and by aircraft type and mark the number of United States aircraft that have crashed in the United Kingdom that were (a) based in the United Kingdom and (b) overflying the United Kingdom.

Mr. Neubert: Our records show that there have been no crashes in the United Kingdom involving United States military aircraft not based here. Details of major accidents involving United States military aircraft based in the United Kingdom since 17 May 1985 to date are as follows:
1985 None
1986 24 July 1986 A USAF RF-4C crashed into the sea in St. Brides Bay, South Wales.
1987 23 February 1987 A USAF F-111F crashed near Newmarket, Suffolk.

1988 22 December 1988 A USAF A10A crashed on approach to RAF Alconbury.
1989 4 April 1989 A USAF A10A crashed through the perimeter fence at RAF Alconbury after landing.
17 April 1989 A USAF A10A crashed near RAF Alconbury.
1990 5 February 1990 A USAF F-111E crashed into the sea near Wainfleet range.
6 February 1990 A USAF A10A crashed near Capel-y-Ffyn in Wales.
2 May 1990 An F-111 crashed near Wells-next-the-Sea in Norfolk.

Armed Forces

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement as to what forecasts he has made of the United Kingdom's armed strength for the late 1990s.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We are examining options for change in the structure and deployment of our armed forces but it is too early to forecast the results of this work.

RAF/USAF Bases

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the network of RAF/USAF co-located bases and their operational use.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The following Royal Air Force and procurement executive airfields in the United Kingdom are allocated for use as wartime co-located operating bases by United States forces:

Abingdon
Benson
Boscombe Down

Brawdy
Coltishall
Cottesmore
Finningley
Odiham
Scampton
Waddington
Wittering

RAF Wildenrath in Germany also holds co-located operating base status.

It is not our practice to comment on the operational plans for such bases.

RAF Fairford

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement as to the future use of RAF Fairford.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Nottingham, North (Mr. Allen) on 12 February at column 119.

United States Military Maintenance Bases

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the United States military maintenance bases in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The only United States facility entirely given over to maintenance tasks is the United States air force logistics command support group located at RAF Kemble.

United States Tactical Missiles

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with the United States Department of Defense in respect of how many of the 450 tactical (SRAM-T) missiles due to be deployed in Europe from 1995 will be based in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: While we have always made clear our support for retaining an up-to-date and effective United States nuclear presence in Europe, the question of the detailed deployment of US SRAM-T missiles has not yet arisen.

United States Intelligence Centre

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement as to the operational use of the United States joint (intelligence) analysis centre being re-located from Stuttgart to Molesworth.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Cambridgeshire, South-West (Sir A. Grant) on 11 January at columns 691-92.

Service Personnel

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list by sex and by year for the last 10 years the number of service personnel in (a) the Army; (b) the Royal Air Force and (c) the Royal Navy.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The information is as follows:

RAF Upper Heyford

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement as to the future role of RAF Upper Heyford.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The 20th tactical fighter wing of the United States air force based at RAF Upper Heyford forms an important part of NATO's longer-range strike capability. No decisions have been taken to change this role.

Eastern Europe

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement as to what financial savings are planned during the 1990s, following the political changes in eastern Europe.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We will continue to make available the resources necessary to sustain modern and well-equipped forces adequate for our security needs. We are examining options for change, and while we anticipate opportunities for reductions in some areas it is too early to say what savings might result and how soon they will arise.

Radiation

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence in which year neutron emission resulting in under-assessment of the radiation dose exposure equivalent of Coulport personnel from the Chevaline warhead during transportation or storage was first recorded; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neubert: The under-assessment of the neutron and over-assessment of gamma components of radiation dose from Chevaline warheads in Coulport started in 1979. No one working in the nuclear weapon areas during the last 10 years will have a corrected annual dose greater than 20 per cent. of the annual dose limit.

Since the building environmental review plan in 1989, separate dosimeters have been introduced to monitor gamma and neutron radiation respectively.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the maximum total radiation dose registered in the Institute of Naval Medicine's records held at Alverstoke for any past or present Rosyth dockyard workers; for what period it was accrued; and what are the 20 highest doses recorded.

Mr. Neubert: The maximum lifetime total radiation dose for any past or present Rosyth dockyard worker registered in the defence radiological protection service's computerised record-keeping system is 597·75 mSv. This total dose accrued over the period 17 December 1964 to 30 November 1989.

The 20 highest radiation doses recorded for workers so registered are as follows:

Cumulative Radiation Exposures (mSv)

595·89
571·35
563·78
534·67
515·59
482·52
480·59
479·20
478·22
474·52
472·18
463·02
452·68
439·11
428·03
427·14
420·07
410·13

Radiation dose records for personnel leaving employment before 1979 are not held on computer compatible media, and therefore any large-scale analysis, even where possible, could be conducted only at disproportionate cost.

Military Pensions

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list British military pensions deriving from wartime service along with compatible information for other European countries.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Pensions are not awarded to members of Her Majesty's armed forces in respect of wartime service as such. Service personnel who suffer disability as a result of injuries attributable to their service, whether or not in time of war, may be awarded pensions under the provisions of the war pensions scheme administered by the Department of Social Security. These pensions are related to the degree of disability experienced. A range of supplements and additional allowances are also available under the scheme, subject to eligibility. Service personnel may also receive pensions under the provisions of the occupational schemes for the armed forces, provided that they meet the conditions of eligibility, including length of service given, which are appropriate to their service and the circumstances of its termination. No distinction is made between wartime service, and other periods of service, in determining eligibility and pension benefits. The Ministry of Defence is not in a position to list comparisons between the provisions made by the British Government and those of other European countries.

Equipment

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) whether he intends to continue with the development of (a) the battlefield artillery target engagement system, (b) the Trigat anti-tank missile system and (c) the airborne anti-armour weapon after 1990;

(2) whether he intends to continue to procure (a) the Foxhunter AI 24 radar and (b) the MLRS system after 1990.

Mr. Alan Clark: As I said to the hon. Member for Meirionnydd Nant Conwy (Dr. Thomas) on 13 December 1989 at column 685, we keep our investment in all weapons systems under constant review.

Manpower

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what consideration has been given to reducing the number of infantry battalions; and to what figure;

(2) what consideration has been given to reducing the number of surface fleet escorts; and to what figure;

(3) what assessment has been made of possible increases in the size of (a) the Parachute Regiment and (b) the Royal Marines.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Government remain committed to the strong defence of the United Kingdom and to meeting our NATO and out-of-area obligations and our future plans will reflect this aim. We have made it clear that the future structure of our armed forces will need to take account of international developments, including arms control. As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has stated, we are examining options for change.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent examination of future levels of civilian staff employed by his Department has taken place.

Mr. Alan Clark: The levels of personnel employed by the Department, both service and civilian, are regularly monitored. Future staff levels are considered annually during the formulation of the long-term costing.

Shatterproof Glass

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the restrictions placed on capital spending by his Department include the programme for the installation of shatterproof glass on buildings; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Ministry of Defence has put in hand a £126 million programme of security enhancements specifically to counter terrorism. Some of this additional expenditure has been allocated to the provision of shatterproof window film. There has been no curtailment of this programme of enhancements.

Helicopters

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has any proposals to increase the number of helicopter flying hours per month for the Army in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It is not the practice to comment on operational matters. However, I can assure my hon. Friend that such matters are kept under constant review.

Service Pay, Northern Ireland

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give details of the annual pay rates for (a) an Ulster Defence Regiment private, permanent cadre, after two years' service, (b) an Ulster Defence Regiment private, part-time after two years' service and (c) a Regular Army private with two years' service serving in Northern Ireland on (a) six-month tour and (b) two-year posting.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Direct comparisons between the Ulster Defence Regiment (permanent cadre) pay structure and that of the Regular Army are difficult although neither pay scale provides for extra pay after two years' service as a matter of course. All Service men in Northern Ireland receive Northern Ireland additional pay when serving in Northern Ireland at the rate of £3·16 per day with effect from 1 April 1990 and £3·20 per day from 1 January 1991.

Illustrative annual rates of pay for private soldiers who are likely to have two years' service are as follows:

With effect from:	1 April 1990 £	1 January 1991 £
UDR (Permanent cadre)
Private, A, Scale B	9,241·80	9,541·10
Regular Army (Infantry)
Private, Class 1, Band 1, Scale B	8,705·25	8,946·15

Note: UDR private A and Regular Army private class 1 are both broadly equivalent in that they represent the most highly qualified in their rank and job.

There is no difference in basic pay between soldiers serving in Northern Ireland for six months and those for two-year periods.

A private soldier in the part-time element of the UDR will, after two years' service, receive pay at the rate of £22·30 per day. Service in the UDR (part-time) carries a minimum training/operational requirement and the amount of annual pay received will, therefore, depend on the actual number of days attended by each soldier.

In addition to pay, a soldier who completes the minimum obligatory training/duty and fulfils a number of other criteria, may qualify for payment of an annual bounty. Current rates are £565 on satisfactory completion of the second year of service and £800 for the third and subsequent years.

Disciplinary Proceedings

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service personnel have been subject to disciplinary proceedings for participation in anti-poll tax activities; what charges were laid and what sentences imposed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: As far as we are aware, no service personnel have been subject to disciplinary proceedings as a result of anti-community charge activities. Service personnel may express their views as private individuals on matters such as the community charge provided their actions are lawful and do not contravene service regulations.

Genetically Modified Organisms

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will outline his policy in respect of the development and release of genetically modified organisms.

Mr. Neubert: It is not the Department's policy to release to the atmosphere any genetically modified organisms which may be developed in relation to research which underpins chemical and biological defence.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether any releases of genetically modified organisms have taken place from establishments under his Department's control.

Mr. Neubert: No.

Biological Warfare

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he has made an assessment of the offensive capability of genetically manipulated biological warfare and toxin warfare agents; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will list those bacteria he is still considering as potential putative agents;

(3) what is the purpose of his Department's work with Q fever; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neubert: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave to his question on 23 April 1990 at column 76.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the dangers to personnel from working with genetically manipulated biological warfare and toxin warfare agents; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neubert: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave to his question on 23 April 1990 at column 76.

In the handling of any materials in these categories, the Department follows the strict assessment criteria and protocols advised by the independent advisory committee on genetic manipulation, as well as according with the regulations covering the Control of Substances Hazardous to Health and the Genetic Manipulation Regulations 1989.

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the need of states intending to develop a nuclear weapons capability to conduct nuclear test explosions.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Such matters are kept under review by the Ministry of Defence. However, different countries take different routes to the development of nuclear weapons and it is not possible to generalise regarding the technologies or methods which may be involved.

Beaufort Dyke Sea Dump

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what materials have been dumped by his Department's personnel from any service in the Beaufort Dyke sea dump in each year since 1980; whether any materials from this dump have subsequently been recovered elsewhere; and if he will make a statement on future dumping in this area.

Mr. Neubert: None. My Department has no knowledge of the migration of materials dumped at this site being recovered elsewhere. The MOD has no plans to use Beaufort Dyke for the disposal of any material.

Mr. Colin Wallace

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the relevant papers referred to in the written reply of 30 January, Official Report, column 112, include any papers of the Security Service; and whether representatives of Colin Wallace will be given access to all papers considered by the inquiry.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Mr. Calcutt has access to all papers relevant to his inquiry, and will consider what papers he judges Mr. Wallace and his representatives should see. We shall be guided by his advice.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the Calcutt inquiry announced on 30 January, Official Report, column 112, will be taking evidence from (a) Len Garrett, (b) Sir Peter Leng, (c) Denis Payne, (d) Jeremy Railton, (e) Penny Sadler, (f) Bernard Sheldon or (g) John Waterfield; and whether it will be open to representatives of Colin Wallace to cross-examine witnesses.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: These matters are for Mr. Calcutt.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what response he has made to the letter of Mr. Colin Wallace to him about his statement on the report into how papers were overlooked in the case of Colin Wallace; and if he will put copies of the correspondence in the Library.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My right hon. Friend has received Mr. Wallace's letter of 18 May, which he is considering.

Cash Limits

Mr. Fishburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he can announce any changes to the defence cash limits for 1990-91.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Subject to parliamentary aproval of the necessary summer supplementary estimates, the following changes will be made:

Defence cash limits

Class and Vote	Current cash limit £'000s	Increase/ decrease £'000s	Revised cash limit £'000s
I, 2	8,482,308	+48,900	8,531,208
I, 4	1,875,960	+55,000	1,930,960

These changes total an additional £103,900,000. Of this sum, £110,000,000 is an increase to the defence budget in respect of the special payments to pre-1973 war widows (announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence on 11 December 1989, Official Report, columns 677 and 678). Funding for these special payments was included in supply estimates 1990-91 in class I, vote 3 (as announced on 30 March 1990, Official Report, column 329), but total class I provision was not increased over that announced in the autumn statement and detailed in the public expenditure White Paper (Cm. 1001). These increases will be charged to the reserve and they will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

The changes also take account of a transfer of £6,100,000 to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (class II, vote 2) from class I, vote 2 to cover the provision of military assistance to the Government of Portugal.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research and inquiries his Department is undertaking in respect of bovine spongiform encephalopathy symptoms in (a) cats, (b) mink and (c) other animals.

Mr. Maclean: Following is the reply:

(a) The clinical symptoms of spongiform encephalopathy in cats are being recorded by veterinary clinicians to whom possible cases are presented for examination. The Ministry can provide histopathological diagnosis if requested to do so.

(b) Studies of the transmissibility of BSE to mink are being planned in collaboration with researchers in the USA. The clinical symptoms of the disease in mink will be recorded, should transmission occur.

(c) The Ministry is undertaking research into the clinicopathology of BSE. Information describing the clinical symptoms of the disease has been published.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will take urgent steps to ban the removal of cattle brains from crania by means of a modified paint spray gun that mixes water and compressed air; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will take urgent steps to ban the removal of cattle brains from crania by means of a high-power water jet; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: Cattle which show signs of BSE, or are suspected of having the disease, are slaughtered and do not go for human consumption. The ban on brains and other specified offal is an ultra-precautionary measure applying to clinically healthy animals.

Nevertheless, we are aware of concerns about particular methods of brain removal. Wherever possible, head meat should be removed before the skull is opened. We have conducted studies into the methods employed for removing brains where this is not feasible. These indicate that high-pressure water and/or air jets should not be used as other, more satisfactory, techniques are available. I have asked the Tyrrell committee to review our findings before guidance is issued. I shall consider whether any further action is desirable having regard to the committee's advice. In the meantime, the state veterinary service is ready to give advice if needed.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has instigated any research into the possible connection between bovine spongiform encephalopathy and the chemical reaction between aluminium and organophosphates in the soil; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: Epidemiological studies conducted by the Ministry have found no connection beween BSE and the use of treatments or agricultural chemicals.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the manufacturers that his Department have discovered have supplied contaminated food products to farmers that could cause bovine spongiform encephalopathy in their cattle.

Mr. Maclean: Epidemiological studies have shown that the most likely cause of BSE is the feeding of ruminant rations which included material derived from scrapie-infected sheep.

All such feed used prior to the ruminant feed ban must be considered as a potential vehicle for the agent which caused the disease.

Environmental Payments

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether his Department has given any consideration to supporting the inclusion of environmental payments within the hill livestock compensatory allowance scheme.

Mr. Maclean: My right hon. Friend the Minister announced in the House on 30 January at column 160 that, following changes in the European Community regulation, we would see whether the significant contribution that hill livestock compensatory allowances already provide in terms of environmental benefits should be made more specific. This work is proceeding.

Sheep Variable Premium

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food by what date he intends to announce the termination of the sheep variable premium.

Mr. Maclean: We are currently consulting interested organisations on the phasing-out of the sheep variable premium scheme which, under the terms of the reformed EC sheepmeat regime, must end by the beginning of the 1993 marketing year at the latest. I am well aware of the need to give good notice of any changes to the arrangements.

Lambs

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if his Department will launch an independent assessment scheme for lambs under the Meat and Livestock Commission to ensure orderly marketing and an effective price reporting system.

Mr. Maclean: The Meat and Livestock Commission currently undertakes extensive price reporting activities as part of its involvement in the administration of the sheep variable premium scheme. Under the reformed EC sheepmeat regime, this scheme will be phased out by the beginning of the 1993 marketing year at the latest. New price reporting arrangements will be introduced under the reformed regime, but the EC Commission is yet to come forward with specific proposals. It will be our objective to ensure that the new arrangements are effective.

Milk Quotas

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will introduce a scheme to enable young farmers to lease milk quota allocation from the Government.

Mr. Curry: As the Minister said in his reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Torridge and Devon, West (Miss Nicholson) on 2 April at column 447, we had hoped to introduce a scheme to loan milk quota to new entrants, but the Commission ruled that there is at present no basis in Community law for such a scheme. It was unwilling to propose the necessary changes at this time but may be prepared to consider the possibility of helping young farmers in this way in the context of the general review of the quota system due next year. We shall be pressing it to do so.

Straw and Stubble Burning

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his policy in respect of exemptions to the proposed general ban on straw and stubble burning; and if he has made an estimate of what percentage of material burnt in 1989 will be permitted to be burnt after the general ban comes into force.

Mr. Maclean: Exemptions to the proposed ban will be made by order and will be strictly limited. They may be either permanent, for example for linseed, a crop residue which is extremely difficult to incorporate in the soil, or temporary, applying only in particularly difficult seasons in particular areas and possibly restricted to particular crop residues, in circumstances when I am satisfied that there is no practical alternative to burning. It is impossible to forecast when the combinations of circumstances might arise that would justify the granting of such exemptions.

Hunting Hounds

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) how many hunting hounds are known to have died from ataxia for each of the last 10 years;

(2) what research he has undertaken to establish the reasons for the increase in deaths of hunting hounds from hound ataxia; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: Since ataxia in hunting hounds is not a notifiable disease, no official statistics are available on deaths resulting from it.

The Department is not currently undertaking any research into hound ataxia.

Arctic Foxes

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food where he obtained the 1987 figures for the numbers of Arctic fox factory farms in England and Wales.

Mr. Maclean: Information on fur farms was collected in 1987 from representatives of the industry for the reviews of the 1982 mink and coypu keeping orders.

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will enact similar provisions to those in the Northern Ireland Arctic Fox Keeping Order for the rest of the United Kingdom.

Mr. Maclean: The Ministry is considering whether controls on the keeping of destructive non-indigenous animals should be extended to Arctic fox and other species. A long and expensive campaign has saved the Broads from destruction by the coypu and we would not want another destructive pest species to escape and become established in Britain.

Research and Development

Mr. Andy Stewart: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has received the third report from the Priorities Board for Research and Development in Agriculture and Food; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: The Priorities Board for Research and Development in Agriculture and Food has submitted its third report to the Agriculture Ministers and to the chairman of the Agricultural and Food Research Council. We greatly appreciate the work which Dr. Brian Smith and the members of the board have put into their report.

The report gives advice to the sponsors about future resource allocations and priorities for the publicly funded agricultural and food research and development effort as a whole. It also discusses a number of matters related to the research and development programme. The board supports the Government's aims to encourage industry to take a greater responsibility for funding near market research and development. This will produce changes to the balance and content of the sponsors' research programmes, which the board has taken into account in making its recommendations on future resource allocations. These changes have also persuaded the board to reclassify the Government's agricultural and food research programme into four categories: natural resources, plants, animals and food. The report recommends that the allocation of expenditure to each sector should be as follows:

	Per cent.
Natural resources	12
Plants	34·5
Food	15

The sponsors are agreed that, subject to a full consideration of the resource implications, the recommendations should guide the allocation of resources to the future research and development programme. Discussions will be held between the sponsors to plan the implementation of the recommendations.

The sponsors have also agreed that the report should be published. This is now being arranged and advance copies are being placed in the Library of the House.

Agriculture Council

Mr. Butler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the Brussels Agriculture Council held on 21 and 22 May.

Mr. Curry: I represented the United Kingdom at this meeting.

I drew attention to the need for the Community to prepare for the agricultural consequences of German monetary union on 2 July and of German unification thereafter. The Commission undertook to make proposals as appropriate and to put forward a report for the next meeting of the Council.

At my suggestion, it was agreed that the potential consequences for agriculture of the draft proposal to protect water from nitrate pollution currently before the Environment Council should be assessed and reported on by agricultural experts. This will help the Environment Council to reach informed decisions on this matter.

On foot and mouth disease a large majority of member states indicated that they were now prepared to harmonise controls on the basis of a slaughter policy, as currently applied in the United Kingdom, rather than a vaccination policy, as currently applied in most continental member states. This represents a significant step towards resolving satisfactorily one potentially difficult problem posed by the single European market.

Ewe Premium

Mr. Amos: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will announce the final rate of ewe premium for the 1989 scheme.

Mr. Curry: I am pleased to say that the European Commission has now set the final rate of ewe premium for the 1989 scheme. The rates per eligible ewe are £6·94 in Great Britain and £12·78 in Northern Ireland, and £5·55 for those animals (Herdwicks and specified breeds of untupped gimmers in parts of Scotland) for which there are special arrangements and which would not otherwise qualify for premium. Producers in less-favoured areas who have already received an advance payment will now be paid the balance, while producers in other areas will receive the full final rate. Payments will be made as soon as possible. The 1989 premium will be worth in total around £140 million to United Kingdom sheep producers, which represents a very significant input to the sheep industry.

Cash Limits

Mr. Andy Stewart: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether it is intended to change the cash limit on any departmental vote for which he has responsibility.

Mr. Curry: Yes. Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class III, vote 4 (other agricultural and food services and support for the fishing industry) will be increased by £2,411,000 from £154,960,000 to £157,371,000 to make provision for payments to the British Society for Horticultural Research. The increase will be fully offset by a corresponding reduction to the cash limit for class III, vote 5 from £287,507,000 to £285,096,000 and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure. The Department's running costs limit will be decreased by £795,000 from £292,837,000 to £292,042,000.

As I announced to the House on 17 October 1989 at column 97, the British Society for Horticultural Research will carry out commissioned research and development on behalf of the Ministry. This work will be funded from class III, vote 4. The reduction in expenditure for class III, vote 5 reflects the savings accruing from the consequential reduction of in-house research and development, and increased receipts for this vote cover the attachment of Ministry staff and facilities to the BSHR.

Furs (Factory Farming)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has made an assessment of the implications for animal welfare of the procedures carried out in factory farming for furs.

Mr. Maclean: The Farm Animal Welfare Council has undertaken an assessment of fur farming and made a statement of its findings on 4 April 1989.

In addition, officers of the state veterinary service make visits to fur farmes as they do to other livestock farms to undertake welfare inspections. At these visits, the accommodation and management practices are taken into account when assessing the welfare of the animals.

Food Standards Agency

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will set up an independent food standards agency.

Mr. Maclean: I have no plans to do so.

Crown Estates Commission

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will introduce legislation to require the Crown Estates Commission to publish minutes of all meetings and publish all working papers which lead to major policy decisions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: I have been asked to reply.

No. I am satisfied that the provisions of the Crown Estate Act 1961 provide the necessary level of accountability for the Crown Estate Commissioners.

Beef

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will agree to meet representatives from Mid Glamorgan county council to discuss the consumption of beef.

Mr. David Hunt: I have been asked to reply.

My Department has sent detailed information on this matter to the council. That information is both comprehensive and clear, and there is no need for such a meeting.

Tuesday 5 June 1990

NORTHERN IRELAND

Old Cross, Newtownards

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the restoration scheme of the Old Cross, Newtownards is completed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The work was completed on 30 May 1990.

Anglo-Irish Agreement (Secretariat)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what nationality the present head of the British delegation at the Anglo-Irish Agreement secretariat at Maryfield has.

Mr. Brooke: The present head of the British side of the Anglo-Irish secretariat is a British citizen, as are all other members of the British side.

Aliens

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many aliens are currently registered with the Royal Ulster Constabulary under the Immigration (Registration with Police) Regulations 1972, as amended.

Mr. Cope: A total of 552 as at 24 May 1990.

Wetlands

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether, with regard to the Ramsar convention on the conservation of wetlands of international importance, Her Majesty's Government are required to designate sites under the Nature Conservation and Amenity Lands Order 1985 prior to designation under the Ramsar convention.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: It is not a requirement of the Ramsar convention that wetland sites of international importance should be designated under the Nature Conservation and Amenity Lands (Northern Ireland) Order 1985 prior to designation under the Ramsar convention. It is United Kingdom Government policy to declare Ramsar sites after the areas have been given full protection under domestic legislation.

Development (Castlereagh East)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many development projects are under construction without final planning permission in the electoral area of Castlereagh East; on what date each case came to his attention; on what date he made representations to each offending developer; and what action he has proposed in each case.

Mr. Needham: None.

Grant-aided Schools

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many schools in Northern Ireland are grant-aided.

Dr. Mawhinney: A total of 1,344.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many schools in Northern Ireland do not receive grant aid; and on what grounds these schools fail to qualify for grant aid.

Dr. Mawhinney: There are presently 19 independent schools registered with the Department of Education. These schools have been established outside the grant-aided system and so, by definition, do not receive assistance from public funds. The question of failing to qualify for grant aid does not therefore arise.

North Eastern Education and Library Board

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish relevant references to the North Eastern education and library board from the Roy report into the financial end of maintenance.

Dr. Mawhinney: I assume that the hon. Gentleman is referring to the report of the examination in late 1985 into practices and procedures in the engineering section of the North Eastern education and library board's architect's department. This report was commissioned by the board and presented to the board in 1985. The question of publication is therefore a matter for the board.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Anton Piller Orders

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Attorney-General whether he has any plans to review and propose amendments to the operation of Anton Piller orders; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: Clause 3 of the Courts and Legal Services Bill will allow a county court to make any order available in the High Court, subject to prescribed exceptions; but the Lord Chancellor intends to bring forward regulations under this clause in general restricting the power to grant Anton Piller orders to High Court judges.

Departmental Savings

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Attorney-General what were the value-for-money savings in the Law Officers' Department's operations identified by internal audit and internal efficiency arrangements and by external audit and by management consultants retained by his Department between 1983-84 and 1988-89; and what is the amount of those savings fulfilled to date.

The Attorney-General: In the Treasury Solicitor's Department and the legal secretariat to the Law Officers the improvements resulting from inquiries and studies of the kind the hon. Gentleman mentions are taken into account in the setting of annual budgets and internal targets.

The Crown prosecution service was not created until 1986-87 and up to 1988-89 audit and consultants were mainly concerned with the setting up of effective systems for the service. Value-for-money savings identified and achieved on total running cost expenditure of £90 million in 1988-89 were small, but included purchasing savings estimated at £210,000.

The Serious Fraud Office became fully operational only in April 1988, and no such savings had been specifically identified during the period ending 31 March 1989.

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Attorney-General what mechanisms exist in the Law Officers' Departments for identifying and tracking value-for-money savings in their operations.

The Attorney-General: In the Treasury Solicitor's Department and the legal secretariat to the Law Officers the mechanisms for identifying and tracking value-for-money savings include internal audit and staff inspection. In the Crown prosecution service they include internal audit, staff inspection, a system of performance indicators, returns from operational areas to HQ for public expenditure survey and estimates purposes, investment appraisal of information technology and capital projects, purchasing information systems, and monitoring by a new field directorate.

The Serious Fraud Office became fully operational only in April 1988, and work is still in progress to develop performance indicators and other work measurement procedures to assist in identifying and achieving value-for-money savings.

THE ARTS

Public Libraries

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Minister for the Arts if he has any plans to increase funding of public libraries.

Mr. Luce: The Government do not plan local authority spending on public libraries or on other services. Revenue support grant is paid in support of local authorities revenue expenditure generally. Within the "Other Services" block, local authorities estimate a total spend on public libraries of £488 million in 1990-91, an estimated increase of 4 per cent. over 1989-90.

Cryptogramic Botany

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Minister of the Arts (1) if he will publish in the Official Report the remit of the diatom section of the department of cryptogramic botany in the British Museum (Natural History);

(2) what assessment he has made of the consequences for current work on atmospheric pollution of the closure of the diatom section of the department of cryptogramic botany of the British Museum (Natural History);

(3) if he will list the recent research achievements of the publications produced by the diatom section of the department of cryptogramic botany in the British Museum (Natural History).

Mr. Luce: I understand that there has never been a separate department of cryptogramic botany at the Natural History Museum, but always a single department of botany. I am also informed that future work on diatoms is planned as follows:

(a) Curation. Maintaining the collections and making them available to research workers worldwide. The museum recognises that it holds the finest collection of diatoms in the world, and it is vital that it is available for use by workers undertaking both environmental studies and basic research.

(b) Advisory Services. Assistance will continue to be given to researchers requiring advice on identification and associated literature.

(c) Research. Within the overall umbrella of the science departments, research on all protista (including diatoms) will be continued, but with a remit to examine inter-relationships between the different members of the group, to undertake marine stratigraphical analysis and to provide taxonomic information for the assessment of water quality in relation to ground-water studies and sewage treatment.

In addition, I understand that work on atmospheric pollution has been undertaken primarily in universities and has concentrated on examining the acidification of freshwater bodies. The Natural History Museum has acted either in an advisory capacity or has made the collections available for examination. The museum will continue to support such activities.

I understand that recent achievements in diatom research have been predominately taxonomic, including descriptions of new species and revisions at the family and generic level. This has included the development of new approaches to evolutionary studies of diatoms based on the interpretation of molecular data, which has indicated new ways of examining fundamental questions regarding the protista. This work is being expanded into a more general review of phylogeny of the group.

I detail in the table the 53 publications produced by the Natural History Museum diatom section since 1985.

British Library

Sir Hal Miller: To ask the Minister for the Arts what is to be the future of the new British Library at St. Pancras.

Mr. Luce: I announced yesterday that the exercise to design a concluding phase to the new British Library building at St. Pancras within £90 million at 1988 prices has been successfully achieved. Construction of some elements of the completion phase will commence almost immediately and the whole will be ready for occupation in 1996.

Included in the design is a magnificent new setting for George III's "King's Library" in a six storey glass-fronted bookcase set in the focal point of the building, where it will be visible from all sides. A model and artist's impressions of the completed building will be on display in the summer exhibition of the Royal Academy. For the next few months, there will also be an exhibition in the portico of the building at the St. Pancras site.

The authorised cost of the completion phase will in cash terms be about £150 million, which includes allowances for inflation. Together with the £300 million already authorised for the first phase of the building currently under construction, this will bring the total cost of the British Library project to about £450 million. This clearly demonstrates the Government's continued dedication to excellence in the arts. The funding of the new British Library at St. Pancras does not have any effect on Government funding of the remainder of the arts.

The British Library will start to move books into the basement bookstacks at St. Pancras by the middle of 1991, the first reading room will open in early 1993 and the first phase of the building will be operational by the middle of 1993. The completed building will be fully operational by mid-1996 and the board of the British Library has confirmed that it will meet the library's key requirements.

Natural History Museum

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister for the Arts what are the admission figures for the Natural History Museum for any convenient period since 1 January.

Mr. Luce [holding answer 23 May 1990]: I am advised that the monthly admission figures for the Natural History Museum since 1 January 1990 are as follows:-

	Number
January	86,200
February	153,000
March	103,000
April	128,000

Gelman Collection

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Minister for the Arts what assessment he has made of the possibility of the Gelman collection currently on show at the Royal Academy staying in Britain.

Mr. Luce [holding answer 24 May 1990]: I understand from the Royal Academy, which has been responsible for the arrangement for the current exhibition, that the Gelman collection has proved to be very popular and will be shown until 15 July. I was pleased to cover the insurance requirements under my Government indemnity scheme. Any further arrangements will, of course, be a matter for the owner of the collection, Mrs. Gelman.

CIVIL SERVICE

Agencies

Mr. Knapman: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service whether there have been any additions to the list of candidates for agency status in the last five months.

Mr. Luce: During the last five months two new activities, social security contributions and the Chessington computer centre, have been added to the list of candidates for agency status. In the same period 21 candidates from the list have been set up as agencies. There are now 31 established agencies and 24 announced candidates. The project manager will continue to work with Departments to identify other suitable candidates.

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service if there have been any new agencies set up since he last reported to the House; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Luce: I am pleased to announce that since I last reported to the House the Ordnance Survey has been launched as an executive agency. This brings the total set up to 31, covering nearly 70,000 staff.

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service when he expects that the current list of candidates for agency status will have been converted into agencies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Luce: Target dates for the establishment of announced candidates as executive agencies are a matter for the Minister concerned. However, generally we continue to make good progress in implementing this initiative and I would expect that by the end of 1991 "next steps" will have been applied to at least half the civil service.

Departmental Savings

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service what mechanisms exist in the OMCS for identifying and tracking value-for-money savings in its operations.

Mr. Luce: The search for year-on-year efficiency gains is an integral part of the OMCS annual planning and budgeting exercise. The system also allows for regular monitoring of progress towards targets, and their achievement.

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service what were the value-for-money savings in his Department's operations identified by internal audit and internal efficiency arrangements by external audit and by management consultants retained by his Department between 1983-84 and 1988-89; and what is the amount of those savings fulfilled to date.

Mr. Luce: The identification of value-for-money targets is an integral part of the annual OMCS planning and budgeting exercise even though those targets have not always been expressed in purely financial terms. Value-for-money improvements, including purchasing savings, of £3·015 million have been achieved between 1985-86 and 1988-89, although it is not possible to identify the separate contributions made by each of the means of study mentioned.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Education Conference, Thailand

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement regarding the conclusions made at, and outcome of, the world conference on education for all, held in Thailand on 5 to 9 March.

Mrs. Chalker: The ultimate goal affirmed by the world declaration on education for all is to meet the basic learning needs of all children, youth and adults. Countries have been advised of a variety of interim targets towards this end taking account of local circumstances. The conference was a constructive one with a general emphasis on the importance of the role of education throughout the whole range of social, technical and economic development. The World Bank, the United Nations international children's emergency fund, and the United Nations development programme, to all of which her Majesty's Government are a major contributor, and the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organisation have all agreed to increase support for education especially at the basic level.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what commitment Her Majesty's Government have made towards achieving the goals of basic primary education for every child, and reducing worldwide levels of illiteracy in response to the world conference on education for all held in Thailand in March; what is the current funding for such goals; and what intention there is to increase funding for these purposes.

Mrs. Chalker: In addition to the use of its contributions to the World Bank, the United Nations international children's emergency fund and the United Nations development programme, Her Majesty's Government are ready to respond to the wishes of developing country Governments, who are themselves responsible for deciding the priority they wish to give to expenditure on basic education in relation to other priorities they may have.

In 1988, the latest year for which final figures are available, £6·5 million of capital aid from our bilateral aid programme was spent on education, with £1·1 million specifically on primary education. In the same year further expenditure on technical co-operation (for example staff, training and books) and including some £45 million provided to the British Council, was about £95 million, with £2·6 million specifically for primary education and adult literacy. Help given across the whole spectrum of education by, for example, the provision of key personnel in a Ministry of Education, will have a considerable effect on individual sectors. It is likely that the consequences of the conference on education for all will, by encouraging developing country Governments to give higher priority to basic education, enable us to expand more easily our bilateral support for primary education and adult literacy programmes, the latter with a particular emphasis on education for women.

Tropical Forestry Action Plan

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the tropical forestry action plan was last reviewed at a meeting of Economic Community Development Ministers; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: On 29 May, European Community Development Ministers discussed the preservation, rehabilitation and sustainable development of tropical forests, including the role of the tropical forestry action plan. The final resolution welcomed the review of the TFAP now under way, and at my suggestion was amended to ensure that at a future meeting Ministers will consider the results of the review and how the TFAP can be made more effective.

PRIME MINISTER

Cyprus

Q75. Mr. Cox: To ask the Prime Minister what plans she has to meet the Prime Minister of Greece to discuss the current situation in Cyprus.

The Prime Minister: I reviewed the situation in Cyprus with Mr. Mitsotakis, the Prime Minister of Greece, during his working visit to London on 16 May.

European Council

Q147. Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Prime Minister what issues she intends to raise at the next meeting of the European Council; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I expect discussion of a range of issues, including developments in eastern and central Europe, the 1992 single market programme, institutional questions, and co-operation on drugs and the environment.

Engagements

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 5 June.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 5 June.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 5 June.

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today. This evening I hope to have an audience of Her Majesty the Queen.

Secretary of State for Energy

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list the full duties of the Secretary of State for Energy in April 1990; and what additional responsibilities have now been given to him.

The Prime Minister: In April 1990 the Secretary of State for Energy had overall responsibility for the work of the Department of Energy. He now has additional responsibility for co-ordinating the development of the presentation of Government policies.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Prime Minister what are to be the new cross-departmental co-ordination functions of the Secretary of State for Energy; how many civil servants will assist him in this work; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the right hon. Member for Swansea, West (Mr. Williams) on 24 May at column 286.

Plutonium

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Prime Minister whether there have been any periods of defence plutonium production subsequent to that mentioned in her reply to the right hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Ashdown) of 19

February 1985, Official Report, columns 406-07; and whether the policy outlined in her answer continues to be that of Her Majesty's Government.

The Prime Minister: The policy of Her Majesty's Government remains unchanged. Production of plutonium for defence purposes is kept at the minimum level required to meet defence needs. It would not be in the national interest to give details.

Tobacco

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Prime Minister if she will raise at the next meeting of the European Council the sums being expended by the European Economic Community on the growth and export of high-tar tobacco.

The Prime Minister: The Government are concerned at the grave consequences on health of smoking cigarettes and other forms of tobacco both in Europe and in the Third world.

We have long been critical of the Community's CAP tobacco regime. We have consistently argued that support for this crop should be reduced. We were successful in securing the introduction in 1988 of measures to reduce expenditure and discourage the production of the less-marketable and higher-tar varieties, for example through the stabiliser mechanism. Further reductions in support for certain of the less marketable varieties were agreed in this year's price-fixing negotiations.

Our objective is less production, reduced intervention and less subsidised export of the higher-tar varieties. We shall take every opportunity to continue to pursue this policy in future negotiations.

Advisers

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Prime Minister if she will introduce legislation to provide opposition parties with funds for the payment of advisers comparable with those sums spent by the Cabinet Office on advisers who are not career civil servants.

The Prime Minister: No. Opposition parties are already given financial assistance for support in respect of their parliamentary duties.

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Prime Minister what restrictions exist on the spending of public money on prime ministerial advisers who are not career civil servants; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: Such costs, like the other costs of my office, are kept under close scrutiny and are restricted to what is necessary.

Workplace Nurseries

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Prime Minister how many whole-time equivalent civil servants are currently employed; and how many whole-time equivalent workplace nursery places are currently provided for children of civil servants.

The Prime Minister: On 1 October 1989, the latest date for which figures are available, there were 565,075 whole-time civil servants. On 20 March this year the Department of Social Security opened a workplace nursery in Hertford which offers 12 whole-time places. Six more nurseries are expected to open later this year.

Energy Consumption

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Prime Minister if she will give the number of dedicated energy managers in the Cabinet Office and the number of person years devoted to energy management in the latest year.

The Prime Minister: In most buildings occupied by the Cabinet Office other Departments are the main occupiers and have their own staff responsible for energy management within the building. The Cabinet Office itself has one part-time energy manager.

Mr. Frank Dobson: To ask the Prime Minister if she will give the number of energy audits carried out in the Cabinet Office in the last five years and for each audit a statement of its main conclusions.

The Prime Minister: No energy audits have so far been undertaken, but three are currently under consideration for buildings where the Cabinet Office is the major occupier.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Prime Minister if he will give for each year from 1978 the energy consumption, broken down by fuel, of the buildings occupied by the Cabinet Office, expressing the figures in (a) cash terms, (b) 1978-79 money terms and (c) units of consumption for electricity in kilowatt hours, gas in therms, liquid fuel in litres and solid fuel in tonnes.

The Prime Minister: The figures requested are available only in cash and 1978-79 money terms and only for the following years:

	Electricity £	Gas £	Liquid Fuel £
1987-88	268,523	74,797	56,511
	1	(36,454)	1
1988-89	294,485	53,904	39,906
	1	(24,525)	(18,156)
1989-90	295,126	56,575	[2]42,000
	1	1	1

[1] Denotes 1978-79 money terms.
[2] Estimate.

Mr. Colin Wallace

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister when she expects to reply to the letter to her, dated 23 April, from Mr. Colin Wallace, on Clockwork Orange.

The Prime Minister: A reply has been sent on my behalf.

Departmental Savings

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Prime Minister what were the value-for-money savings in operations identified by internal audit and internal efficiency arrangements, by external audit and by management consultants retained by her office between 1983-84 and 1988-89; and what was the amount of those savings fulfilled to date.

The Prime Minister: The information for my office is not held separately, but is contained in the overall figure for the office of the Minister for the Civil Service. The identification of value-for-money targets is an integral part of the annual OMCS planning and budgeting exercise even though those targets have not always been expressed in purely financial terms. Value-for-money improvements including purchasing savings, of £3·015 million have been achieved between 1985-86 and 1988-89, although it is not possible to identify the separate contributions made by each of the means of study mentioned.

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Prime Minister what mechanisms exist in (a) her office and (b) the Cabinet Office for identifying and tracking value-for-money savings in their operations.

The Prime Minister: The search for year-on-year efficiency gains is an integral part of the planning and budgeting system in both my office and the Cabinet Office. The system also allows for regular monitoring of progress towards targets, and their achievements.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Balance of Payments

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what is his estimate of the long-term and short-term capital account of the balance of payments deficit;

(2) if he will include in the balance of payments figure either monthly or quarterly the long-term capital account deficit;

(3) if he will make available to hon. Members figures on the long and short-term capital account deficit when they are available to the Treasury; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The available information on the main categories of financial transaction in the capital account of the balance of payments are published regularly each quarter by the Central Statistical Office in the balance of payments press notice and in Economic Trends; both publications are available in the Library. It is not particularly meaningful to distinguish between long-term and short-term capital flows.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the relative impact on exchange rates and the balance of payments of (a) capital flows and (b) trade flows; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont: In the absence of measurement error, capital flows and flows on the current account necessarily sum to zero. The effects, if any, of such flows on the exchange rate will depend on present and expected future policies.

Balance of Payments

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of the deficit on the basic balance of the balance of payments.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The available information on the United Kingdom balance of payments, covering both the current account and the main categories of financial transactions in the capital account, is published in the Central Statistical Office's quarterly press notice on the balance of payments and in Economic Trends, both of which are available in the Library. The concept of a basic balance is not particularly meaningful.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the total private sector deficit accumulated since 1979 because of trade imbalance on the balance of payments.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Figures relating to the private sector and public corporations in respect of the balance of invisibles are published in tables A4 (trade in services and investment income) and A7 (transfers) of Economic Trends, March 1990 (pages 82 and 87), which is available in the Library. With the exception of defence equipment (mainly imported), most of visible trade (table A2 of the above publication) is undertaken mainly by the private sector and public corporations.

Investment Levels

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the level of manufacturing investment was in the first quarter of the current year.

Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the level of manufacturing investment was in the first quarter of 1990.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The provisional estimate of manufacturing investment in the first quarter of 1990 is £3,091 million, at 1985 prices and seasonally adjusted. This is 1 per cent. higher than the previous quarter and 9 per cent. higher than the first quarter of 1989.

Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last met the Confederation of British Industry; and whether levels of investment were discussed.

Mr. Norman Lamont: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor addressed the CBI's annual dinner on 17 May at which a range of subjects were discussed. This speech referred to the record rise in investment over the last three years, which he naturally welcomed. While he recognised the difficulties of the current slowdown in demand and output, he took the opportunity to urge British business to invest wherever it can.

European Monetary System

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to assess potential effects on British exports to the European Community of full membership of the European monetary system.

Mr. Norman Lamont: We will join the ERM when the Government's conditions have been met. All the potential effects of membership are, of course, kept under review.

Manufacturing Exports

Mr. Amos: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what were the United Kingdom manufacturing export figures for the last two years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Exports of manufactured goods on a balance of payments basis for the past two years were:

	£ billion
1989	75·2

Exports of manufactures have continued to grow strongly in 1990: in the first quarter they were 15 per cent. higher by value than in the same quarter a year earlier.

Manufacturers' Output Prices

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the causes of the increase in manufacturers' output prices during 1989 and of the effect of the price rises on the economy.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The increase in manufacturers' output prices reflects exceptional growth of demand over the last two years. Inflation damages the economy by increasing uncertainty, discouraging investment, and reducing profitability. It undermines industrial relations and reduces confidence in the management of the economy, at home and abroad. The Government's tight monetary and fiscal policy will ensure that inflation falls.

Non-North Sea GDP

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of non-North sea money, gross domestic product, non-North sea taxes, national insurance contributions and the poll tax represented in 1989-90; and what is the planned proportion in 1990-91.

Mr. Norman Lamont: It is estimated that non-North sea taxes, national insurance contributions and community charge in 1989-90 amounted to 36¾ per cent. of non-North sea GDP (adjusted to remove the distortion due to the abolition of domestic rates). The Budget forecast for the comparable figure in 1990-91 is 37 per cent.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Grocott: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many staff are employed by his Department; and what proportion of them are employed in each of the standard regions.

Mr. Ryder: The number of industrial and non-industrial staff employed by the Treasury (including the Civil Service Catering Organisation) totalled 3,181 on 1 April 1989. The proportion employed in each standard region is as follows:

	Per cent
South-East	81·8
South-West	3·7
West Midlands	0·4
North-West	1·5
Northern	0·7
Yorkshire and Humberside	0·7
East Midlands	0·3
East Anglia	5·8
Wales	1·9
Scotland	3·0
Northern Ireland	0·0

Exchange Rate Mechanism

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects the Madrid conditions for exchange rate mechanism participation to be satisfied.

Mr. Ryder: I refer the hon. Member to the answer my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer gave to the hon. Member for Birkenhead (Mr. Field) on 26 April, Official Report, column 475.

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent discussions he has had with European Community Governments concerning United Kingdom entry into the exchange rate mechanism of the European monetary system.

Mr. Ryder: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer regularly discusses a wide range of economic matters with European Community Governments.

Income Tax

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish his estimates of the number of individuals presently paying income tax in (a) England and (b) Wales.

Mr. Lilley: The estimated number of individuals resident in England and liable to income tax is 20·4 million for 1987-88, the latest available year. The corresponding estimate for Wales is 940,000. Married women are included where their earned income exceeds the wife's earned income allowance and any personal allowances and reliefs unused against the husband's income.

Sir David Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of the percentage of the population of the United Kingdom who do not pay any income tax.

Mr. Lilley: In 1990-91 it is estimated that about 45 per cent. of those aged 18 and over in the United Kingdom are not liable to pay income tax. Some may, however, receive interest on deposits in banks and building society accounts on which non-reclaimable composite rate tax has been paid. The estimate is based on a projection of the 1987-88 survey of personal income and is provisional.

Trading and Capital Account Deficit

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how the total trading and capital account deficit which has accumulated since 1979 has been financed.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The available information on the current account (trade in goods and services, investment income and transfers) and on the capital account (transactions in external financial assets and liabilities) of the balance of payments are given in table A1 of Economic Trends, March 1990 (page 79), a copy of which is in the Library.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the total deficit accumulated since 1979 because of capital account deficits on the balance of payments.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The available information on the capital account of the balance of payments (transactions in external financial assets and liabilities) is given in table A8 of Economic Trends, March 1990 (page 88), a copy of which is in the Library.

Contract Cleaners

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what have been the average wages of service contract cleaners for each of the past 10 years.

Mr. Ryder: The average rate for those on contract to Government Departments is a matter for the contractor concerned and will depend on a number of factors.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has received the NUCPS report entitled, "Contract Cleaners—the Lowest Paid"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder: The NUCPS report "Contract Cleaners—the Lowest Paid" has not yet reached the Treasury.

Taxation (Savings)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list all those taxes which apply to savings with the tax take in each case for the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Lilley: The tax liability in 1990-91 on investment income received by individual savers, including interest received on bank and building society accounts, national savings and dividends received from companies, is estimated at £10·5 billion. Tax reliefs on debt interest, for example mortgage interest relief, are excluded.

Other taxes relevant to savings are capital gains tax, inheritance tax and stamp duty. Forecasts of receipts in 1990-91 for each of these taxes are in table 1·2 of the 1990-91 Financial Statement and Budget Report. Not all these yields are derived from savings.

Mortgage Tax Relief

Mr. Paice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what he estimates would be the cost to the Treasury of providing tax relief for first-time buyers on their mortgages at double the present rate of relief, at current prices.

Mr. Lilley: I regret that information on mortgage interest relief for first-time buyers is not available.

Mr. Walden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the cost to the Treasury of mortgage tax relief for the years 1987, 1988 and 1989.

Mr. Lilley: Estimates for financial years are as follows:

Year	Value of Mortgage interest relief £ million
1987-88	4,900
[1]1988-89	5,400
[1]1989-90	6,900

[1] Provisional.

Child Benefit

Sir Ian Gilmour: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many working families with children receive more in child benefit than they pay in income tax, distinguishing between two and one-parent families.

Mr. Major: In 1990-91 an estimated 900,000 families with heads in full or part-time employment will receive more in child benefit than they pay in income tax. Almost half the families have insufficient income to be liable to income tax. A total of 600,000 are two-parent families and 300,000 are single parents. Estimates are based on a projection of the 1987 family expenditure survey and are subject to revision.

EC Contributions

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of the total net contributions to the European Economic Community was borne by the United Kingdom in the most recent annual period for which figures are available; and if he will publish a table showing the net contributions or net receipts in respect of each member state.

Mr. Ryder: The "Statement on the 1990 Community Budget" (Cm. 1059) includes an estimate of £2,175 million for the United Kingdom's net contribution to the European Economic Community in 1990. It is not possible to express this amount as a percentage of total net contributions as the net balances of member states will sum to zero after allowance is made for unallocated expenditure (mainly aid and some administration), miscellaneous revenue and budget surpluses.

Comparable information about the net balances of other member states is not available.

Energy Consumption

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give for each year from 1978 the energy consumption, broken down by fuel, of the buildings occupied by his Department, expressing the figures in (a) cash terms, (b) 1978-79 money terms and (c) units of consumption for electricity in kilowatt hours, gas in therms, liquid fuel in litres and solid fuel in tonnes.

Mr. Richard Ryder: I gave the hon. Member the figures for 1989 in current terms in my answers of 30 April, Official Report, column 444, and 14 May, Official Report, column 274. Figures for previous years are not available.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give the number of dedicated energy managers in his Department and the number of person years devoted to energy management in the latest year.

Mr. Ryder: Energy management responsibilities form part of the duties of several officials with the major co-ordinating role being undertaken by a senior executive officer. The total time devoted to these duties is currently estimated to be 0·2 man years per year. This figure is expected to increase.

Tax Evasion

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the amount lost to the Exchequer by tax evasion in each of the main categories of taxation; and what this is expressed as a number of pence on the basic rate of tax.

Mr. Lilley: Reliable estimates of tax lost through evasion are not possible.

Finance Bill

Mr. Hanley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he intends to publish in draft form the regulations provided for in clause 60 of the Finance Bill (capital movements between residents of member states); and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lilley: The Board of Inland Revenue announced in a press release on 19 April 1990 that it was hoped to publish the regulations governing the reporting requirement introduced by clause 60 of the Finance Bill (for certain transactions) shortly. I have today authorised the publication of the draft regulations. The Inland Revenue is issuing a press release giving further details.

South Africa

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has made to the International Monetary Fund about the need for further debt reduction for front-line states in South Africa; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder: My right hon. Friend has made no such representations.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to meet representatives of the front-line South African states to discuss debt reduction.

Mr. Ryder: My right hon. Friend has no plans to meet representatives of the front-line South African states.

Manufacturing Investment

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) at 1989 prices, how much higher or lower manufacturing investment would have been in each year since 1978-79 (a) had the level of 1978-79 been maintained and (b) had the average rate of change from 1974 to 1979 been maintained;

(2) at 1989 prices (a) what manufacturing investment would have been had it maintained 1978-79 levels in each subsequent year, (b) what manufacturing investment would have been in each year since 1978-79 had it changed at the same rate as in (i) Japan, (ii) the United States of America, (iii) West Germany, (iv) France and (v) OECD average level; and (c) what manufacturing investment was in each year since 1978-79.

Mr. Major [holding answer 21 May 1990]: A 1989 constant price series for manufacturing investment is not available. The table provides the available information at 1985 prices.

[1] Source: OECD National Accounts Volume 2 1974-87. The percentage changes are based on figures, at 1980 prices, of gross fixed capital formation by owners engaged in manufacturing. The coverage is therefore not exactly comparable to the United Kingdom figures which differ, in particular, by the inclusion of leased assets.

[2] Figures of gross fixed capital formation in manufacturing are not available for a number of OECD countries. It is not possible to produce average change figures covering the group of countries for which figures are available because all figures are expressed in national currencies.

Civil Service

Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give figures for 1979-80 and each subsequent year on (a) the cost of the civil service and (b) the average cost for each civil servant; and if he will break down the average cost for each civil servant into pay, national insurance, superannuation, and other costs such as office space, heating, lighting, car allowance, travel allowance, etc.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 21 May 1990]: Civil service running costs control was introduced only in 1986-87 and these costs have not been recorded to the level of detail requested. Due to coverage changes, comparable figures prior to 1980-81 are not available, and those for the years prior to 1986-87 have had to be estimated to the nearest £50 million. Table 1 sets out total running costs on current coverage, the number of full-time staff covered and the cost per head for the year indicated.

They exclude staff in trading funds for example HMSO, and other areas now exempted from gross running cost control (Cm. 1021 Ch. 21.3.16 refers). Although most of the armed forces are also outside running costs, those personnel engaged in headquarters and support activities are included.

Table 2 shows the average man-year cost for the years from 1986-87 when casual staff and overtime are added, and analyses the cost by major components.

Public Sector Labour Costs

Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give the latest figures available for the total annual cost and the average annual cost of full-time equivalent posts in (a) the National Health Service, (b) the civil service, (c) local government and (d) all remaining public sector work forces, including nationalised industries; and if he will break down the average cost for a full-time equivalent post into pay, national insurance, superannuation and other costs.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 21 May 1990]: Figures for the total annual cost and the average annual cost of full-time equivalent posts in the civil service, together with an analysis of average civil service man-year costs is given in another question tabled by my hon. Friend which I am also answering today. Comparable information for the National Health Service, local government and all remaining public sector work forces is not available.

The CSO publication "United Kingdom National Accounts" shows expenditure on income from employment (wages and salaries, including employers' contributions to national insurance and superannuation) for local authorities and public corporations in table 2·5. For the National Health Service this information is shown under "Health" in table 9·4.

Information on the number of employees on a full-time equivalent basis in each sector is given in an article in Economic Trends, December 1989 edition.

Any broad averages of per capita remuneration costs derived from these sources must be interpreted with great caution. Cost and employment figures are subject to differences in definition and coverage.

Public Appointments

Mr. Grocott: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the full-time and part-time public appointments for which he is responsible, together with the salary and the date when each appointment is due for renewal.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 23 May 1990]: Details of appointments made by the Treasury are published annually in "Public Bodies" and "Women into Public Appointments". "Public Bodies" is available in the Library of the House. The latest edition of "Women into Public Appointments" is to be published next month. A copy will be placed in the Library.

Education, Police and Fire Services

Mr. Latham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer to questions from the hon. Member for Bedfordshire, North (Sir T. Skeet), of 27 April, Official Report, columns 355-56, if he will break down the figures given for the effect on (a) income tax and (b) value added tax of transferring services from local government to central Government between (i) education, (ii) police and (iii) fire.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 23 May 1990]: Pursuant to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Bedfordshire, North (Sir T. Skeet) of 27 April, the total costs of education, the police and the fire service (including civil defence) in 1990-91 would be around £18 billion, £5 billion and £1 billion respectively, if local authorities spent in line with total standard spending in England and Wales and total current expenditure in Scotland. If this expenditure were transferred to central Government, with no change to revenue support grant and specific grants for the police and fire service eliminated, this would imply additional expenditure of around £18 billion on education, £2·4 billion on police and £1 billion on fire and civil defence. These sums are equivalent to increases of around 12p, 1½p and ½p respectively in the basic rate of income tax or to increases of 9, 1 and ½ percentage points respectively in the VAT rate.

Income

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish in the Official Report a table giving the percentage increase in (a) income from employment, (b) income from self-employment, (c) rent, dividends and interest, (d) social security benefits and (e) personal disposable income, between 1978-79 and 1989-90, giving the contribution of each towards personal disposable income.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 24 May 1990]: Estimates in respect of the first quarter of 1990 will be published in late June. The most up-to-date comparison available, for calendar years 1978 to 1989, gives the following percentage increases and percentages of personal disposable income:

	Percentage change 1989 on 1978	As a percentage of personal[1] disposable income
		1978	1989
Income from employment	+183	87	82
Income from self-employment	+255	12	14
Rent, dividends and interest	+258	11	13
Social security benefits	+191	14	13
Personal disposable income	+202

[1] Personal disposable income is total personal income less taxes, social security contributions and certain transfer payments.

ENERGY

Overhead Power Cables

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what assessments have been made of the environmental hazards of overhead power cables for those who live directly beneath; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: I understand there has been a very small number of cases over many years of overhead line conductors breaking and falling across houses without causing any injury.

Any electrical conductor, whether forming part of an overhead line, underground cable, or the wiring and appliances in the home creates an electric and magnetic field in its vicinity. Some scientists have claimed that these fields affect human health. Research on this has been going on worldwide for over 10 years and to date has not identified any serious risk.

In the United Kingdom a major research programme is continuing which is being funded and carried out by the National Grid Company, previously part of the CEGB, mostly using independent laboratories.

Nuclear Electric

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list those matters relating to the work of Nuclear Electric on which it is his policy to answer parliamentary questions; and how this differs from his former policy in relation to the work of the Central Electricity Generating Board.

Mr. Wakeham: My policy is unchanged. Questions which relate to the operational management of Nuclear Electric plc remain a matter for the company.

Insulation

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is his Department's estimate of the saving in electricity demand which would result from insulation to the highest standards being advocated by his Department of (a) 33 per cent., (b) 50 per cent., (c) 66 per cent., (d) 75 per cent. and (e) 90 per cent. of all homes in England and Wales.

Mr. Wakeham: A recent estimate has indicated that if all cost-effective insulation measures were applied, where relevant, to the housing stock in England and Wales 5·5TWh of electricity, used in space and water heating, could be saved. This represents 2·4 per cent. of the total electricty consumed in England and Wales.

However, householders are likely to opt at least in part for greater warmth rather than simply saving energy.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) when the vitrification plant for the solidification of high-level radioactive waste, presently under construction at British Nuclear Fuels, Sellafield, will be completed and commissioned; and if he will make a statement;

(2) when the store for receipt of the sealed canisters of vitrified high-level radioactive waste at British Nuclear Fuels, Sellafield, will be completed and commissioned; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: I understand from British Nuclear Fuels plc that the vitrification plant will be completed during June this year and that commissioning is expected by January 1991. The vitrified product store has already been completed and commissioning is expected by October 1990.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what are the neutron and alpha/beta/gamma components of surface radiation dose equivalent rates, in milliSieverts per hour, for vitrified high-level waste containers for both Magnox and light water reactor/advanced gas-cooled reactor oxide fuels; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: I understand from British Nuclear Fuels plc that the vitrified waste will be produced and stored in stainless steel welded containers and the process carried out remotely behind concrete shielding. Average dose rates in areas to which the operators have access will be approximately 0·001 milliSieverts per hour.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what are the approximate overall dimensions, capacity and design features of an approved single vitrified high-level radioactive waste capsule or canister.

Mr. Baldry: I understand from British Nuclear Fuels plc that each vitrified high-level radioactive waste container is approximately 134 cm high and 43 cm in diameter and weighs approximately 75 kg. Its volumetric capacity is approximately 170 litres and each canister holds approximately 400 kg of vitrified waste.

These canisters are made from stainless steel and designed for easy lid placement and welding when full, for safe and reliable handling, and for the ability to withstand stresses arising during filling, handling and storage. The safety case for the on-site storage of these canisters has to be agreed by the Health and Safety Executive's nuclear installations inspectorate before the plant can be operated.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will give an estimate of the anticipated volume of high-level radioactive waste to be returned to customers overseas after reprocessing by British Nuclear Fuels Ltd.; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: I understand from British Nuclear Fuels plc that the latest estimate of high-level radioactive waste to be returned to overseas customers following reprocessing under contracts with return of waste options is 300 cu m.

Energy Consumption

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make it his policy to require all companies contracted to provide goods and services to his Department to conduct a regular energy audit of their operations.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Contractors will continue to be chosen on the basis of competitive tenders, and their efficient use of energy will lead to lower unit costs.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will give the number of dedicated energy managers in his Department and the number of person years devoted to energy management in the latest year.

Mr. Wakeham: An energy manager in the Department's headquarters building, together with local energy managers in five other premises in which the Department is an occupant, expects to devote around one third of a man year of effort to energy management.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will give the number of energy audits carried out in his Department in the last five years and for each audit a statement of its main conclusions.

Mr. Wakeham: An energy audit was not considered cost-effective in our former headquarters, because the Department had been under notice to quit since before 1985.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will give for each year from 1978 the energy consumption, broken down by fuel, of the buildings occupied by his Department, expressing the figures in (a) cash terms, (b) 1978-79 money terms and (c) units of consumption for electricity in kilowatt hours, gas in therms, liquid fuel in litres and solid fuel in tonnes.

Mr. Wakeham: I regret that information on energy consumption in buildings occupied by my Department over this period is not available. Under new arrangements for direct billing this information will be available from 1990-91 onwards.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when his Department last conducted a full energy audit of its own building stock.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The Department regularly monitors energy usage in its new headquarters building, of which it is the sole occupier and into which it moved in September last year. The building has an up-to-date electronic building energy management system. The Department is discussing with the Department of the Environment (Property Holdings) the potential for its commissioning energy management contracts aimed at improving overall energy efficiency on the civil estate, including my Department's headquarters building. These would include full energy audits. The Department has appointed energy managers to monitor energy consumption in all the other buildings on the common user estate where it is an occupant.

Coal

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is the average difference in percentage ash content between the medium sulphur coals presently being burned in British power stations and the coals of low-sulphur content.

Mr. Wakeham: The ash content of coal, as sold, typically varies up to about 20 per cent. There is no particular association with sulphur content.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is the estimated increase in the percentage of fine dust released to the atmosphere as a result of replacing existing coal used with low-sulphur coal by the percentage required to meet European Community standards.

Mr. Wakeham: The Government are committed to achieving the reductions in emissions specified in the EC large combustion plants directive. It is for the electricity industry to plan how it will achieve its share of these reductions.

Dust emissions from power stations are subject to limits set by Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution. The limits set for existing power stations will continue to apply irrespective of the type of coal used.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what assessment he has made of the environmental implications of the imports of low-sulphur coal, in respect of any consequential need for large storage dumps alongside power stations.

Mr. Wakeham: The Government are committed to achieving the reductions in emissions specified in the EC large combustion plants directive. It is for the electricity industry to plan how it will achieve its share of these reductions.

Any request for extensions to power stations would be subject to the consent procedure set out in section 36 of the Electricity Act 1989.

Oil Spillage, Mersey

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether he will place in the Library a copy of the pipelines inspectorate's interim report on the release of oil into the Mersey from the Shell pipeline.

Mr. Wakeham: The pipeline inspectorate report into the failure of the Mersey oil pipeline on 19 August 1989 is being prepared under the instruction of the Health and Safety Commission. Subject to the agreement of the commission, I intend to publish the report.

Collieries

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will discuss with the chairman of British Coal the scope for re-opening pits capable of producing low-sulphur coal which have been closed since 1984.

Mr. Baldry: Decisions on the operation of individual collieries in relation to market demand are a management matter for British Coal.

National Grid Company

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is his Department's latest estimate of the value of the grid company.

Mr. Wakeham: The value of the National Grid Company in the flotation of the 12 regional electricity companies will depend on a wide range of factors, including its profitability, capital structure and future prospects and market conditions at the time of the sale.

Departmental Savings

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what mechanisms exist in his Department for indentifying and tracking value-for-money savings in its operations.

Mr. Wakeham: The mechanisms are:

Annual plans and reports prepared by heads of division on their objectives, activities, use of resources and intended value for money improvements over the next public expenditure survey period;

A management plan for efficiency gains in administrative expenditure covering the same period;

An administrative budgeting scheme under which budgets for the financial year ahead for staff and associated costs are delegated to senior line managers;

Annual targets for and savings made in purchasing and stockholdings; and

Annual programmes of work to be carried out by the Department's internal consultancy, inspection and review services.

All these mechanisms are subject to approval by and carried through under the general direction of the Permanent Under-Secretary and his immediate colleagues.

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what were the value-for-money savings in his Department's operations identified by internal audit and internal efficiency arrangements and by external audit and by management consultants retained by his Department between 1983-84 and 1988-89; and what is the amount of those savings fulfilled to date.

Mr. Wakeham: Over the period 1985-86 to 1988-89, my Department secured value-for-money savings in its operations totalling some £9·4 million. Savings in office space, from keen purchasing of goods and services, from staff inspections and from other internal efficiency measures all contributed to the total.

The value of savings secured in 1983-84 and 1984-85 is not readily available. The systems now in place to target as well as deliver these savings were introduced at various times over the period, so no useful comparison with savings identified by these systems can be given.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Pop Concert, Brighton

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has on how many people were injured at the recent New Kids on the Block concerts on 28 April at Whitley Bay and 29 April at the Brighton centre; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: I understand from the police that, in addition to those people who received minimal first aid treatment at the events themselves, three people were referred to hospital during the concert which took place at Whitley Bay ice rink on 27 April with what could be termed injuries and another four during a second concert at the same venue on 28 April. Fifteen people were referred to hospital during the concert at Brighton on 29 April, but this was a precautionary measure on a very hot day and none had any appearance of injuries. All were discharged later that night. Responsibility for the licensing of public musical events of this kind, including the stipulation of appropriate measures to ensure crowd safety, is a matter for local authorities in conjunction with the police and the fire authority. The Health and Safety Executive is currently working on new guidance on safety at pop concerts.

Prison Disturbances

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list for the current year to date, and by location, the number of prison disturbances, showing in his answer (a) how long the disturbance lasted, (b) how many inmates were involved, (c) how many inmates received injuries and (d) how many prison staff received injuries.

Mr. Mellor: The most serious incidents, involving a substantial number of inmates acting in concert and the use of violence towards staff or property, occurred at the following establishments:

It is impossible to be precise about the number of prisoners who were present in the particular parts of the establishments where incidents took place who were active participants. As regards the incidents at Blundeston and Winchester, 25 inmates and seven inmates respectively were positively identified as being actively involved.

[1] The figures for inmate injuries do not include the prisoner who died during the incident at Manchester nor the prisoner who was found dead after a fire in his cell at Dartmoor.

[2] In addition, one officer died at the time of the incident at Manchester.

Crack (Seizures)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the number of seizures of crack in Britain for each month of 1990, stating the street value and the places where the seizures took place.

Mr. Mellor: Forensic science service figures for the number and weight of seizures of crack in 1990, by police region and month of analysis, are set out in the table. The estimated street value of crack varies according to time and place and is not routinely assessed for each seizure. The estimated current street value of the total amount seized in 1990 to date (258·79 grammes) is in the region of £32,500.

There have been no known seizures of crack by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise in 1990 so far. Crack is not generally imported but produced in the United Kingdom from cocaine.

Broadcasting Bill

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many representations he has received concerning the Broadcasting Bill and religion; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: We have received representations from a number of groups and individuals about religious broadcasting. The Broadcasting Bill as introduced would liberalise the regulation of religious broadcasting in a number of ways: for instance, the automatic ban on religious advertising in schedule 2 to the Broadcasting Act 1981 would be lifted. The Bill has subsequently been amended to require Channel 3 and 5 licensees to give a sufficient amount of time to religious programming, and to enable the ITC to allow religious groups to own cable and non-DBS satellite channels where satisfied that this would be appropriate. Content safeguards are needed against possible abuse of religious broadcasting, but, as indicated during the Commons Report stage on 8 May 1990, Official Report, column 158, we are reviewing the relevant requirements in the Bill with a view to ensuring that they are both adequate and not unnecessarily restrictive.

Prisons (Mother and Baby Units)

Mr. Grocott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many places there are in each of the three prison mother and baby units.

Mr. Mellor: The three prison mother and baby units provide accommodation for a total of 39 mothers with their babies. Her Majesty's prison Holloway and Her Majesty's prison and young offender institution Styal each has 12 places and Her Majesty's prison Askham Grange has 15 places.

Mr. Grocott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many babies were in each of the three prison mother and baby units on the most recent available date; and what were their ages.

Mr. Mellor: On 23 May 1990 there were a total of 30 babies in the three prison mother and baby units. The number and ages of the babies in each unit is as follows:

	Holloway	Styal	Askham Grange
Aged under one month	1	1	1
Aged 1-2 months	—	2	1
Aged 2-3 months	—	1	—
Aged 3-4 months	1	3	1

Aged 11-12 months	—	—	2
Aged 12-13 months	—	—	1
Aged 13-14 months	—	—	2
Total number of babies in each unit	7	8	15

Mr. Grocott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give a breakdown of the offences committed by women who spent time in prison mother and baby units during 1989.

Mr. Mellor: During 1989, a total of 101 women served all or part of their sentence with their babies in the prison mother and baby units. Of these, 34 had been convicted of offences of theft or fraud; 33 had been convicted of drugs offences; 12 had been convicted of offences of violence against the person; eight had been convicted of burglary offences; eight had been convicted of robbery offences; six had been convicted of other indictable offences.

Where a woman had been received on sentence for several offences, only the principal criminal offence has been stated.

Cats

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has received any recent representations on the theft of pet cats, for use in fur coats, animal experimentation and pit-bull baiting.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I have received several recent representations on the alleged theft of pet cats. The representations have expressed general concern about the fate of the pets concerned, in particular their use in the fur trade.

Young Offenders Institution Lichfield (Incident)

Mrs. Heal: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will call for a report from the chief constable of the West Midlands as to what police resources in the form of officers, cars and dogs were involved in the search on 14 May when two inmates absconded from Her Majesty's young offenders institution, Lichfield; what was the cost of the operation; from what budget this will be paid; and if he will make a statement;

(2) for what purpose a helicopter was deployed following the incident at Her Majesty's young offenders institution, Lichfield, on 14 May; and what was the cost incurred.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: These are operational matters for the chief constable. I understand from him that no additional costs were incurred.

Multi-agency Panels

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many multi-agency panels are now operating, including magistrates and probation officers.

Mr. John Patten: A number of probation areas indicated their intention to establish such panels in response to the 1988 paper "Tackling Offending: an Action Plan". In some cases these panels have built on existing arrangements for discussions between the chief officers of the various agencies in each area. We do not yet know how many panels are operating nationally.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many multi-agency panels, including members of magistrates' benches and probation officers, are now operating in the Merseyside area; and in which areas these are.

Mr. John Patten: I understand that three multi-agency panels following the recommendations of the 1988 paper "Tackling Offending: an Action Plan", are operating in the Merseyside area, in the petty sessional divisions of St. Helens, Knowsley and Sefton. They include representatives from the probation, social and education services, the police and the voluntary sector, but no magistrates.

Probation (Drug Users)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of young people under 21 years on probation are known to be hard drug users.

Mr. John Patten: This information is not recorded centrally.

Extradition

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when Her Majesty's Government expect to ratify the European convention on extradition; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: The Government hope to make the necessary Order in Council shortly before the summer recess, with a view to ratification of the convention as soon as possible thereafter. The convention provides for 90 days to elapse between ratification and the provisions coming into effect.

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many persons were extradited to the United Kingdom from each country of the European Community in each of the last five years; and what were their nationalities;

(2) how many persons were extradited from the United Kingdom to each of the other countries of the European Community in each of the last five years; and what were their nationalities.

Mr. Waddington: The tables give the number of persons extradited to and from the United Kingdom in respect of the other countries of the European Community. The United Kingdom does not distinguish between extradition requests in respect of its own nationals and nationals of other countries. For this reason, the nationalities of those whose return is sought is not centrally recorded.

[3] The return of fugitives to and from the Republic of Ireland takes place under reciprocal backing of warrants legislation, rather than under an extradition treaty.

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which European Community countries do not permit the extradition of their own nationals.

Mr. Waddington: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Minister of State to a question from the hon. Member for Gower (Mr. Wardell) on 18 April 1990 at columns 910-11. The limitations on the ability of particular Community countries to extradite their own nationals, described in that reply, apply irrespective of the nature of the offence.

In the third paragraph of the earlier reply, mention is made of an amendment to Dutch domestic law that took place in "1981". This should have read "1988".

Electoral Registers

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were the last representations he received from the Data Protection Registrar concerning the sale of electoral registers for other than electoral purposes; and what was his response.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The Data Protection Registrar wrote to me in February about the different provisions governing the supply of the electoral and community charges registers. In reply I reaffirmed the Government's policy on the sale of the electoral register and explained that, since the two registers are different in purpose, different considerations apply to their availability. The registrar has since proposed that electoral registration officers should publish lists of the names and addresses of those to whom copies of the electoral register have been supplied; we are considering the proposal.

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information the Data Protection Registrar holds about computer interlinks between community charge registers and electoral registers.

Mr. Mellor: I understand that the Registrar holds no such information. He will investigate any evidence of a breach of the Data Protection Act 1984, which he has the responsibility of enforcing.

Belmarsh Prison, Woolwich

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff employed at Belmarsh prison, Woolwich will be housed within the development and how many transferred from other areas will be seeking accommodation in the vicinity.

Mr. Mellor: No quarters will be provided for prison officer grades at this establishment. It is too early to say how many of our staff will look for accommodation in the area.

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he now expects Belmarsh prison, Woolwich, to be operational.

Mr. Mellor: It is hoped that HMP Belmarsh will be ready to admit prisoners in April 1991.

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what approaches have been made to housing authorities in the area to provide accommodation for staff to be employed at Belmarsh prison, Woolwich.

Mr. Mellor: Home Office officials have contacted a number of housing authorities in the area and discussions are continuing. This is just one of a number of options that are currently being pursued with the aim of assisting staff moving into the Belmarsh area.

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff will be employed at Belmarsh prison, Woolwich, when it is fully operational; in what grades; and how many of these will be locally recruited.

Mr. Mellor: The number of staff who will be employed at Her Majesty's prison Belmarsh is still under consideration. It is too early to say how many of these staff will be locally recruited.

Birmingham Pub Bombings

Mr. Batle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will reconsider the remaining scientific evidence in the Birmingham pub bombings case, in the light of the statements to the May inquiry that forensic evidence in the Maguire case can no longer be considered reliable.

Mr. John Patten: My right hon. and learned Friend has said on many occasions that he will consider any new evidence which appears to call into question the safety of the convictions of the Birmingham Six. He will of course take into account any evidence presented to the May inquiry which may be relevant to these convictions.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he proposes to take to ensure that material in police or other official archives relating to the Birmingham pub bombings case will not be destroyed.

Mr. John Patten: I understand that the West Midlands police and the Devon and Cornwall constabulary have made arrangements to ensure that all material in their possession relating to the Birmingham pub bombings case is stored in secure conditions pending the outcome of further inquiries into the safety of the convictions of the Birmingham Six. Relevant papers in the possession of the Home Office will also be preserved.

Prisoners (Cell Confinement)

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he hopes to be able to reduce the number of hours each day during which prisoners are confined to their cells.

Mr. Mellor: The improvement of the regime for prisoners, which includes reduction of the hours spent locked in cells, is a continuing objective of the Prisons Board. Last year the average time prisoners spent on regime activities increased by three hours per week.

South African Passport Holders

Mr. Cabom: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department under what circumstances holders of South African passports are eligible to vote in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Holders of South African passports resident in the United Kingdom who are not otherwise disqualified can register as electors and vote at parliamentary, European parliamentary and local government elections only if they also hold British citizenship, the citizenship of another Commonwealth country or of the Republic of Ireland. Holders of South African passports living outside the United Kingdom can register as overseas electors and vote at parliamentary and European parliamentary elections here only if they are British citizens, and fulfil the other criteria for registration.

Criminals (Royalties Payment)

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will introduce legislation to prevent the payment of royalties to criminals for artistic products arising from their criminal activities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given on 9 May at column 143 to his question about the payment of money to people convicted of murder by those making films about their crimes.

Energy Consumption

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give the number of energy audits carried out in his Department in the last five years and for each audit a statement of its main conclusions.

Mr. Waddington: Sixteen energy audits were carried out in the Home Office in the last five financial years. The main conclusions for each audit were as follows:

Establishment and Main conclusions

Abell House
- Automatic lighting control.
- Switching off all non essential equipment.
- Switching off of Boiler Plant.
- Reduction of heating levels.

Cleland House
- Automatic lighting control.

- Changing from a rated water supply to a metered water supply would save approximately £39,000 pa.

Her Majesty's Prison, Send
- Energy consumption is reasonable given the current site conditions.
- Many roofs are currently unlagged, improvement will not be cost effective on energy savings alone.
- Consideration was given to combined heat and power plant but site is not considered suitable.

Her Majesty's Prison, The Verne
- Install cavity wall and roof insulation.
- Fit compensator controls where appropriate.
- The establishment has already modified the external lighting as far as possible to make energy savings.
- All tungsten luminaires should be changed to high frequency control gear type.

- Minor modifications to the heating system should be made.
- A building management system would not be cost effective.
- It may be possible to reduce the installed lighting load by using energy efficient Krypton tubes.

- Install a building management system.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give the number of dedicated energy managers in his Department and the number of person years devoted to energy management in the latest year.

Mr. Waddington: There are four dedicated energy managers in the Home Office. In 1989-90 a total of 5·33 person years were devoted to energy management.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give for each year from 1978 the energy consumption, broken down by fuel, of the buildings occupied by his Department, expressing the figures in (a) cash terms, (b) 1978-79 money terms and (c) units of consumption for electricity in kilowatt hours, gas in therms, liquid fuel in litres and solid fuel in tonnes.

Mr. Waddington: No information is available on energy consumption in prison service establishments for financial years prior to 1982-83 and for other Home Office buildings for financial years prior to 1985-86. For later years, the information requested is not available in the format requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Police Authorities (Finance)

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will show for each police authority for 1990-91 the level of bids received for capital resources, the amount of supplementary credit approvals issued and the amount of capital grants approved.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The information requested is as follows:

Departmental Savings

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what mechanisms exist in his Department for identifying and tracking value-for-money savings in its operations.

Mr. Waddington: Seeking and achieving such savings are an integral and established part of planning and the annual setting of budgets in the Home Office. I regard the pursuit of value for money as crucial to all Home Office spending.

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were the value-for-money savings in his Department's operations identified by internal audit and internal efficiency arrangements and by external audit and by management consultants retained by his Department between 1983-84 and 1988-89; and what is the amount of those savings fulfilled to date.

Mr. Waddington: The improvements resulting from inquiries and studies of this kind are taken into account in the setting of annual budgets and internal targets. More specific information about contributions to value for money is not collected centrally within the Department and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Extradition

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list (1) those countries within the European Community which will extradite their nationals to the United Kingdom when charged with fraud-related offences committed here and (2) those countries within the European Community to which the United Kingdom would extradite British nationals resident here to face charges of fraud committed in those countries.

Mr. John Patten [pursuant to his reply, 18 April 1990, c. 910-11]: I regret that in the third paragraph of my reply reference was made to an amendment to Dutch domestic law that took place in "1981". This should have read "1988".

DEFENCE

Warheads (Plutonium Recycling)

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the policy of Her Majesty's Government on the recycling of plutonium from warheads being decommissioned for subsequent use in other nuclear weapons; and if it is the Government's intention to reuse the plutonium from decommissioned Polaris A3-TK warheads in the Trident D-5 programme.

Mr. Alan Clark: It is the policy of Her Majesty's Government to recover all reusable materials, including special nuclear materials, from nuclear warheads which have been returned from service. It would not be in the national interest to give details on the sources and application of fissile materials used in specific defence nuclear programmes.

Trident

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what proportion of the cost of the re-entry vehicles for the Trident programme will be incurred in the United States;

(2) what proportion of the cost of the warheads for the Trident programme will be incurred in the United States.

Mr. Alan Clark: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Denton and Reddish (Mr. Bennett) on 17 January 1990, Official Report, column 298.

Army Personnel (Skills)

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what was the percentage of Army personnel who had (a) mechanical engineering skills, (b) electrical engineering skills, (c) civil engineering skills, (d) mechanical transport skills and (e) communications skills in each year since 1985;

(2) what is the current percentage of Army personnel who have (a) mechanical engineering skills, (b) electrical engineering skills, (c) civil engineering skills, (d) mechanical transport skills and (e) communications skills;

(3) for each financial year since 1985-86 how many of those Army personnel who left the service prematurely had (a) mechanical engineering skills, (b) electrical engineering skills, (c) civil engineering skills, (d) mechanical transport skills and (e) communication skills.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The following information is based upon personnel numbers in the relevant corps. The Royal Electrical and Mechanical Engineers (REME) employ personnel with both mechanical and electrical engineering skills. The Royal Engineers (RE) employ personnel with civil engineering skills; the Royal Corps of Transport (RCT) employ personnel with mechanical transport skills; and the Royal Signals (R Sigs) employ personnel with communications skills.

Recruitment

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many men and women were recruited into the Army, the Royal Navy and the Royal Air Force in the financial year 1989-90; and how many left each of the services prematurely.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The total intake to the United Kingdom regular forces in the financial year 1989-90 is shown in table 1. The total number of exits from the services under premature wastage outflow categories during the same period is shown in table 2. The categories included in the outflow numbers correspond with those listed in table 4.18 of Volume 2 of the "Statement on Defence Estimates" with the exception of "Time and age expiries or exercise of rights at option point" and, for service women only, "By exercise of right to give 18 months notice".

Accommodation Charges

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the average level of that element of the accommodation charge that was set in lieu of rates in Scotland in the year prior to the introduction of the community charge.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The charges were £359 per married quarter and £101 per unit of single accommodation.

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the average level of that element of the accommodation charge that was set in lieu of rates in England and Wales in the year prior to the introduction of the community charge.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The charges were £408 per married quarter and £115 per unit of single accommodation.

Pilots

Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many pilots expressed as a percentage of the total number in the Royal Air Force left at their 38/16-year option date, during the years 1986, 1987, 1988 and 1989; and what percentage retired prematurely and voluntarily prior to this option during the above mentioned years, having completed their flying training and either having reached their squadrons or been accepted for training as instructors.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The proportion of Royal Air Force pilots, expressed as a percentage of the total pilot trained strength at 1 January each year, who left at their 38/16-year optional exit point was as follows:

	Percentage
1986	1·0
1987	0·8
1989	1·3

The proportion of pilots aged 38 and under who left on premature voluntary release during the same four years was:

	Percentage
1987	0·4
1988	1·2
1989	0·9

Low Flying

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will provide details of the accident involving an F15 aircraft during the recent low flying exercise Elder Forest.

Mr. Neubert: A United States Air Force F25 aircraft, participating in the United Kingdom defence exercise, Elder Forest, crashed into the sea approximately 20 miles east of Grimsby on 25 April 1990. The pilot ejected successfully. A United States Air Force accident investigation has been convened in the normal way. It would be premature to speculate about the possible causes of the accident.

Energy Consumption

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give for each year from 1978 the energy consumption, broken down by fuel, of the buildings occupied by his Department, expressing the figures in (a) cash terms, (b) 1978-79 money terms and (c) units of consumption for electricity in kilowatt hours, gas in therms, liquid fuel in litres and solid fuel in tonnes.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The information is not held in the form requested. However, section 2 of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates" for the years 1980-81 onwards gives details of energy consumption, on the defence estate, in terms of petajoules or volumes of oil. Figures for expenditure on consumption of non-operational fuel are available for the years 1985-86 onwards only, and are as follows:

	1985-86	1986-87	1987-88
Electricity	130,974	141,196	137,713
Gas	43,681	46,885	41,321
Solid Fuel	10,350	11,614	10,618
Liquid Fuel	97,668	49,340	42,994

For details of the expenditure on fuel consumption for the financial year 1988-89, I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on 10 May 1990, Official Report, column 213.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give the number of dedicated energy managers in his Department and the number of person years devoted to energy management in the latest year.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There are 15 full-time energy managers in the Ministry of Defence with a much larger number employed as energy wardens at units and establishments on a part-time basis. As the proportion of energy wardens' time devoted to energy management in the last year is not recorded, I am unable to give the total number of person years devoted to energy management.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give the number of energy audits carried out in his Department in the last five years and for each audit a statement of its main conclusions.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Ministry of Defence has carried out 295 energy audits over the last five years. It is not practicable to summarise the findings of this number of audits; however, the potential for a savings on energy consumption of 15 to 20 per cent. has been identified in most cases.

Departmental Savings

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what were the value-for-money savings in his Department's operations identified by internal audit and internal efficiency arrangements, and by external audit and by management consultants retained by his Department between 1983-84 and 1988-89; and what is the amount of those savings fulfilled to date.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The improvements resulting from inquiries and studies of the kind mentioned are taken into account in the setting of annual budgets and internal targets. The results are not collated centrally within the Department.

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what mechanisms exist in his Department for identifying and tracking value-for-money savings in its operations.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Department maintains a general efficiency programme, as well as other mechanisms for ensuring that its activities are conducted in an economic, efficient and effective manner. Each of the systems has appropriate monitoring and follow-up procedures. These are not designed to identify value-for-money savings separately from other improvements, not all of which are quantifiable.

Radiation

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what special means there is of shielding, blocking or attenuating the neutron emission from the Chevaline warhead during storage; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what special means there are of shielding, blocking or attenuating the neutron emission from the Chevaline warhead during transportation to and from the royal naval armaments depot at Coulport to and from the Royal Ordnance factory at Burghfield; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neubert [holding answer 24 May 1990]: No special measures beyond the laid down working procedures and MOD's normal radiological protection practices are necessary.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which component of the Chevaline warhead assembly gives rise to the neutron emission radiation dose equivalent; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neubert [holding answer 24 May 1990]: The fissile material within the warhead assembly.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the average recorded or assessed neutron radiation dose equivalent exposure received by members of the general public due to the road transportation of the Chevaline warhead on any one journey or throughout any transit period; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neubert [holding answer 24 May 1990]: Attributable doses to members of the public from warheads involved in transport operations are zero.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the average recorded or assessed neutron radiation dose equivalent exposure received by road transportation personnel during carriage of the Chevaline warhead on any one journey or throughout any transit period; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neubert [holding answer 24 May 1990]: Attributable doses to transportation personnel from the Chevaline warhead during carriage on any one journey or throughout any transit period are zero.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if any neutron emission radiation dose equivalent exposure has been recorded for personnel at (a) Royal Ordnance factory, Llanishen, (b) atomic weapons establishment, Aldermaston, (c) Royal Ordnance factory, Burghfield, and (d) the facility at Donnington; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neubert [holding answer 24 May 1990]: There are low levels of neutron exposure to some workers in the atomic weapons establishment stations at Aldermaston and Burghfield, but not at the other locations. These are determined and recorded and the consequential effective (whole body) dose equivalents are such that the total doses sustained by the individuals from radiations arising from their work activities are within the relevant MOD and United Kingdom limits and are as low as reasonably practicable.

Radiation

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Dumbarton (Mr. McFall) on 2 May, Official Report, column 594, concerning records of individual radiation dose records, whether he will publish such information in anonymised form.

Mr. Neubert: It is not considered appropriate to present this detailed information to the House. It could be produced only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will provide the numbers of health physics monitors employed on monitoring the radiation exposure of the civilian population in Ministry of Defence areas;

(2) if he will provide the number of health physics monitors employed directly on the monitoring of radiation exposure of workers in each Ministry of Defence and privatised Ministry of Defence establishment since 1960;

(3) if he will provide the number of supervisors, by grade, supervising the monitoring of radiation exposure of workers by health physics monitors in each Ministry of Defence and privatised Ministry of Defence establishment since 1960.

Mr. Neubert [holding answer 24 May 1990]: The information requested could be provided only at a disproportionate cost. Ministry of Defence establishments ensure that work with ionising radiation is supervised, and exposure monitored, to the extent necessary to enable that work to be carried out in accordance with the requirements of the Ionising Radiations Regulations 1985.

Conventional Forces in Europe

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make it his policy that no relevant equipment be moved out of the area of application of the proposed treaty on conventional forces in Europe before such a treaty comes into effect in order to (a) deploy the equipment elsewhere or (b) sell the equipment; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: Pre-emptive withdrawal from the area of application of the proposed CFE treaty of equipment of categories likely to be limited under it can undermine the treaty's objectives. We would be seriously concerned at any such redeployment especially where the intention appeared to be to hold the equipment just outside the area of application of the treaty.

Missile Technology Control Regime

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he is considering lowering the range and warhead weight governed by the missile technology control regime; what talks he proposes to have on the regime; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: There are no plans to lower the MTCR range and warhead parameters. A meeting of the MTCR partner countries will take place in Ottawa soon.

Iraq (Chemical Weapons)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he has any information about the involvement of the Salman Pak underground plant, 35 miles from Baghdad, in work related to chemical and biological weapons.

Mr. Waldegrave: Iraq has used chemical weapons on a number of occasions in the past, indicating that it has a production capability. We are aware of recent media reports concerning the Salman Pak facility. It is not our practice, however, to comment on information which may be available to us on such matters.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he has any information regarding the possession by Iraq of the anti-personnel biological agents tularemia, anthrax and equine encephalitis; whether these agents have been weaponised; and what discussions have been held with the United States administration on these matters.

Mr. Waldegrave: We are aware of recent media reports alleging Iraqi development of biological weapons. Iraq has signed but not ratified the 1972 biological weapons convention which prohibits such weapons. It is not our practice, however, to comment on information which may be available to us on such matters. We have regular consultations with the United States on a full range of issues including chemical and biological weapons.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Tampons

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will review his decision not to require further warning labels, additional to those referred to in his answer of 5 April, Official Report, column 804, to be compulsorily provided on the packaging of tampons.

Mr. Forth: No. Toxic shock syndrome is a very rare illness and I am not prepared unnecessarily to frighten women off buying tampons by asking the industry to put a warning about toxic shock syndrome on the outside of the packet. I am however asking it to put a warning on the leaflet inside the packet on how to recognise the symptoms of TSS and the fact that very occasionally it can be fatal: and to put on the packet itself guidance as to what degree of absorbancy should be used.

Company Accounts

Mr. David Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many prosecutions have been initiated by the solicitors' office of Companies house against companies for failure to file accounts by the due date during (a) 1 January to 1 February, (b) 1 February to 1 March, (c) 1 March to 1 April and (d) 1 April to 1 May.

Mr. Redwood: Prosecutions for failure to file accounts are initiated against directors, not companies. The table gives details of those commenced by the Department's solicitor since 1 January 1990.

Period in 1990	Prosecutions commenced
January	[1]140
February	80
March	335
April	265

[1] Estimated.

Iraq

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the contracts arising from the April 1989 international exhibition for military production in Baghdad.

Mr. Redwood: We do not have this information, the publication of which would be a matter for the firms concerned.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether his Department has issued any export licences for vacuum pumps to Iraq.

Mr. Redwood: No licences have been granted for the export of vacuum pumps to Iraq in the last year. Information on licences granted prior to this is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Caborn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer of 15 May, Official Report, column 365, of the trade delegations that visited Iraq with Government support in 1989-90, 1988-89, 1987-88 and 1986-87, how many companies which made up the delegations have, or had, contracts with the Ministry of Defence.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 21 May 1990]: One hundred and seventeen of the companies in question appear in the records the Ministry of Defence keeps of firms currently or formerly qualified to bid for defence contracts. It would involve disproportionate cost to identify the number of firms which were awarded contracts.

Mr. Caborn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer of 15 May, Official Report, column 365, of the trade delegations that visited Iraq with Government support in 1989-90, 1988-89, 1988-88 and 1986-87, how many companies and from which sectors of industry made up the delegations.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 21 May 1990]: Two hundred and ninety-two companies participated in officially supported events in the years in question. They were drawn from a wide range of industries, which our records broadly classified as: healthcare, energy-oil field equipment, electrical-electronic engineering, water technology, automotive transport, domestic appliances-consumer goods, scientific-environmental equipment and mechanical engineering.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps his Department took to satisfy itself that the 10,000 protection kits exported to Iraq were to be used only for non-military purposes.

Mr. Redwood: It is the practice to retain records of export licence applications for no longer than seven years. No information is therefore available on any exports to Iraq which may have taken place before 1983.

Energy Consumption

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will give for each year from 1978 the energy consumption, broken down by fuel, of the buildings occupied by his Department, expressing the figures in (a) cash terms, (b) 1978-79 money terms and (c) units of consumption for electricity in kilowatt hours, gas in therms, liquid fuel in litres and solid fuel in tonnes.

Mr. Forth: I am sorry that the information is not available in the form requested.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will give the number of energy audits carried out in his Department in the last five years and for each audit a statement of its main conclusions.

Mr. Forth: No full energy audit has been carried out in my Department in the past five years, but energy usage is closely monitored. The Department is investing in energy saving projects with the aim of saving 15 per cent. of energy costs over the next five years.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will give the number of dedicated energy managers in his Department and the number of person years devoted to energy management in the latest year.

Mr. Forth: Twenty staff are designated energy managers as part of their duties. The Department devoted about three person years to energy management last year. This does not include the resources deployed by the Property Services Agency in our buildings.

Audit Committees

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any information on the number of companies which have audit committees.

Mr. Redwood: No. There is no requirement to notify the Department of the establishment of an audit committee.

Investment (Cumbria)

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will set up an inquiry into the level of inward investment inquiries being referred by the regional office of his Department to the industrial development authorities in Cumbria.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: No. All inward investor inquiries are sent routinely to all regions of the United Kingdom, where the regional development body, INWARD in the case of the north-west, maintains information on local site availability and conditions through regular contact with local authorities and other development bodies. Inquiries are then forwarded to those localities which have indicated their ability to meet the specific needs of the investor.

Hungary

Mr. Ward: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what efforts his Department is making to encourage joint ventures between British and Hungarian companies and between British companies and Hungarian state enterprises.

Mr. Redwood: My Department is doing a great deal. We are providing companies with information about the legislative and fiscal framework for investment in Hungary. My Department also makes available to British business information about specific investment opportunities and details of Hungarian enterprises seeking joint venture partners.

DTI Ministers are actively involved. I myself have led a trade mission to Hungary, and the Secretary of State expects to visit the country next month with a group of business men. Together with the Foreign Secretary, I participated in a major conference on 22 May sponsored by my Department, the CBI and others to draw companies' attention to business and investment opportunities arising from western economic assistance to eastern Europe.

ECGD's investment insurance scheme has recently been expanded to cover eastern Europe; and the Government's know-how fund can now be used to provide support for pre-investment feasibility studies and training of prospective joint venture partners.

Financial Reporting Council

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the members of the Financial Reporting Council, together with information as to their experience, directorships and partnerships.

Mr. Redwood: The membership of the Financial Reporting Council was announced in a press release issued by the council on 17 May, a copy of which has been placed in the Library.

CFCs and Halons

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he intends to publish the study commissioned by his Department into the use of chlorofluorocarbons and halons in the United Kingdom and the scope for their recovery for recycling and destruction.

Mr. Forth: I have today published this study in a report entitled "CFCs and Halons: Alternatives and the Scope for Recovery for Recycling and Destruction". Copies have been placed in the Libraries of the House. The report is available on sale from the publishers HMSO.

The Government have made it clear that they are fully committed to the elimination of ozone-damaging CFCs as soon as practically possible, and certainly by the year 2000.

The report finds that by adopting alternatives and developing cost-effective recycling, it would be possible to eliminate virtually all consumption of ozone-damaging chlorofluorocarbons (CFCs) in the UK by 1997. It also finds that similar action, particularly on recycling, could allow consumption of halon fire-extinguishing agents to be similarly reduced by the year 2000.

In examining current levels of CFC use, the report finds that the UK halved its consumption of CFCs between 1986 and 1989, thus meeting the controls on consumption in the present Montreal protocol almost 10 years ahead of requirements. The Montreal protocol is to be strengthened at a conference in London at the end of June, against a background of strong calls for complete phase-out of CFCs by the year 2000. This report provides further evidence that UK industry is responding well to this particular environmental challenge and is well placed to meet a more stringent regulatory regime over the next 10 years.

This will, however, require greater recycling of ozone-damaging substances, particularly in the refrigeration, fire-extinguishing and solvent areas. I urge all those involved in producing or using products made with CFCs or halons to increase their level of recycling. This action needs to form part of each company's overall strategy for reducing their use of these substances.

Local authorities and the private sector also have a role to play in the safe disposal of CFCs from domestic refrigerators. The report highlights a number of successful recovery and recycling schemes that have been set up. I hope that this report will encourage others to follow this lead.

Eastern Europe

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the support being given by his Department to the newly emerging democracies in eastern Europe.

Mr. Redwood: My Department seeks to help the process of reform in these countries by encouraging the involvement of British companies in their economic transformation and reconstruction. In particular we provide information on opportunities for direct investment, including joint ventures and other forms of industrial co-operation; for increased exports of goods and services; and for consultancy and management training.

DTI Ministers play their part by receiving incoming delegations and by taking with them groups of business men on visits to those countries. In recent months, the Secretary of State and I have led parties of business men to the USSR, Hungary, Poland, Czechoslovakia and Romania. I shall shortly be taking a group of business men with me to the GDR. The Minister for Trade visited the Leipzig fair in support of British exhibitors and attended the recent CSCE conference in Bonn on economic co-operation in Europe.

My Department also encourages British business to take full advantage of the several United Kingdom, EC and multilateral schemes introduced to assist projects of reform and reconstruction in the emerging countries of eastern Europe, including the United Kingdom know-how funds.

The DTI co-sponsored a major conference in London on 22 May which sought to alert British companies to the possibilities of winning aid-financed business in eastern Europe. A DTI official was recently seconded to the joint assistance unit in the FCO to help in the administration of the United Kingdom know-how fund.

In addition the Department continues to offer its established export services and to finance the activities of the East European Trade Council, the BOTB's area advisory group for eastern Europe.

Bankruptcies

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will institute an inquiry or take any other steps to ascertain the reasons for the increase in bankruptcies.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 24 May 1990]: No.

Environmental Policies

Ms. Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any proposals to ensure that United Kingdom trade promotes the goal of sustainable development.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 22 May 1990]: I shall continue to consider the links between trade and environmental policies and their relationship to promoting sustainable development.

Maccorp Holdings Ltd.

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will appoint inspectors to inquire into the affairs of Maccorp Holdings Ltd. and to establish the extent to which the prospectus issued by the company contained false and misleading information about the position and experience of director Arden McClelland.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 22 May 1990]: My Department is prepared to consider any information my hon. Friend may provide which might warrant an inquiry.

Bankruptcy

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will take steps to increase from £750 the minimum level of debt in respect of which a creditor may in terms of the Bankruptcy (Scotland) Act 1985 petition for the sequestration of his debtor.

Mr. Redwood: There are no current plans to increase this figure.

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will instigate a review of all aspects of the scheme of payment from public funds to trustees in sequestrations under the provisions of the Bankruptcy (Scotland) Act.

Mr. Redwood: Insolvency service officials are currently undertaking an evaluation of the Scottish bankruptcy system with particular regard to funding.

TRANSPORT

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if his Department is currently assessing the British Nuclear Fuels Ltd. approved design for the transportation of vitrified high-level waste; if compliance with this design is required for transportation by road, rail and ship; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he has any plans to allow the transportation of vitrified high-level radioactive waste flasks (i) through the channel tunnel and (ii) overland by rail from Sellafield to shipping ports including Dover; and if he will make a statement;

(3) if it is his policy to agree in advance the overland and sea routes of future exports of vitrified high-level radioactive waste flasks.

Mr. Freeman: Shipments of vitrified high-level waste by any mode of transport will be required to be carried in containers which have been certified by my Department as fully complying with stringent and national and international safety regulations which require safety to be built into the design. Safety does not depend on the choice of route used which is a matter for the carrier.

I understand that a package design is currently under development by British Nuclear Fuels plc (BNFL) but that it may be some months before this design is submitted to the Department for assessment and subsequent approval.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps have been taken by the marine directorate to satisfy itself that the type of ship used by Pacific Nuclear Transport Ltd. to transport vitrified high-level radioactive waste is appropriate to that function; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: The ships used by Pacific Nuclear Transport Ltd. are dedicated to the transport of nuclear materials. They operate under schemes of work approved by the Department, which ensure that crew members benefit from national and international radiation protection standards.

The Department has not yet received an application from British Nuclear Fuels plc for the transport of vitrified waste on these ships. Their suitability for carrying this material will be assessed by the marine directorate as part of the Department's approval and certification process.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport under what circumstances radioactive material is kept overnight in parked vehicles at Swynnerton, Stoke-on-Trent; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton [holding answer 24 May 1990]: I have been asked to reply.

I assume the hon. Gentleman is referring to military vehicles parked at the Army training area at Swynnerton, Staffordshire. As he will appreciate, however, it is the longstanding policy of this and previous Governments neither to confirm nor deny the presence of nuclear materials at particular military locations, or to comment on their methods of transport.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) whether shipments of plutonium nitrate from Dounreay to Workington will cease following the recent decision to abandon fast breeder reactor research at Dounreay; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what type of irradiated fuel flask is used for the shipment of plutonium nitrate from Dounreay to Workington; and if he will make a statement;

(3) when was the first shipment of plutonium nitrate from Dounreay to Workington.

Mr. McLoughlin: Shipments of plutonium nitrate are carried in containers to design No. 1763 and have been certified by my Department as fully complying with stringent international safety regulations. The first such shipment took place in June 1981.

The decision as to whether such shipments will continue is a matter for the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the role of the marine directorate in respect of the transportation of radioactive waste.

Mr. McLoughlin: The marine directorate enforces the Merchant Shipping (Dangerous Goods) Regulations 1981, as amended, under which the transport of radioactive waste by ships is regulated. The carriage requirements follow the international maritime dangerous goods code published by the International Maritime Organisation which in turn incorporates recommendations issued by the International Atomic Energy Agency. The radioactive materials transport division represents the Department in this agency.

A30

Mr. Maxwell-Hyslop: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will indicate his best estimate of the relevant timings of events concerned with the routing and construction of the replacement A30 between Honiton and Exeter.

Mr. Atkins: The Department expects to publish its proposals at about the end of the year. A public inquiry, which will, no doubt, be necessary, could be held in 1991. Subject to the satisfactory completion of the statutory procedures I expect construction work to start in 1993 and then to take up to two years to complete.

EUROSID

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what contribution he is making to the EUROSID project; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: My Department has taken a major role in the development of the EUROSID side-impact test dummy through the transport and road research laboratory. Researchers from TRRL have led the working group within the European experimental vehicles committee which has designed, developed and tested EUROSID. TRRL was responsible for the development of the important thorax of the dummy. The dummy is now fully tested and in production through Ogle Design Ltd. of the United Kingdom.

The Department has similarly taken a lead in development of the full-scale side-impact test procedure for cars. The United Kingdom is pressing for early agreement within the European Community on a side-impact directive incorporating this test. This work is expected to be completed in the next two to three years. When implemented, this should ensure that cars are designed to offer better protection to their occupants in collisions to their sides, saving considerable life and injury. EUROSID is a central requirement of the test, since it measures the likely injury to the occupants.

Northern Line

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he intends to make an official journey on the southern section of the Northern line; and if he will invite hon. Members from those areas of London to accompany him on his visit.

Mr. Freeman: I hope to visit the southern section of the Northern line at the end of this month. I would be glad to do so with the hon. Member.

Travel (London)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has undertaken any survey of reasons for travel in London; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: The most recent comprehensive source of information on reasons for travel in London is the 1981 Greater London transportation survey carried out by the Greater London council. My Department is planning to conduct a major new survey in 1991 in collaboration with the London Research Centre, British Rail and London Transport.

Information on reasons for travel is also collected in the national travel survey and although this survey does not identify where the travel took place it does provide figures for travel by people resident in London. Some results are given in "Transport Statistics for London", a copy of which is in the Library.

Energy Consumption

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will give for each year from 1978 the energy consumption, broken down by fuel, of the buildings occupied by his Department, expressing the figures in (a) cash terms, (b) 1978-79 money terms and (c) units of consumption for electricity in kilowatt hours, gas in therms, liquid fuel in litres and solid fuel in tonnes.

Mr. Atkins: A full answer cannot be provided. I shall write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will give the number of dedicated energy managers in his Department and the number of person years devoted to energy management in the latest year.

Mr. Atkins: In 1989-90 the Department devoted approximately 2·5 person years to energy management. This included the time of a central energy manager.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will give the number of energy audits carried out in his Department in the last five years and for each audit a statement of its main conclusions.

Mr. Atkins: The number of energy audits carried out in the Department of Transport were:

1985-86	0
1986-87	1
1987-88	7
1988-89	4
1989-90	1

In each case a variety of measures to produce energy savings were recommended and have been implemented.

Buscough and Ormskirk Bypasses

Mr. Hind: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will appoint traffic consultants to advise his Department on the line of the Buscough bypass on the A59; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will appoint traffic consultants to advise his Department on the line of the Ormskirk bypass on the A570; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: We shall be inviting competitive offers from selected consultants within the next two months for the design of three schemes in the Liverpool-Preston corridor; the A59 Ormskirk-Walmer bridge improvement (which will incorporate a bypass of Buscough); the A570 Ormskirk bypass; and the A570 Scarisbrook and Pinfold bypass.

WALES

Brymbo Steelworks

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will visit Brymbo steelworks.

Mr. David Hunt: I have recently had meetings with both the owners of Brymbo and their work force, but I have no present plans to visit the steelworks.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the number of geriatric beds in each district health authority area in Wales in the National Health Service and as a percentage of total beds for 1970, 1979, 1984 and 1989.

Mr. Grist: Available information on the number of beds in specialities designated as geriatric, psycho-geriatric and elderly mentally infirm and as a percentage of total beds is given in the following table; comparable information for 1970 is not available.

Speech Therapists

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many hearing therapists are employed in each of the district health authorities in Wales; and how many are bilingual.

Mr. Grist: The information requested is not available centrally.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he has taken to ensure proper training and recruitment of bilingual speech therapists in each district health authority in Wales.

Mr. Grist: The Department has encouraged all health authorities in Wales to undertake, as part of their annual manpower resource plans, an assessment of their requirements for bilingual staff and of posts where the ability to practise through the medium of English and Welsh is required. Recruitment to particular posts is an operational matter for individual health authorities. The extent, format and location of education and training for health care professional groups in Wales is being considered within the context of the Department's consultation document "The Health Service in Wales. Towards 2000: Manpower Planning, Education and Training", responses to which are currently being considered.

General Practitioners

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many general practitioners there are in each of the district health authority areas in Wales.

Mr. Grist: The latest available information is published in "Health and Personal Social Service Statistics for Wales No. 16" a copy of which is in the Library.

Home Renovation Grants

Mr. John P. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give the estimated (a) spending and (b) spending in real terms on mandatory home renovation grants by each local authority for each year since 1979.

Mr. Grist: Since 1979 four types of home renovation grant have been available:

i. Improvement/conversion grants
ii. Repair Grants
iii. Intermediate grants
iv. Special grants

All intermediate grants are mandatory, as are those special grants and repair grants for works carried out in compliance with statutory notices served under housing legislation. It is not possible from data available centrally to estimate the total breakdown between mandatory and discretionary grants.

However, some information on the amounts paid on completed grants by type and by local authority is published for the years 1983 to 1988 in "Welsh Housing Statistics" Nos. 4 to 9, copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

St. David's Airfield, Pembrokeshire

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will visit St. David's airfield, Pembrokeshire;and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: No.

The figures in brackets indicate the number of these homes which have subsequently either closed or ceased to function as primarily private residential homes for elderly people. The number of homes which may have closed from 1 April 1989 to 31 March 1990 is not yet available.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on BSE in Wales.

Mr. David Hunt: At 18 May, a total of 948 cases of BSE had been confirmed on 681 farms in Wales. All necessary steps have been taken by the Government to deal with this disease and the consumer can have every confidence in the safety of beef as a wholesome and nutritional food.

Ambulance Service (Emergency Calls)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list for each Welsh ambulance service area the number and percentage of emergency calls answered within (a) eight minutes and (b) 20 minutes.

Private Hospital Beds

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many private beds were available, and how many consultant hours were worked in association with these private beds by consultants employed by the National Health Service in Gwynedd in the most recent available year.

Mr. Grist: On 31 March 1989, the latest date for which information is available, there were 52 beds in private hospitals in Gwynedd. I have also authorised that a maximum of 2,920 bed days may be used by private patients in National Health Service hospitals in Gwynedd in any one year. Information on the number of hours worked by National Health Service consultants in association with these beds is not available centrally.

Local Authority Capital Expenditure

Mr. John P. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give the estimated (a) investment in real terms, and (b) capital investment on capital programmes other than new build and renovation, by each local authority for each year since 1979.

Mr. David Hunt: The information is shown in the following tables. Information for 1979-80 and 1980-81 was not collected on a comparable basis and is therefore not included.

NHS Staff

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many persons were directly employed as staff in the National Health Service for the whole of Wales in (a) 1979, (b) 1984, (c) 1987 and (d) the latest available date.

Mr. Grist: The whole-time equivalents of staff directly employed by the NHS in Wales, including the Welsh Health Common Services Authority, is given in the table:

Staff in post as at 30 September	Numbers
1979	50,320
1984	54,528
1987	55,882
1989[1]	55,679

These figures are not adjusted to take into account the change in nurses' hours from 40 to 37·5 in 1980.

Social Services

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much each of the county councils in Wales spent on social services (a) in total and (b) per head for 1979, 1984 and 1989.

Mr. Grist: The information available is given in the following tables. Information for 1979-80 has been given in place of 1978-79 which is not available.

Factory and Business Rents

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the commercial level of rents on new factory and business lettings in Wales against the rents currently set by the Welsh Development Agency; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: The assessment and negotiation of rents to be charged to tenants of the Welsh Development Agency is a matter for the agency.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what factors are taken into account in the setting of rent levels for new lettings of Welsh Development Agency and Development Board for Rural Wales property; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: The Welsh Development Agency and the Development Board for Rural Wales are responsible for assessing and negotiating the level of rent charged to their tenants and in general they seek to obtain full market value. A variety of factors influence rent levels charged by the agencies. These include location, size, and age of premises, as well as rent levels achieved by the private sector and other public sector landlords.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the increase in rents experienced by sitting tenants in Welsh Development Agency properties sold to the private sector; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: None. Rents paid in the private sector are a matter for the parties concerned.

Community Hospitals

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on the basis of the latest available information in Wales, what proportion of patients currently treated in community hospitals would have to be treated in general hospitals in the event of community hospital beds not being available; and if he will fund a study into this matter similar to that undertaken by Kenrick and Davies and published in 1976.

Mr. Grist: During the financial year 1988-89 approximately 11 per cent. of in-patient cases in Wales were treated in community hospitals (hospitals other than teaching, acute 1 and 2, mental illness, mental handicap and speciality hospitals). Their treatment in the event of community hospital beds not being available would be an operational matter for the district health authority concerned on which it is not possible to speculate. A review of the role of community hospitals in Wales was undertaken in 1989 by a working party of the Welsh Medical Committee. Its findings are expected to be presented to my right hon. Friend in the near future. No further studies are intended.

Financial Management

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answers of 8 May, Official Report, column 55, and 21 May, in what ways the financial consequences of the delay of the completion of the IBM contract with the Welsh Office of August 1986 were taken into account.

Mr. David Hunt: As I told the hon. Gentleman on 8 May, the details of the settlement between my Department and IBM (UK) Ltd. are in confidence for commercial reasons.

Hip Surgery

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures he is taking to help those with a need for hip surgery in Clwyd; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: The provision of hip surgery is a matter for district health authorities in the first instance. In addition, residents of Clwyd who have been on an in-patient waiting list for a hip replacement operation for more than four months and who are willing to travel to South Glamorgan may be referred for surgery at the all-Wales orthopaedic treatment centre in the Prince of Wales hospital, Rhydlafar.

Tourism

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will introduce legislation in order to enable the Wales tourist board to market Wales overseas.

Mr. Roberts: Following consideration of the report by the Select Committee on Welsh Affairs in 1987, improved working arrangements were established as between the British Tourist Authority, the Wales tourist board and the trade, for promoting Wales in overseas tourism markets. We have no plans to introduce new legislation.

Polytechnic of Wales

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects the consultants appointed to examine the management and financial control arrangements at the polytechnic of Wales to report.

Mr. David Hunt: I have now received the report which my predecessor commissioned from Price Waterhouse. I am placing a copy of the report in the Library.

The report identifies a number of management, budgeting and financial control deficiencies which call for immediate action by the polytechnic or Mid Glamorgan county council to improve the running of the polytechnic and its interface with the local authority. Copies of the report have been made available to the polytechnic and the local authority and I look to them to take early action to consider and put these recommendations into effect.

The consultants have also reported that effective dialogue between the polytechnic and its maintaining authority have come close to breaking down at most levels. That is a very serious situation, one which the consultants consider is highly detrimental to the efficient and effective operation of the polytechnic and potentially damaging to its image in the higher education market place. The report considers the options for the future status of the polytechnic against this unsatisfactory background and recommends that my Department should take over responsibility for its funding.

I will be giving careful consideration to the recommendation that there should be a change in the polytechnic's status as a local authority maintained institution. In doing so I shall be taking account of the polytechnic's special position as the largest higher education institution in the local authority sector in Wales and considering the implications of such a step for the rest of the sector.

All-Wales County Council

Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will estimate the cost of creating and running a new county council for all of Wales with 26 councillors and remit to administer the functions now carried out by his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: I find the proposal in question insufficiently well developed to justify asking my Department to attempt such an estimate.

Europartenariat 90

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what financial contribution is being made to Europartenariat 90 by (a) Welsh Development Agency, (b) Welsh Office and (d) local authorities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: Europartenariat 1990 is sponsored by the European Commission which will be meeting two thirds of the estimated total cost of £750,000. The remaining third is the responsibility of the host region and will be met by the Welsh Development Agency. Local authorities are not making direct financial contributions, but South Glamorgan county council is sponsoring a lunch for delegates on 14 June.

I am delighted that Wales has the honour to host this major event which will provide an excellent showcase for small Welsh companies and the opportunity for them to meet potential business partners from other parts of the European Community.

Departmental Savings

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what were the value-for-money savings in his Department's operations identified by internal audit and internal efficiency arrangements and by external audit and by management consultants retained by his Department between 1983-84 and 1988-89; and what is the amount of those savings fulfilled to date;

(2) what mechanisms exist in his Department for identifying and tracking value-for-money savings in its operations.

Mr. David Hunt: Officials engaged on staff inspection, management services and market testing work have identified possible value-for-money and efficiency savings of £2,368,000 in the period 1983-84 to 1988-89. While it is not always possible to achieve these savings in full because of changes in circumstances or other factors, and it often takes time to secure them in full, savings of £1,842,000 from this source were realised during the period.

Value-for-money savings are also identified in a number of other ways, for example, for audits, efficiency scrutinies, ad hoc reviews, the employment of consultants and the introduction of information technology. In addition, line managers seek savings and efficiency gains when preparing their annual management plans and in the course of their day-to-day activities. Line managers have prime responsibility for realising potential savings identified in these ways, and the results are not collected centrally within my Department.

Education Statistics

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will disaggregate for Wales the data contained in tables I, II and III of the Department of Education and Science memorandum contained in the second report of the Select Committee on Education HC 208-II, pp 10-12, session 1989-90.

[1] Separately identified figures for heads and deputy heads were collected for the first time in 1988 possibly resulting in undercounting in previous years. But to the extent that they were recorded prior to 1988 they will have been allocated to a teaching subject, slightly inflating the number of vacancies in individual subjects relative to their 1988 values.
[2] Percentage vacancy estimates are based on 1988 figures. 1988 subject teacher numbers have been derived by applying 1989 Secondary School Staffing Survey rates on subject teacher numbers to the teacher numbers recorded at January 1988.
[3] Vacancy rates are recorded in the Form 618G and vacancies for Welsh teachers are combined with vacancies in other languages.

EMPLOYMENT

Skill Centres

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a further statement on the sale of the skills training agency.

Mr. Eggar: The delayed sales of the training businesses at Barking, Southampton and Wolverhampton skill centres (including Telford outreach) to Astra Training Services Ltd. were completed on 31 May. This completes the sales of training businesses to the private sector. Fifty one of the 60 skill centres, plus the STA's head office, mobile training service, sales teams and colleges have transferred to the private sector, providing a network of training provision covering the major centres of population in England, Scotland and Wales.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the name and address of each training and enterprise council to be established in Nottinghamshire; and what geographical area each covers.

Mr. Eggar: There are two training and enterprise councils to be established in Nottinghamshire. The addresses and geographical areas covered by each are as follows:

North Nottinghamshire TEC
Edwinstowe Hall Cottage
Church Street
Mansfield
Nottingham NG21 9QA
Boundaries: local authority districts of Bassetlaw, Mansfield, Newark and Sherwood Ashfield.

Greater Nottingham TEC
c/o Employment Department: The Training Agency
Nottinghamshire Area Office

Nottingham NG1 5GL

Czechoslovakia

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) if he will make a statement on his recent visit to Czechoslovakia;

(2) if he will make a statement on the programme of assistance to Czechoslovakia, recently agreed with his Czech opposite number.

Mr. Howard: I visited Czechoslovakia from 13 to 15 May at the invitation of the Federal Minister of Labour and Social Affairs, Mr. Peter Miller, during which time I also had talks with the Prime Minister, Mr. Calfa, other Federal Government Ministers, industrialists and a trade union leader.

Discussions focused on the importance of creating the right climate in which enterprise can flourish, and the more immediate practical help and advice my Department can provide.

On 14 May Mr. Miller and I signed a joint statement on co-operation between our two countries in the labour market area.

We agreed a programme of immediate assistance which will include advice and practical help in establishing arrangements for the training and retraining of adults and in the development of small firms and employment services. We also agreed to set up a joint planning group to co-ordinate assistance and to develop proposals for further projects.

In addition, I have agreed to second a senior official from my Department to the Czechoslovakian Prime Minister's office to provide advice as Czechoslovakia introduces its economic reforms and moves to a market economy, including advice on labour market aspects.

I am very pleased that the Czechoslovak Government have asked my Department for assistance and that we have been able to agree a programme of co-operation. I look forward to the development of a rewarding and beneficial relationship between our respective Ministries.

Youth Training

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list (a) YTS training providers and (b) YTS training agencies operating in Nottingham.

Mr. Nicholls: The information requested can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Small Businesses

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many small businesses were established in 1989, by region.

Mr. Eggar: The latest available information, based on VAT data, is for 1988 and is given in the table. However, early indications from data collected by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise are that there was a net increase in 1989 in the United Kingdom as a whole of 1,500 a week on average, compared with 1,200 a week in 1988.

Workers' Co-operatives

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will outline the measures he has taken to encourage workers' co-operatives.

Mr. Eggar: The national Co-operative Development Agency, during its period of sponsorship by the Employment Department, has done excellent work in supporting and advising co-operatives. Much of this work is now carried out by other support bodies.

Like any other eligible business, workers' co-operatives can benefit from a number of schemes introduced by the Employment Department to help and encourage small businesses. The loan guarantee scheme, the enterprise allowance scheme and information and counselling from the small firms service are all examples of the support provided by the Department.

Vocational Training

Mr. Hanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how much his Department has spent on vocational training in each of the last five years.

Mr. Eggar: Records are kept on the basis of the standard financial year for Government expenditure, which runs from 1 April to 31 March.

The total expenditure on vocational training by the Employment Department Group Training Agency (and its predecessors, the Training Commission and the Manpower Services Commission) in each of the last five years is as follows:

	£ million
1985-86	1,278·0
1986-87	1,461·6
1987-88	1,633·6
1988-89	2,042·4
1989-90	2,669·5

Figures are shown at cash prices and include administration costs net of receipts.

Figures for 1989-90 are provisional and unaudited.

TVEI

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the expansion of the technical and vocational education initiative.

Mr. Howard: At present there are 81 LEAs in TVEI extension. A further 22 LEAs will begin their extension in September 1990. These authorities have now received an offer of funding for 1990-91. The total budget available to my Department for expenditure on TVEI in 1990-91 is £134 million.

Health and Safety

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish the criteria which are being used in assessing the viability of the Neasden Health and Safety Executive office.

Mr. Nicholls: Decisions about the location of offices from which inspectors' work are taken by the Health and Safety Executive on the basis of providing effective coverage as economically as possible.

Underpayment

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the average level of hourly underpayment in all wages council industries (a) by worker and (b) by establishment for 1989.

Mr. Nicholls: The information requested is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Self-employed People

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish in the Official Report the latest figures of self-employed people in the Tweeddale, Ettrick and Lauderdale constituency.

Mr. Nicholls: The latest figures available are for census day in April 1981. In the census returns 1,803 men and 458 women living in the Tweeddale, Ettrick and Lauderdale constituency said that they were self-employed.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many (a) scientists, (b) technologists and (c) engineers are currently unemployed; and how many in each category are currently in work.

Mr. Nicholls: Information is available from the labour force survey (LFS) on the occupation of people in employment in the survey reference week; and the occupation in their previous job of people who were unemployed (on the international ILO definition) and who had left that job less than three years before the survey. The preliminary results of the 1989 LFS with respect to occupation are currently being re-examined, and I will write to the hon. Member when the correct figures are to hand. The available figures from the 1988 LFS are given in the following table:

Spring 1988, Great Britain

Thousand

	Unemployed (ILO definition)	In employment
Scientists, physicists mathematicians	[1]—	118
Engineers and technologists[2]	[1]—	443

[1] Sample size too small for a reliable estimate (less than 10 thousand)

[2] It is not possible to separate the figures for engineers and technologists

Workers' Co-operatives

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will consider new arrangements for national insurance contribution rates to be paid by workers in workers' co-operatives.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I have been asked to reply.

We have no plans to introduce new arrangements for these workers.

LORD PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Office Accommodation

Mr. Allen: To ask the Lord President of the Council when he estimates that every hon. Member who wishes will have an office of his own.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: The Services Committee's second report of Session 1986-87 (HC 378) and first report of Session 1987-88 (HC 561) both recommended that every hon. Member who so wished should have a room of his own by 1995. That objective remains, but its achievement will depend in part upon the effect on plans for the further development of the Bridge street site of London Underground's proposals to extend the Jubilee line through Westminster. The New Building Sub-Committee has now completed its inquiry into this matter, and its report is expected to be published on Friday 8 June (third report from the Select Committee on House of Commons (Services) (HC 334)).

Meanwhile, an additional 60 Members' offices (and space for about 100 Members' staff) will become available in phase 1 of the new parliamentary building during 1991, and plans at present under consideration for the conversion of other space in the Palace of Westminster will, if implemented, provide a significant further number of Members' offices in the main building during the 1992-93 Session of Parliament.

Energy Consumption

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Lord President of the Council (1) if he will give the number of energy audits carried out in the Privy Council Office in the last five years and for each audit a statement of its main conclusions;

(2) if he will give the number of dedicated energy managers in the Privy Council Office and the number of person years devoted to energy management in the latest year.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: The Privy Council Office does not operate a system of energy audit, and has no dedicated energy managers.

Members' Expenses

Mr. Dykes: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will list (a) the different expenses and administrative allowances available to hon. Members and (b) similar financial provisions in the parliamentary assemblies of (i) the United States of America, (ii) the Federal Republic of Germany, (iii) France, (iv) Spain and (v) the European Parliament, specifying the different cash amounts in sterling terms.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

El Salvador

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when a full report will be made public on the findings of the Scotland Yard detectives who have been helping the El Salvadorean authorities with their investigations into the murder in November 1989 of six Jesuit priests.

Mr. Sainsbury: I refer the right hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Cynon Valley (Mrs. Clwyd) on 21 May, Vol. 173, column 33.

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports and assessments Her Majesty's Government have received on the scope, effectiveness and professionalism of the investigation by the El Salvadorean authorities into the murder in November 1989 of six Jesuit priests.

Mr. Sainsbury: We receive regular reports from our embassy, and have seen reports from a number of other sources, on the progress of the investigation into the killing of six Jesuits, their housekeeper and her daughter on 16 November 1989. The investigation is not yet complete. Meanwhile, eight members of the armed forces in El Salvador remain in detention.

South Africa

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received urging maintenance of all forms of pressure against South Africa.

Mr. Waldegrave: We regularly receive representations on a wide range of issues relating to South Africa from organisations, from members of the public, and from hon. Members of this House.

Mr. Cabom: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) how many British passport holders there are in South Africa;

(2) how many residents of South Africa are eligible for British passports.

Mr. Sainsbury: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office estimates that there are between half a million and 1 million people living in South Africa eligible to hold British passports. The majority have the right to live in the United Kingdom.

Front-line States

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has any plans to visit southern Africa-front-line states to discuss their political and trade relationships with South Africa.

Mr. Waldegrave: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs has no present plans to do so.

European Commission

Mr. Tom Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to increase the proportion of British citizens employed by the European Commission.

Mr. Maude: Following a recent review of the staffing situation in Community institutions, we have agreed with the Commission a package of measures to improve the recruitment of British nationals. There should be improved publicity on vacancies, competitions and recruitment procedures. We are also establishing a special unit in the Cabinet Office to co-ordinate the recruitment effort and pursue individual issues with the Commission.

Rights of the Child

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans the Government have to act upon the United Nations declaration on the rights of the child.

Mr. Sainsbury: The declaration on the rights of the child was the forerunner of the convention on the rights of the child. The United Kingdom signed the convention on 19 April and will ratify it as soon as possible.

Middle East

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he intends to meet the Government of Israel to discuss the middle eastern peace process; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: We regularly discuss with the Israelis the urgent need for peace in the middle east. They are well aware of our view that direct negotiation between Israel and Palestinians is an essential component of the peace process.

China

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many representations have been made by Her Majesty's Government to the Chinese Government on the subject of human rights since the events in Tiananmen square in June 1989.

Mr. Maude: We, either on our own account or acting together with our European partners, have made numerous representations, both formally and informally, to the Chinese Government on the subject of human rights since June 1989. The Chinese Government can be in no doubt of our views on this issue.

Kashmir

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made by Her Majesty's Government to (a) the Indian Government, (b) the Pakistan Government and (c) the United Nations concerning the state of Kashmir.

Mr. Sainsbury: We are in regular contact with both the Indian and Pakistan Governments concerning Kashmir.

We have not made representations to the United Nations.

Falkland Islands

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his latest contacts with Argentina over the future of the Falklands.

Mr. Sainsbury: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Uxbridge (Mr. Shersby) on 18 April, volume 170, column 845.

Baltic States

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many representations he has received from (a) the Lithuanian association of Great Britain, (b) the Baltic Council based in the United Kingdom and (c) News from Estonia, on the Helsinki accord and its relevance to recent events in the Baltic states.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have received two letters from the Lithuanian Association of Great Britain, one from the Baltic Council and one from News from Estonia about the relevance of the Helsinki final act to recent events in the Baltics. The question has also been raised in meetings between our officials and representatives of these organisations.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what conditions have to be met to enable Her Majesty's Government to establish full diplomatic relations with Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia.

Mr. Waldegrave: Before we can establish full diplomatic relations with Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia, these republics would need to fulfil our criteria for the recognition of an independent state, which were set out in the answer which I gave to the hon. Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn) on 19 March, vol. 169, col. 447.

European Community

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next expects to meet European Economic Community Foreign Ministers to discuss relationships with non-European Community countries; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs next expects to meet EEC Foreign Ministers at the EC Foreign Affairs Council on 18 and 19 June. The agenda is likely to include discussion of relations with certain non-EC countries.

Arms Control

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs in what conferences or other international fora Britain is presently involved to secure arms control and weapons system reductions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: The United Kingdom is a participant in the two sets of conventional arms control negotiations currently under way in Vienna, and in the chemical weapons negotiations at Geneva. Although the CFE negotiations have made less progress in recent months than NATO would have wished, our aim is still to reach the target of agreement this year.

Schengen Agreement

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the United Kingdom will apply to be part of the Schengen agreement once it has been ratified by the five original signatories.

Mr. Maude: No. Many of the provisions of the Schengen agreement could not be applied to an island.

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment has been made of the international and strategic circumstances in which all British nuclear weapons could be negotiated away.

Mr. Waldegrave: Peace has been maintained in Europe as a result of the possession of both nuclear and conventional forces by the United Kingdom and our NATO allies. There can be no question of negotiating away our nuclear deterrent while other states possess or are seeking to acquire a nuclear weapon capability that could pose a threat to this country.

Visa Applications

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the longest and shortest length of time between a male fiancé applying for a visa in Bombay and receiving an interview over the last six months; and what is the average length of time such an applicant has to wait.

Mr. Sainsbury: The average waiting time to interview for all fiancé(e)s applying for entry clearance at the deputy high commission in Bombay throughout the last six months has been nine months. The information requested on the longest and shortest waiting time is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Panama

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement with regard to the Panamanian human rights record.

Mr. Sainsbury: Although there are continuing problems of law and order, our information is that the recently restored democratic Panamanian Government observe normal internationally accepted practice on human rights issues.

Hong Kong

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list all the recommendations made by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees to the Hong Kong authorities in respect of (a) minimum internal space for asylum seekers, (b) food and nutrition standards and (c) water and sanitation standards in Hong Kong; and what progress has been made in implementing each recommendation.

Mr. Maude: UNHCR has recommended:

(a) A living space standard of 3·5 square metres per person;
(b) A minimum of 2,000 kilo-calories and 50 grams of protein per adult per day;
(c) A water supply standard of 15 to 20 litres of water per day plus sanitation;
(d) Toilet provision on the basis of one for every 20 persons.

Wherever possible UNHCR's recommendations have been accepted. Dietary scales have been drawn up by Hong Kong Government dietitians in consultation with UNHCR technical advisers, with supplementary feeding programmes for vulnerable groups, such as children, pregnant women and the sick. In 1989 the per capita water consumption was about 235 litres per day.

It has not been possible to meet UNHCR's recommendations on space standards and the provision of toilets. Hong Kong's high population density makes the 3·5 square metres per person difficult to achieve. On toilet provision the current standard is 50 people per toilet, which is the standard used in the design of temporary housing for Hong Kong residents.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the present number of Vietnamese boat people held in detention in Hong Kong.

Mr. Waldegrave: On 1 June 1990 there were 54,725 Vietnamese boat people in Hong Kong. Of these, 10,681 have refugee status and are accommodated in open centres. The remainder are held in detention and consist of 8,956 people determined after the full screening procedure not to be refugees, and 35,088 either awaiting screening or the screening results.

Energy Consumption

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will give for each year from 1978 the energy consumption, broken down by fuel, of the buildings occupied by his Department, expressing the figures in (a) cash terms, (b) 1978-79 money terms and (c) units of consumption for electricity in kilowatt hours, gas in therms, liquid fuel in litres and solid fuel in tonnes.

Mr. Sainsbury: It is not possible to provide the information in the detail requested. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office assumed direct responsibility for its fuel and utilities accounts in April this year. Before that, accounts were paid by the Property Services Agency. The data provided in our answers of 30 April and 10 May was obtained from Property Services Agency records.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will give the number of dedicated energy managers in his Department and the number of person years devoted to energy management in the latest year.

Mr. Sainsbury: A full-time energy manager post was created in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in October 1989. Before that, about half a person year had been devoted to energy management.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will give the number of energy audits carried out in his Department in the last five years and for each audit a statement of its main conclusions.

Mr. Sainsbury: An energy survey, including an energy audit, of the main Foreign and Commonwealth Office in Whitehall was conducted between January and April this year. The consultant's report is due to be presented shortly.

Vietnam

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with representatives of the Government of Vietnam about the opening of a Vietnamese consulate in Hong Kong to help cope with the boat people; what was his response; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: Upgrading Vietnam's representation in Hong Kong was discussed during the visit of my hon. Friend the Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs to Hanoi from 18 to 21 February in the context of a satisfactory overall settlement to the problem of returning all non-refugees from Hong Kong to their country of origin.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will support the request from the Government of Vietnam for establishing diplomatic relations with the European Community.

Mr. Sainsbury: We keep this under continuing review. We need to look at a number of factors, one of which is the extent to which Vietnam accepts its obligations under international law to accept back its own citizens.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with representatives of the Government of Vietnam about a bilateral agreement on trade and investment; what is his policy on this; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: A bilateral agreement on trade and investment was discussed during the visit of my hon. Friend the Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs to Hanoi from 18 to 21 February. For the time being, there are no plans to conclude such an agreement.

Mr. Gordon Glass

Mr. Galloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what steps he is taking to ensure that the Government of Iraq are properly investigating the death of British engineer Mr. Gordon Glass; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will call for a report from Her Majesty's ambassador in Baghdad on the circumstances of the death of British engineer Mr. Gordon Glass; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: Her Majesty's embassy at Baghdad is in close touch with the Iraqi authorities who are investigating Mr. Glass's death. The embassy provides regular reports on the situation to the consular department. We will continue to monitor the case.

Departmental Savings

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what were the value-for-money savings in his Department's operations identified by internal audit and internal efficiency arrangements and by external audit and by management consultants retained by his Department between 1983-84 and 1988-89; and what is the amount of those savings fulfilled to date.

Mr. Sainsbury: In the FCO (diplomatic wing) specific value-for-money targets for the last two financial years have already been notified to Parliament in evidence on the public expenditure White Paper, together with staffing savings produced by the 1988-89 top management round. In addition, internal audits and inspections achieved value-for-money savings in 1988-89 of over £2 million. Total VFM savings have been calculated only from 1989-90 onwards. Figures for earlier years are not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

In the ODA, value-for-money savings in departmental running costs and value-for-money achieved on aid-financed goods and services are set out in the annual public expenditure White Paper. On services, savings achieved were £3·5 million in 1986-87; £5·7 million in 1987-88 and £8·41 million in 1988-89. Figures for earlier years are not readily available.

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what mechanisms exist in his Department for identifying and tracking value-for-money savings in its operations.

Mr. Sainsbury: In the diplomatic wing of the FCO, targets for value-for-money savings are set each year by budget-holding departments at home and posts overseas. The ODA also sets such targets. Progress towards meeting targets is reviewed through the year. Inspectors and internal auditors also identify value-for-money savings as well as evaluating the controls established by management to secure VFM. Tables of VFM targets for the last and current financial years have been presented to Parliament in the diplomatic wing and ODA evidence on this year's public expenditure White Paper.

Mr. Jonathon Moyle

Mr. Galloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his reply of 30 April, Official Report, column 402, if he will make a further statement on the investigations into the death of Mr. Jonathon Moyle.

Mr. Sainsbury: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 30 April. Investigations by the Chilean authorities into the death of Mr. Jonathon Moyle are continuing. British consular officers in Santiago remain in close touch with those authorities. They stand ready to assist in any way they properly can.

Ambassadors (Grading)

Mr. Grocott: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what criteria are taken into account in determining the grading of ambassadors.

Mr. Sainsbury: In determining the grading of ambassadorial posts account is taken of the extent of British interests—political, commercial, financial and defence—at stake in the country of accreditation. The nature of inter-governmental business transacted by the head of mission, the level of demand from Whitehall Departments for policy advice and reporting and the degree of access to the leadership of the country are also important. The size of the mission and the consequential management role are further elements in the consideration of grading.

Ivory

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his reply of 8 May, Official Report, columns 26-27, how much of the ivory seized was (a) being exported (b) being imported and (c) neither; and what was the estimated number of elephant tusks represented by the 769·9 kg of raw ivory.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 17 May 1990]: None of the ivory seized was being exported from Hong Kong; 702·5 kg were seized while in transit through Hong Kong. The remainder were import seizures. The Hong Kong authorities estimate that the 769·9 kg of raw ivory seized represented approximately 250 tusks.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the current tradeable ivory stock held in Hong Kong; and to which countries ivory has been exported since he last answered a similar question.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 21 May 1990]: On 11 May 1990 the tradeable ivory stock held in Hong Kong was 353 tonnes (to the nearest tonne). In the period between 30 March 1990, when I last answered a similar question from the hon. Member, and 11 May 1990, the Hong Kong CITES management authority has been notified of the following exports:

	Kilogrammes
China	2,339·7
South Korea	6·6
Mexico	9·8
Taiwan	1·9
Saudi Arabia	8·8

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will provide a list of all countries for which ivory export permits have been issued by the authorities in Hong Kong since the entering of the reservation in respect of ivory trade.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 21 May 1990]: In the period since the entering of the reservation up to 19 May 1990 licences have been issued for the export of ivory to the following countries: China, South Korea, Mexico, Taiwan and Saudi Arabia.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his reply of 8 May Official Report columns 26-27, what were the countries of export of ivory seized by the Hong Kong authorities.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 17 May 1990]: The countries of export of the seized ivory in question were Singapore, Canada, Taiwan, China, Thailand, India and Korea.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if any mammoth ivory has been imported into Hong Kong in the past 12 months.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 17 May 1990]: The Hong Kong Government's trade statistics do not indicate whether any mammoth ivory has been imported into Hong Kong in the past 12 months. Nor does the CITES management authority have this information since mammoth ivory is not controlled under CITES.

Endangered Species

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his reply of 8 May, Official Report, columns 26-27, what was the intended fate of the (a) monkey, (b) live pangolin and meat, (c) parrots, (d) great salamander and (e) live owl.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 17 May 1990]: As I stated in my answer to the hon. Member on 5 April, confiscated endangered species are disposed of by the Hong Kong authorities by one of the following methods: live animals are released to the wild; specimens are sent to zoos, educational and scientific institutions or other CITES authorities; and perishable items are incinerated.

Youth Exchanges

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will set out his policy regarding the encouragement of youth exchanges between the United Kingdom and (a) the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and (b) other countries in eastern Europe in the light of recent developments in those countries.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 21 May 1990]: We believe youth exchanges are an important vehicle for improving international understanding and relations between people at an individual level.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) how many young people were assisted financially, directly or indirectly, by the Government (a) individually or (b) as members of organised groups, to participate in youth exchange visits between the United Kingdom and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics during each of the past 10 years;

(2) how many young people were assisted financially, directly or indirectly, by the Government (a) individually or (b) as members of organised groups, to participate in youth exchange visits between the United Kingdom and the countries of eastern Europe including the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics during each of the past 10 years.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 21 May 1990]: No figures are available for individual youth exchange visits between the United Kingdom and the USSR and countries of eastern Europe. The following figures for organised groups are available only from 1985 when the youth exchange centre was set up. Figures for the past 10 years could not be obtained without disproportionate cost.

	USSR	E Europe and USSR
1985-86	263	1,609
1986-87	344	1,840
1987-88	382	1,724
1988-89	352	1,853
1989-90	819	2,822

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) how much money was (a) budgeted and (b) paid out by his Department in respect of youth exchange visits between the United Kingdom and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics in each of the past 10 years;

(2) how much money was (a) budgeted and (b) paid out by his Department directly or via intermediary bodies in respect of youth exchange visits between the United Kingdom and the countries of eastern Europe, including the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics in each of the past 10 years.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 22 May 1990]: We have statistics only for the youth exchange centre (YEC) which is funded by FCO (80 per cent.) and DES (20 per cent.) and administers youth exchanges on our behalf. The following figures are available only from 1985 when the YEC was set up. Figures for the past 10 years could not be obtained without disproportionate cost.

	Budgeted for Eastern Europe, including USSR £	Paid out for Eastern Europe, including USSR £
1985-86	74,000	81,000
1986-87	74,500	87,000
1987-88	65,000	90,000
1988-89	63,000	95,000
1989-90	63,000	179,000

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) how much money has been budgeted for the present year and how much is projected for 1991 (a) for the promotion of youth exchange visits and (b) to directly assist such exchanges between the United Kingdom and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics;

(2) how much money has been budgeted for the present year and how much is projected for 1991 (a) for the promotion of youth exchange and (b) to directly assist such exchanges between the United Kingdom and the countries of eastern Europe, including the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 22 May 1990]: For the financial year 1990-91, £653,000 has been budgeted for the promotion of youth exchanges throughout the world, of which £90,000 has been set aside for the countries of eastern Europe, including the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. Similar figures are not available for the financial year 1991-92.

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn), Official Report, 11 May, columns 249-50, what volumes of radioactive waste are produced each year at each United Kingdom establishment in each territory to which it makes reference; and what form of transport is used to return these wastes to the United Kingdom.

Mr. Neubert: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to the replies that my hon. Friend the Member for Hove (Mr. Sainsbury) gave on 20 January 1988, at columns 762-63, 25 January 1989, at column 653, and 13 July 1989 at column 589.

The form of transport used would be that most appropriate to the circumstances, but would always conform with the Secretary of State's assurances that conditions would be no less stringent than those applying internationally to the movement of civil radioactive material. It is not our practice for reasons of national security to give a complete breakdown of radioactive waste arisings at all our defence establishments.

European Community

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the current negotiations Her Majesty's Government are having with other European Community countries concerning visa requirements for non-EEC nationals after 1 January 1993.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I have been asked to reply.

The position remains as stated in my right hon. and learned Friend's reply to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Hampstead and Highgate (Sir G. Finsberg) on 20 December at column 276 following the last meeting of Immigration Ministers. In the usual way my right hon. and learned Friend will report the outcome of the next meeting later this month.

Overseas Voters

Mr. Caborn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will give a breakdown of the costs of the Government's "Keeping your Vote When Living Abroad" campaign for each of the countries in which this campaign is being run.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to a question from the hon. Member for Edinburgh, Central (Mr. Darling) on 30 April at columns 396-98.

British Antarctic Bases

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether any British Antarctic bases are presently under reconstruction; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: The British Antarctic Survey's Halley base is presently being reconstructed.

ENVIRONMENT

Local Government Finance

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will publish (a) the 1990-91 standard spending assessment and (b) the actual budget announced for 1990-91 for each major service block for each authority in Northamptonshire.

Mr. Chope: The available information is as follows:

Sir Trevor Skeet: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what he estimates would be the saving in public expenditure if the several services administered by county councils were transferred to district councils assuming that expenditure continued to be related to the standard spending assessment.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 8 May 1990]: It is not possible to estimate. The only information available is the savings resulting from the abolition of the metropolitan county councils and the GLC in April 1986. The overall manpower saving achieved immediately following abolition was estimated at some 6,300 posts. The projected long-term annual savings resulting from those staff savings were estimated to be some £100 million. Since the shire county councils are responsible for such major services as education and social services, which the GLC and metropolitan county councils were not, the information is of little direct relevance.

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Derbyshire, North-East on 15 May, if he will give the population for each of the local authority areas listed in his reply, together with details of their central Government financial support for 1990-91, under the headings (a) revenue support grant, (b) non-domestic rates, (c) current specific grants within aggregate Exchequer finance, (d) current specific grants outside aggregate Exchequer finance, (e) credit approvals, (f) capital grants and (g) the totals of these categories.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 21 May 1990]: The information is given in the table. Capital grants information is not available except for transport supplementary grants.

The total of current specific grants is given where the breakdown requested is not available.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment on how many occasions he met Lady Porter in December, January, February and March to discuss matters relating to the community charge.

Mr. Portillo: There was one meeting between the Secretary of State and Lady Porter during that period at which a wide range of issues was discussed including matters relating to the community charge.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment on how many occasions officials from his Department met officials of Islington council in December, January, February and March to discuss matters relating to the community charge.

Mr. Portillo: None.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment to what extent consideration of enhanced population in departmental calculations of community charge levels in Westminster is influenced by revenue from car parking.

Mr. Portillo: The weight given to the enhanced population indicator in the standard spending assessment for "All Other Services" is informed by statistical analysis of the variation in past expenditure by authorities on these services. The measure of expenditure used for this analysis excludes any income from car parking charges for all authorities including the City of Westminster.

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his written answer to the hon. Member for Derbyshire, North-East of 21 May, if he will publish in the Official Report equivalent figures for each local authority area in England for 1990-91 with the estimates of the actual sums raised from items (i), (ii) and (iii) also being presented in appropriate percentage terms.

Mr. Chope: Information is not yet available for each local authority area in England. The proportions of revenue support grant, non-domestic rates and current specific grants for the areas listed in the Official Report for 21 May in answer to the hon. Member's question, are as follows:

	Revenue support grant	Non domestic rates	Percentage current specific grants
Avon	25·8	48·1	26·1
Buckinghamshire	31·3	44·2	24·5

Actual values are given in the reply of 21 May.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what consultations he has had with disability organisations on the effects of the community charge on physically disabled people and their carers;

(2) what representations he has received regarding the effects of the community charge on physically disabled people and their carers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: I am not aware of any recent consultations with such organisations but I continue to receive representations on a number of aspects of the community charge. The position of the physically disabled and their carers is taken into account in the community charge system. Those who are resident and receiving care or treatment in a hospital, residential care home, nursing home, mental nursing home or hostel, as defined in community charge legislation, are exempt from the personal community charge. Certain low-paid care workers are also exempt. Those who leave their own homes to care for a disabled person, or to receive care, will not be liable to pay the standard community charge for at least a year after leaving their homes. Many disabled people subject to the personal community charge will qualify for community charge benefit which may reduce bills by up to 80 per cent. Income support has been adjusted with respect to the remaining 20 per cent. liability its recipients will face. The rules for community charge benefit and income support both make special allowance for the disabled and there is additional help within the transitional relief scheme for those pensioners and disabled people who were not former ratepayers.

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the average domestic rates bill per household in (a) 1979-80 and (b) 1988-89 for Blyth Valley, North Tyneside, Newcastle and Wansbeck.

Mr. Chope: The figures are:

	1979-80 £	1988-89 £
Blyth Valley	134	430
North Tyneside	151	485
Newcastle-Upon-Tyne	175	452
Wansbeck	120	375

Dog Registration

Sir Gerard Vaughan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will consider introducing compulsory dog registration for those breeds of dog known to be potentially dangerous and used as guard dogs.

Mr. Trippier: The Government have no such proposals.

FA Cup Final (Replay)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will consider the implications for crowd control of the allocation of tickets for the Football Association cup final replay; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: Each finalist received an allocation of 28,750 tickets for segregated areas of the ground. The remaining tickets were sold on a segregated basis under the supervision of the police who were content with these arrangements.

Recycled Paper

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress Her Majesty's Government have made in using recycled papers for document production by (i) Government Departments, (ii) public inquiries and (iii) other quasi-governmental organisations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The policy on the use of recycled paper in Government Departments and other organisations is for each to determine in the light of their own needs. My Department is currently testing recycled photocopying paper and additional tests are to be conducted on offset litho paper and computer listing paper. If the trials are successful these uses will be added to the existing use of recycled paper for envelopes and letterheaded paper. The Government's recycling advisory group has been examining the broader market issues that affect the wider use of recycled paper and Ministers are considering further action that could be taken by Government and other public bodies.

Peat

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the timetable for the Nature Conservancy Council's national peatland resource inventory.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The Nature Conservancy Council's national peatland resource inventory is being undertaken as a phased programme. The results of an inventory of peat soil resources will be published in the latter part of this year, as will those of sample studies of living lowland bogs. The report on the full inventory and broad classification of living upland bogs will be available in early 1991, while a companion full report on living lowland bogs may not be available until 1996.

Pollution Inspectorate

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the total number of inspections carried out by inspectors within Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution, in each year since its commencement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Details of inspection visits carried out in 1987-88 and 1988-89 are contained in Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution's MINIS 9 and MINIS 10 returns, available in the Library. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State gave details of inspections in 1989-90 in the answer he gave on 22 May 1990 to the hon. Member for Dewsbury (Mrs. Taylor).

Carver Report

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whom he has consulted and what was discussed in forming the Government's response to the Carver report.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The Department has given careful consideration to all aspects of the recent report of the House of Lords Science and Technology Committee on the reorganisation of the Nature Conservancy Council. The continuing discussions between the Government, the existing agencies and the chairman designate of the successor bodies have taken full account of the recommendations in the report. The Government's response to the report was published on 17 May and I refer the hon. Member to the reply which my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Romsey and Waterside. (Mr. Colvin) on Thursday 17 May at column 512.

Hazardous Waste

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how producers of significant quantities of special waste will be covered by an authorisation through integrated pollution control; how he intends to define the circumstances when producers of significant amounts of special waste will be encompassed by integrated pollution control; what sectors of industry will be so covered; and how many firms will be involved;

(2) how many of each type of plant will be covered by integrated pollution control; and how often he envisages Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution staff will be inspecting such plants.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Regulations made under clause 2 of the Environmental Protection Bill will prescribe processes for integrated pollution control (IPC). Processes prescribed for control will generally be those which are the most potentially polluting and will therefore include those releasing significant quantities of special waste. Such processes will need a prior authorisation from HMIP which will set out specific conditions relating to the operation of the process. The use of the best available techniques not entailing excessive cost will be required to prevent or minimise the release of prescribed substances and render all releases harmless.

IPC processes may release prescribed substances to more than one environmental medium. It is not possible to provide a separate figure for the number of processes prescribed on the grounds of their special waste releases. A list of processes which it is proposed to prescribe for IPC was placed in the Library of the House on 27 April, in response to a question asked by my hon. Friend the Member for Waveney (Mr. Porter), at column 343. Some 5,000 installations in England and Wales are estimated to fall within the proposed categories.

The frequency of inspection will be judged individually for each installation according to its nature, potential for release and other factors.

Departmental Grants

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the non-governmental organisations in receipt of grants from his Department in 1989-90, and the size of each grant.

Mr. Chris Patten: I have today placed the information in the Library.

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will place in the Library a list of all sites of special scientific interest his Department considers to be of national importance.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: No. Such a document could be produced only at disproportionate cost. SSSIs are notified by the Nature Conservancy Council on the basis that the series of sites as a whole should contain adequate representation, in the form of the best examples, of the total countrywide range of natural wildlife habitats, geological features and landforms. These may be of local, national or international significance.

Pollution

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will take steps to require disclosure of information about the nature of pollution incidents within two weeks after they occur;

(2) if he will amend legislation on trade secrets so that waste disposal authorities are required to disclose specific information about the nature of industrial wastes;

(3) if he will publish the results of the monitoring of chemical discharges into sewers.

Mr. Trippier: Information about releases from industrial processes coming under part I of the Environmental Protection Bill, including pollution incidents, discharges into sewers and the nature of industrial wastes, will be placed on public registers of information as a matter of course. The terms of an EC directive on public access to information which the United Kingdom played a leading role in negotiating will also require environmental information to be made available on request.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution will publish the identities of waste disposal authorities which fail to meet standards and local authorities which accept hazardous waste into dumps in contravention of their licences.

Mr. Trippier: Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution is currently undertaking trial audits of a small number of waste disposal authorities. Once the results of these have been evaluated, a planned programme of audits is to be introduced and it is the inspectorate's intention that the reports of these will be published. The reports will clearly identify any perceived inadequacies by the authorities concerned.

Waste disposal authorities are currently responsible for ensuring that all operations, including those carried out by the authorities themselves, are properly controlled. There are no central records of occasions when licence conditions are breached. The Environmental Protection Bill contains provisions that records of enforcement action taken by the waste regulation authorities, which will be created by the Bill, will be contained on registers available to the public, and that the authorities must publish annual reports on their inspection and enforcement activities.

Housing

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many private and public authority homes were built in each of the past five years in the London borough of Greenwich;

(2) how many private and public authority homes were built in each of the past five years in the constituency of Peterborough;

(3) how many (a) private and (b) public authority homes were built in each of the past five years in the constituency of Wiltshire, North.

Mr. Chope: The Department collects housebuilding statistics for local authority areas. Information is available for the London borough of Greenwich, Peterborough city council, which includes the constituency of Peterborough, and parts of two others and North Wiltshire district, which covers the same area as the constituency. Figures for dwellings completed for the years 1985 to 1987 appear in tables 1.6 and 1.8 of "Housebuilding in England by Local Authority Areas 1980 to 1988", and the latest figures for 1988 and 1989 in table 1 of "Local Housing Statistics No. 93". Copies of both publications are in the Library.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many private and public authority homes were built in each of the past five years in the constituency of Northavon.

Mr. Chope: The Department collects housebuilding statistics for local authority areas. Information is available for Northavon district council area which includes the constituencies of Northavon and part of Bristol, North-West. Figures for dwellings completed in the years 1985 to 1987 appear in tables 1.6 to 1.8 of "Housebuilding in England by Local Authority areas 1980 to 1988", and the latest figures for 1988 and 1989 are in table 1 of "Local Housing Statistics No. 93". Copies of both publications are in the Library.

Planning Appeals

Mr. Mills: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many planning appeals refused by local authorities were granted by the inspector on public inquiry in 1979, 1984 and 1989 where (a) no structure or unitary development existed and (b) a structure or unitary development plan had been agreed.

Mr. Moynihan: I regret that the information requested is not available for 1979 and 1984 cases and could be obtained only at disproportionate expense for 1989 cases.

London Borough of Ealing

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has had any formal communications from the leader of the London borough of Ealing since 10 May; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: I am not aware of any formal communications from the leader of the London borough of Ealing since 10 May, but I recently met him for an informal discussion and congratulated him upon his success in the recent local government election.

Action for Cities

Ms. Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the cost of the action for cities anniversary event he hosted in Cleveland on 28 February; and what was the cost of these events on a national level.

Mr. Portillo: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the then Minister for Local Government and Inner Cities to my hon. Friend the Member for Bristol, North-West (Mr. Stern) on 4 April. The locally incurred cost of the action for cities anniversary event in Cleveland on 28 February was £6,200.

Water Tables

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment by how much on average water tables have fallen since 1968 in each water authority area.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: This information is not held centrally.

Domestic Sewage

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what feasibility studies have been undertaken by his Department regarding the use of domestic sewage as a substitute for agrochemicals and peat by removing toxic elements in sewage sludge at source.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: No feasibility studies have been carried out by my Department into the use of sewage sludge as a substitute for agrochemicals and peat. Some 49 per cent. of sewage sludge is applied to agricultural land in England and Wales.

Sulphur Dioxide (London)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much sulphur dioxide there is on average and at maximum levels in the air in London.

Mr. Trippier: As part of the national pollution monitoring network, SO_2 is measured at two sites in London. The provisional annual mean and peak concentrations (in parts per billion) for 1989-90 are as follows:

Site	Annual mean	Peak
Cromwell Road	16·6	185
Central London	10·7	226

Data for peak values should be viewed in the context of international agreements protecting human health, which specify mandatory concentration limit values linked to exposure for a period of time. SO_2 concentrations are controlled by EC directive 80/779; the limit values it specifies have never been breached in London since the directive came into force.

Drinking Water

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment in how many cases during the past 12 months toxins have been found in drinking water in England and if he will analyse these to specify (a) any recognised or suspected carcinogens, (b) any recognised or suspected co-carcinogens and (c) any recognised or suspected mutagers.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Traces of many chemicals have been detected on occasion in water supplies, but their presence could not always be quantified because of their low concentrations. Medical advice has been that at these low concentrations, if any risk to health existed, it was likely to be extremely small. A sufficiently large and lengthy exposure to some of those chemicals has been shown to be toxic, carcinogenic or mutagenic in appropriate test systems, but there is no evidence that water consumers have been subject to such exposure during the past 12 months.

Homelessness

Dr. Hampson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will reconsider his decision to withdraw funding from National Debtline, in the light of rising mortgage defaulters.

Mr. Michael Spicer: This year we have trebled the funds available under section 73 of the Housing Act 1985 to £2 million. Half will go to a new homelessness advice service involving CABs, SHAC and Shelter. A key aim of this service is to prevent homelessness cases from occurring through timely and accurate general advice on debt and financial planning. The remaining £1 million goes to a total of 27 bodies providing direct assistance and practical help to single homeless people and rough sleepers. I have received a number of representations on behalf of National Debtline, the Birmingham Settlement's Housing Debtline, but I will not raise hopes of further funding this year: all the funds are earmarked.

Sir Trevor Skeet: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give the reasons why his Department discontinued a section 73 grant to Homes for Homeless People.

Mr. Michael Spicer: This year £2 million has been allocated to voluntary bodies concerned with homelessness—three times last year's total. Half will go to a new national homelessness advice service based on citizens' advice bureaux and involving Shelter and SHAC, and half to a total of 27 bodies providing direct assistance and practical help to single homeless people and rough sleepers. Priority in choosing successful applications has been given to projects which will either take single homeless people off the streets or work directly with young people, persuading them not to leave home and/or come to London.

Jones Brothers Building

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give the reasons for his Department's refusal of the urban development grant application submitted jointly by the John Lewis Partnership and the London borough of Islington in respect of the Jones Brothers building in Holloway road, London N7.

Mr. Moynihan: The application for urban development grant towards the refurbishment of the department store was rejected in August 1985 on the ground that the project did not offer good value for money in terms of the new jobs and other benefits likely to arise.

Uniform Business Rate

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what would be the cost of exempting from the uniform business rate any business the sole owner of which is principally resident in the same premises from which the business is conducted.

Mr. Chope: The information for which my hon. Friend asks is not available. However, the cost of exempting from non-domestic rates all composite hereditaments (that is, properties which are partly non-domestic and partly domestic) would be £910 million a year in England, without the transitional arrangements.

Energy Consumption

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give the number of dedicated energy managers in his Department and the number of person years devoted to energy management in the latest year.

Mr. Chris Patten: My Department currently has one dedicated energy manager and three other officials who contribute to energy conservation. The total staff effort, which does not include that available from the Property Services Agency, represents an approximate total of 1·5 person years.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give the number of energy audits carried out in his Department in the last five years and for each audit a statement of its main conclusions.

Mr. Chris Patten: A total of eight energy audits of offices and specialised sites in London and the regions carried out by external consultants have been initiated by my Department within the past five years. The majority of recommendations have concerned good housekeeping and other no-cost/low-cost measures which have been, or are in the process of being, implemented where practicable.

Departmental Savings

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what mechanisms exist in his Department for identifying and tracking value-for-money savings in its operations.

Mr. Chris Patten: My Department has a range of consultancy, inspection and review mechanisms designed to improve financial and management performance. These include internal audit and staff inspection, and an extensive range of targets and performance measures. In addition, it conducts efficiency scrutinies as part of a programme co-ordinated by the efficiency unit, and has a policy of market testing to achieve operational savings.

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what were the value-for-money savings in his Department's operations identified by internal audit and internal efficiency arrangements, by external audit and by management consultants retained by his Department between 1983-84 and 1988-89; and what is the amount of those savings fulfilled to date.

Mr. Chris Patten: Improvements resulting from audits, inspections and reviews are taken into account in the setting of annual budgets and performance targets. My Department estimates that it has achieved efficiency savings averaging in excess of 1·5 per cent. a year since 1984-85. The contribution of each of the review mechanisms to this overall saving is not separately recorded.

Langland Bay, Gower

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will place in the Library the results of the investigations in September 1989 by the water research centre of health hazards associated with bathing in the polluted waters of Langland bay, Gower.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 22 May 1990]: The water research centre report is expected soon.

Local Authority Officers

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what restrictions there are on local authority officers making statements which may have or be construed to have a political context in their capacity as lay preachers.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 22 May 1990]: The Local Government Officers (Political Restrictions) Regulations 1990 are intended to uphold the tradition of political neutrality among senior local government officers. They accordingly place restrictions on their public political activity. A politically restricted officer who was a lay preacher would not be in breach of the regulations if he were to make statements referring to a political party, a person identified with a political party or promoting or opposing a point of view identified with a political party provided there was no apparent intention to affect public support for a political party.

Landfill

Mr. Janman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has considered the value of a landfill tax to provide revenue for use in the promotion of recycling as an alternative to landfilling.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 23 May 1990]: We are considering all effective means of encouraging waste recycling.

Mr. Janman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will consider the introduction of a financial incentive to waste authorities which initiate landfill mining and reclamation through recycling.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 23 May 1990]: Any financial incentives to waste authorities that initiate landfill mining and reclamation through recycling would be contemplated only after an in-depth study of the concept and in the light of any incentives which may or may not be afforded following the current joint DOE/DTI proposals on recycling.

Mr. Janman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if his Department will make a study into the technology available at the present time and in the immediate future to recycle the contents of landfill sites in England and Wales.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 23 May 1990]: This subject is one of a number in connection with waste disposal and recycling currently under review by this Department's research and development group.

Mr. Janman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if his Department has made a study into the implications of landfill content in the event of the removal of (a) glass, (b) paper, (c) metals, and (d) other solids by source separation; what new regulations his Department will be considering to counter the increased problem of methane that may result; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 23 May 1990]: This Department has not yet made a study of the implications of landfill content in the event of removal of glass, paper, metals and other solids by source separation. The removal of metals and glass would have minimal influence on the production of methane in landfill. Paper, however, degrades in landfill to produce methane and its removal would therefore diminish the overall gas potential.

Mr. Janman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if his Department will initiate a comprehensive study into the potential of landfill mining through recycling; and what incentives his Department intends to offer the development of such schemes.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 23 May 1990]: This Department will initiate a study into the potential of landfill mining through recycling if it is considered to be a viable option by the Department's research and development group. The question of incentives would be considered subsequent to any decision made.

Mr. Janman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if his Department has made a study of the technology now available in the private sector to recycle the contents of landfill sites; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 23 May 1990]: This Department has not made a specific study of the technology available in the private sector to recycle the contents of landfill sites.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his policy in respect of lining requirements for landfill sites; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 23 May 1990]: Any decisions with regard to the lining of landfill sites are for operators in pursuit of obtaining a site operation licence or for operational reasons or for the waste disposal authority in respect of the issue of a site operation licence in consultation with the National Rivers Authority.

My Department has produced guidance documents—waste management paper 26, landfilling wastes and waste management paper 27: "The Control of Landfill Gas"—to provide assistance to site operators and licensing authorities in installing management systems and in setting licence conditions.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when officers of Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution last met officials of East Sussex county council to discuss disposal of low-level radioactive waste; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 23 May 1990]: Since the inception of HMIP in 1987 there have been no formal meetings between its officers and officials of East Sussex county council to discuss disposals of low-level radioactive waste.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those sites in east Sussex permitted to accept low-level radioactive waste, giving the maximum permitted quantity in each case, as determined by the radiochemical inspectorate branch of Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 23 May 1990]: Any waste disposal site licensed by a waste disposal authority under the Control of Pollution Act 1974 (COPA) may receive low-level radioactive waste where such a disposal method is authorised by Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution (HMIP) under the Radioactive Substances Act 1960. Waste disposal authorities maintain registers of all disposal sites licensed under COPA in their areas.

The Department does not maintain a central record of quantities of low-level radioactive waste disposed of through local disposal routes. However, a condition of authorisation requires waste producers to keep proper and detailed records relating to their disposals. These records are subject to scrutiny by HMIP inspectors and in cases where a disposal requires special precautions to be taken, both HMIP and the local waste disposal authorities are notified by the operator of the nature and destination of individual consignments of radioactive waste due for disposal.

National Rivers Authority

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received regarding resources for the National Rivers Authority.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 24 May 1990]: We are in discussion with the National Rivers Authority about resources and will be examining its future requirements in the context of considering the authority's first corporate plan.

Waste Recycling

Mr. Janman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what methods other than source separation of waste would enable his Department to achieve its target of 50 per cent. domestic waste recycling by the year 2000.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 24 May 1990]: The 50 per cent. recycling target can be achieved only by joint action by all those involved in recycling: first, by manufacturers using recycled materials and designing recyclability into their products, cutting down on the amount of unnecessary packaging and pricing recycled products competitively; secondly, by consumers knowing about and choosing recycled products and making use of recycling facilities provided by local authorities, retailers and voluntary groups; thirdly, by local authorities and retailers substantially increasing their commitment to providing recycling facilities so that the majority come up to the standard of the best; and, fourthly, by the Government setting the right waste management framework through legislation so that the real costs of alternative disposal methods are apparent and the benefits of recycling accrue to those who bring it about, co-operating with efforts to inform the public about the benefits of recycling, and bringing forward other measures such as encouraging public sector purchasing of recycled materials and promoting relevant research and monitoring studies.

Mr. Janman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will introduce legislation giving equal status and support to authorities when looking at the options of (a) source separation and (b) mechanised separation.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 24 May 1990]: The Government do not intend at present to legislate for or against any method of domestic waste separation.

Mr. Janman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has held talks with any other organisations or authorities in relation to funding, directly or indirectly, the creation of a source separation infrastructure; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 24 May 1990]: Ministers in the Department of Trade and Industry and the Department of the Environment have received advice and information about domestic waste collection and sorting methods from a wide range of sources including the advisory group on recycling, interested local authorities, voluntary groups and trade associations, and have had discussions from time to time about a number of matters relating to recycling and waste management, including the possible means of funding and managing different waste separation systems.

Low-level Ozone

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he is taking to combat the rise in low-level ozone.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 24 May 1990]: Low-level ozone is produced by the action of sunlight on oxides of nitrogen (NOx) and volatile organic compounds (VOCs). The Government are acting to reduce emissions of both classes of compound. The main sources of NOx in the United Kingdom are motor vehicles and power stations; the main sources of VOCs are motor vehicles, industrial processes and solvents. Tight new standards for new cars, which will come into effect by the end of 1992, will cut their emissions of both NOx and VOCs by at least 80 per cent. We are pressing the Commission for tight standards on NOx emissions from heavy diesels. We are committed by the EC large combustion plant directive to reducing NOx emissions from existing power stations and large industrial boilers by 15 per cent. by 1993 and 30 per cent. by 1998 against a 1980 baseline.

NOx and VOCs travel long distances and United Kingdom ozone episodes can be exacerbated by pollutants from abroad. It is therefore essential to tackle these problems internationally. The United Kingdom is strongly supporting Commission proposals for a directive requiring monitoring of ozone levels and is actively contributing to negotiations within the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe convention on long-range transboundary air pollution aimed at reducing VOC emissions from all sources.

Overhead Power Cables

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he has taken to acquaint himself with the results of studies into the possible links between overhead power lines and childhood cancers which have been carried out in Sweden and elsewhere; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 24 May 1990]: The National Radiological Protection Board is under a statutory duty to advise Government and others on possible hazards to health from ionising and non-ionising radiation. The board is currently conducting a review of epidemiological studies on an international basis (including the one carried out in Sweden) on possible effects on human health from exposure to non-ionising electro-magnetic fields. The board expects to publish its advice later this year.

SCOTLAND

Earnings

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list, for the combined regions and islands areas of Highland, Borders, Dumfries and Galloway, Orkney, Shetland and the Western Isles (a) average earnings, (b) median earnings, (c) average hours including overtime and (d) overtime hours.

Mr. Lang: For the area in question the average gross earnings in April 1989 of all full-time employees on adult rates whose pay was not affected by absence was £209·8 per week. To obtain the precise figure of median earnings would involve disproportionate cost, but the figure for all full-time employees in the sample on adult rates lies in the range of £170 to £180. Average total weekly hours were 40·7 of which overtime was 2·9.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will list, for the combined regions and islands areas of Highland, Borders, Dumfries and Galloway, Orkney, Shetland and Western Isles, the figures for female part-time workers (a) average gross weekly earnings, (b) average weekly hours, (c) average gross hourly earnings, (d) median gross hourly earnings, (e) lowest decile of gross hourly earnings and (f) highest decile of gross hourly earnings (i) in total and (ii) broken down by the standard industrial classifications;

(2) if he will list, for the combined regions and islands areas of Highland, Borders, Dumfries and Galloway, Orkney, Shetland and the Western Isles, the distribution of gross hourly earnings for female part-time workers, giving the percentage of female part-time workers, with hourly earnings less than (a) £3·00, (b) 3·20, (c) £3·60, (d) £4·00 and (e) £4·20 (i) in total and (ii) broken down by the standard industrial classifications.

Mr. Lang: Because of the small samples in the areas concerned, reliable information for female part-time employees is not available.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list, for the combined regions and islands areas of Highland, Borders, Dumfries and Galloway, Orkney, Shetland and the Western Isles, the earnings of full-time workers on adult rates of pay broken down by (a) male manual, (b) male non-manual, (c) all males, (d) female manual, (e) female non-manual, (f) all females and (g) all workers.

Mr. Lang: The available information from the 1989 new earnings survey is as follows:

Average gross weekly earnings of full-time employees on adult rates, pay not affected by absence; April 1989

	£ per week
Manual males	205·1
Non-manual males	294·0
All males	239·1
Manual females	119·3
Non-manual females	172·7
All females	157·1
All employees	209·8

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will list, for the combined regions and islands areas of Highland, Borders, Dumfries and Galloway, Orkney, Shetland and the Western Isles, the distribution of earnings for those earning under (a) £120, (b) £150, (c) £160, (d) the point below which 10 per cent. of earners fall and (e) the point which 10 per cent. of earners exceed, broken down by (i) male manual, (ii) male non-manual, (iii) all males, (iv) female manual, (v) female non-manual, (vi) all females and (vii) all workers, in total and by the standard industrial classifications;

(2) if he will list, for the combined regions and islands areas of Highland, Borders, Dumfries and Galloway, Orkney, Shetland and the Western Isles (a) average earnings, (b) median earnings, (c) average hours including overtime and (d) overtime hours, broken down by the standard industrial classifications into (i) males, (ii) females and (iii) all workers.

Mr. Lang: Only a limited amount of reliable information could be compiled in each case and the cost of doing so would be disproportionate.

Bankruptcy

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will show from each year since inception of the Bankruptcy (Scotland) Act 1985 the number of persons made bankrupt in respect of cautionary obligation.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is not separately recorded.

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland in how many sequestrations the Accountant of Bankruptcy accepted for payment accounts submitted to him by trustees in terms of section 53 of the Bankruptcy (Scotland) Act 1985 containing hourly rates of remuneration in excess of £62·50 during the year ended 31 March.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is not separately recorded.

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is (a) the maximum, (b) the minimum and (c) the average amount yet paid to a trustee for any one case of sequestration in terms of the Bankruptcy (Scotland) Act 1985.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: In those cases where the final outcome is known the amounts paid to trustees from public funds, excluding refunded outlays, were as follows:

(a) Maximum	17,866·38
(b) Minimum	258·25
(c) Average	2,889·00

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list for each year since inception the names of the 10 trustees who received the largest aggregate total sum for work carried out under the Bankruptcy (Scotland) Act 1985 and for each of the top 10 the sum received in each year.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: For commercial reasons it would not be appropriate to provide details of the level of payments made to individual practitioners.

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland in how many sequestrations the payment of fees from public funds to the trustee has exceeded the total debt of the bankrupt person; and in how many it has exceeded 50 per cent. thereof.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: In those cases where the final outcome is known the fees paid to trustees have exceeded 50 per cent. of the total debt in 15 cases and of these in five cases the fees paid to the trustee exceeded the total debt.

Cleancare Ltd.

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will review the contract of Cleancare Ltd. in the light of its employment of persons under 16 years.

Mr. Rifkind: All contracts for cleaning Scottish Office buildings are kept under continual review.

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the Government properties Cleancare Ltd. has been contracted to clean.

Mr. Rifkind: The Scottish Office properties, which are all in Edinburgh, are New Register house; Pentland house; Saughton house; 16 Waterloo place; and the Ancient Monuments depot, Edinburgh castle.

West Register House (Files)

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will detail the steps his Department has taken to ensure that cleaners or other unauthorised people do not have access to personal files in West Register house and other Government offices.

Mr. Rifkind: The measures to protect official information are in accordance with standards laid down for application throughout Government Departments.

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what personal information is held on files in West Register house.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: West Register house is a branch repository of the Scottish Record Office. Its main contents are the records of Government Departments, non-departmental public bodies, nationalised industries and courts in Scotland from the 17th century to the present day, many of which contain personal information.

Town and Country Planning

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list those district councils which have made representations concerning the Town and Country Planning (Use Classes) (Scotland) Order 1989 (S.I., 1989, No. 147) of 27 March 1989.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The following district councils have made representations:

Angus district council
Clydebank district council
Eastwood district council

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what consideration he has given to the effects on local amenities of the Town and Country Planning (Use Classes) (Scotland) Order 1989 (S.I., 1989, No. 147) of 27 March 1989.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The effects on local amenities of the provisions of the Town and Country Planning (Use Classes) (Scotland) Order 1989 were given careful consideration as part of the consultation process prior to the order coming into force. In response to the comments made on the consultation paper and to protect local amenities we removed public houses and other licensed premises from the food and drink class.

Wild Birds

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he has taken to meet the United Kingdom's obligation to protect those areas of montane habitat which meet the criteria for designation under the Ramsar convention or the European Community directive of the conservation of wild birds; and if he will list those montane sites which have yet to be so designated.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: All the potential and possible sites which meet the criteria for designation under the Ramsar convention or the European Community directive for the conservation of wild birds have been identified by the Nature Conservancy Council and are listed in tables 3.1 and 3.2 of "Protecting internationally important bird sites." Scottish Development Department circular 1/88 advised local authorities to treat such sites as if they had already been designated in considering any planning application. A copy of the circular has been placed in the Library. All have been or will be notified as sites of special scientific interest. The Nature Conservancy Council prepares a detailed submission for each site in recommending that my right hon. and learned Friend should designate either as a special protection area under the wild birds directive or as a Ramsar site.

The montane sites which have been proposed but not yet designated as special protection areas are the Cairngorms, Caenlochan, Drumochter hills, North Harris mountains, Affric-Cannich hills and glens and the North Arran mountains.

Energy Consumption

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give for each year from 1978 the energy consumption, broken down by fuel, of the buildings occupied by his Department, expressing the figures in (a) cash terms, (b) 1978-79 money terms and (c) units of consumption for electricity in kilowatt hours, gas in therms, liquid fuel in litres and solid fuel in tonnes.

Mr. Rifkind: The information requested is not available.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the number of dedicated energy managers in his Department and the number of person years devoted to energy management in the latest year.

Mr. Rifkind: A part-time energy manager has been appointed. A meaningful estimate of the number of person years cannot be made, but a large number of staff devote part of their time to energy management.

This information does not relate to the Scottish prison service and the minor Scottish Departments.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the number of energy audits carried out in his Department in the last five years and for each audit a statement of its main conclusions.

Mr. Rifkind: Twenty-seven. The large number of recommendations made were mainly of a technical nature designed to improve energy efficiency.

This figure does not relate to the Scottish prison service and the minor Scottish Departments.

Departmental Savings

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what were the value-for-money savings in his Department's operations identified by internal audit and internal efficiency arrangements, and by external audit and by management consultants retained by his Department between 1983-84 and 1988-89; and what is the amount of those savings fulfilled to date.

Mr. Rifkind: The Departments for which I am responsible pursue value for money in all their activities.

The improvements which result from inquiries and studies of the type mentioned by the hon. Member are taken into account in the setting of annual budgets and internal targets. Consistent figures for savings for the period 1983-84 to 1988-89 are not available as central records are not kept of the many improvements in efficiency which managers identify and implement.

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what mechanisms exist in his Department for identifying and tracking value-for-money savings in its operations.

Mr. Rifkind: Individual units in all the Departments for which I am responsible are required to identify value-for-money savings as part of the management planning process. These plans are brought together each year in a departmental management plan which identifies the tasks facing the departments during the public expenditure survey period and the resources required to carry them out.

In addition, the Scottish Office efficiency unit maintains a continuous programme of reviews of individual areas which identifies savings. A recently formed purchasing and supply unit also has value for money as one of its main objectives.

In all cases, responsibility for actual delivery of savings identified lies with budget managers who have substantial delegated powers for running costs.

National Heritage Agency

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if Her Majesty's Government will introduce legislation to establish a natural heritage agency to redefine the remits of the Highlands and Islands Development Board, the Forestry Commission and the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland to pay closer regard to the sustainable use of natural resources.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 21 May 1990]: We propose to bring forward legislation in due course to establish a natural heritage agency for Scotland. We intend to publish shortly a consultation paper inviting views on our proposals, including the remit of the new body and its relationship to other public bodies. I will arrange for the hon. Member to receive a copy.

Rivers

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has on measures being undertaken by the river purification boards within Scotland to improve water quality.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 24 May 1990]: The seven Scottish river purification boards, which are responsible for issuing consents for the discharge of trade and sewage effluent, setting appropriate conditions and reviewing these from time to time, carry out extensive monitoring of the waters for which they are responsible. Where necessary they refer cases of pollution to the procurator fiscal for consideration of prosecution. The boards may commission and undertake research and provide advice.

The river purification boards are required by statute to submit annual reports containing comprehensive details of their activities to my right hon. and learned Friend. Copies of these reports are placed in the Library of the House. In addition, officials of the Scottish Development Department maintain close liaison with officers of the boards regarding their work.

Bathing Waters

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proposals he has to improve water quality levels on Scottish designated bathing beaches.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 24 May 1990]: Of the 23 identified bathing waters in Scotland, 16 met the standards for total and faecal coliforms set in the EC bathing waters directive in 1989. Where failure is caused by discharges from public sewers, it is for regional councils to plan and execute improvement works in line with the requirements of the river purification boards. Improvement schemes are included in the regional councils' capital expenditure programmes. Further measures will be necessary to implement the decision, announced to the House of Commons by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment on 5 March, Official Report, column 452, that all significant discharges of sewage will require to receive treatment.

Agricultural Development Programme

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the latest administrative cost of the ADP scheme incurred by DAFS and the colleges of agriculture, respectively.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 24 May 1990]: The administrative costs (including overheads) of the agricultural development programme incurred by the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland to the end of March 1990 are estimated to be £1·103 million. There has been negligible expenditure on administration of ADP at the colleges, whose principal contribution is the provision of advisory services.

A74

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the estimated route rate of return currently anticipated from the upgrading of the A74 from existing dual carriageway to motorway.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 21 May 1990]: Of the length of the A74 to be upgraded, three sections have so far been appraised in detail. The rate of return on these three sections together is estimated at approximately 14 per cent. in real terms, that is, 14 per cent. over and above the rate of inflation.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for South Shields of 21 May, Official Report, column 84, (1) whether the cow aged 22 months came from a herd where cases of BSE had already been confirmed; whether this cow's mother had contracted BSE; and if he will make a statement;

(2) on what date BSE was confirmed in a cow aged 22 months; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: BSE was confirmed in the 22-month old cow on 28 November 1989. The disease had not been previously confirmed in the herd or its dam.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will list the published papers on scrapie produced by each member of (a) the Southwood and (b) Tyrrell agricultural committees;

(2) if he will list the published papers on bovine spongiform encephalopathy produced by each member of (a) the Southwood and (b) the Tyrrell committees.

Mr. Gummer: The members of the Southwood working party who were chosen to provide advice on bovine spongiform encephalopathy because of their eminence and experience in a variety of scientific fields under its chairman, Sir Richard Southwood, linacre professor of zoology at Oxford university, were Sir John, now Lord Walton, formerly professor of neurology at the university of Newcastle upon Tyne and a recent president of the General Medical Council and the Royal Society of Medicine; Professor M. A. Epstein, emeritus professor of pathology, university of Bristol; and veterinary microbiologist Dr. W. B. Martin, formerly director of the Moredun Research Institute in Edinburgh which undertook research into sheep diseases including scrapie.

The working party took evidence from various scientific experts, including Dr. R. H. Kimberlin, formerly director of the MRC/AFRC neuropathogenesis unit in Edinburgh. Dr. Kimberlin has conducted extensive research into scrapie and the other transmissible spongiform encephalopathies for nearly 30 years and has published more than 150 papers. He is a member of the new Tyrrell committee.

The Tyrrell committee's other members, under the chairmanship of Dr. D. A. Tyrrell of the Medical Research Council, who is a virologist with wide knowledge and experience of viruses affecting man, are, at present, Dr. R. G. Will, consultant neurologist at Western general hospital, Edinburgh, who has researched the epidemiology of Creutzfeldt Jakob disease; Dr. W. A. Watson, formerly director of the central veterinary laboratory and chairman of the Ministry's scrapie working party; and Professor F. Brown, an animal virologist who has served in an advisory capacity on a number of committees, including AFRC scrapie advisory committee.

It would be impractical to list in the Official Report all the papers published by these experts.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will list all the establishments which are (a) investigating and (b) have confirmed spongiform encephalopathy in cats or dogs;

(2) how many (a) cats and (b) dogs have been (i) confirmed and (ii) suspected of having spongiform encephalopathies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: Since recent widespread publicity and MAFF recommendations to look out for spongiform encephalopathies, there is bound to have been an increased number of investigations. I understand that investigations are being, or have been, conducted on 22 cats at a number of Ministry veterinary investigation centres, a private laboratory, and the universities of Bristol and Liverpool. Disease has been confirmed in one cat in Great Britain and in one cat in Northern Ireland. There are no suspect cases in dogs. There is not yet any indication as to whether this condition has been long present in cats or not.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on what date the Southwood committee gave him specific advice that he should be particularly alert to the possible occurrence of encephalopathies in household pets.

Mr. Maclean: The report of the Southwood working party was received by the Government on 9 February 1989.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will make a statement on his policy towards the disposal of BSE carcases; and whether he intends to review this policy;

(2) if he has investigated the environmental, and animal and human health consequences of dumping BSE carcases on refuse sites.

Mr. Gummer: Carcases are disposed of either by incineration or burial, depending upon local circumstances and available facilities. Both are safe methods of carcase disposal and carried out in accordance with sound veterinary practice. Currently around two thirds are burnt and one third buried. However, the objective is to secure incineration facilities for all carcases.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the refuse sites which are being used to dump BSE carcases listing the county in which they are found.

Mr. Gummer: This information is not held centrally.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the total number of bovine spongiform encephalophathy cases that have been confirmed by county basis in the current year until the end of May.

Mr. Gummer: The information for Great Britain is as follows:

Food Advisory Committee

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether it is his policy to circulate all written representations made to the Food Advisory Committee to the members of the committee; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: All representations of significance are drawn to the attention of members of the committee and arrangements have been made for all written representations arising from the announcement of the committee agenda to be made available for members to see at each meeting.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list consumer organisations, manufacturers and individuals who have made representations to the Food Advisory Committee since 1 January 1988, giving their names and the month in which the representations were received.

Mr. Gummer: My Department receives a considerable number of representations on matters relating to the work of the Food Advisory Committee and they are brought to the committee's attention as appropriate. Those who have made written representations received by the committee secretariat as a direct result of the committee's own press releases announcing the agenda for its meetings, which were first issued in August 1988, are listed in the following table.

Herbs and Spices

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what consideration his Ministry has given to the steam pasteurisation process for herbs and spices; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: I understand that two commercial companies claim to have developed steam pasteurisation processes for reducing microbiological contamination of herbs and spices. It is too early to say, however, whether either of these processes will provide a satisfactory replacement for chemical treatment in all circumstances. Neither process involves the sort of radically new technology which might warrant consideration by the Advisory Committee on Novel Foods and Processes.

Hounds

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what regulations exist to control the meat fed to hounds; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: There is no legislation which specifically controls meat fed to hounds. Hunt kennels may accept whole carcases, but they must not take unfit meat or specified bovine offal unless it has been sterilised. They may not of course receive carcases of animals suspected of having BSE, as these must be buried or incinerated.

Caseous Lymphadenitis

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the incidence of caseous lymphadenitis; and how many cases have been reported in the last six months in (a) goats and (b) humans.

Mr. Curry: Prior to 1990 caseous lymphadenitis had not been recorded in animals in the United Kingdom for many years. It has, however, been confirmed in three goat herds in England in the last six months all linked by the movement of stock to the same import consignment. There have been no reported cases of human infection in the United Kingdom in the same period.

The disease is found in a number of European countries and elsewhere in goats and sheep, but there are no accurate figures on the numbers of confirmed cases in animals throughout the world. Human infection has been reported on very rare occasions worldwide over a number of years, usually of an occupational disease as a result of close contact with infected animals.

Tobacco

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Minister for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much tobacco was imported into the United Kingdom from other parts of the European Economic Community in the most recent annual period for which figures are available.

Mr. Curry: During 1989 a total of 11·977 tonnes of raw tobacco was imported into the United Kingdom from other parts of the European Economic Community.

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Minister for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what price is received by tobacco manufacturers for production in the European Economic Community and what price is charged by the intervention boards for export of such tobacco to nations outside the European Economic Community.

Mr. Curry: There is no information available on the price received by tobacco manufacturers for products containing Community-grown tobacco. A wide range of prices is received by the intervention boards for tobacco sold out of intervention by tender. These prices depend on the tobacco varieties involved as well as on their quality. The following table shows the range of prices received for these tobacco varieties most frequently sold into intervention.

Energy Consumption

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will give the number of energy audits carried out in his Department in the last five years and for each audit a statement of its main conclusions.

Mr. Curry: Informal assessments of energy usage and economy are a continuing process in the Department. In addition, two specific larger-scale energy audits have been carried out in the last five years; one was at the central veterinary laboratory, which is the Department's largest single user of energy. The consultants' report, in 1987, recommended some additional metering and controls and a range of housekeeping and staff energy awareness measures, but it drew attention to the poor thermal integrity of the buildings and concluded that the major expenditure required to improve this could not be justified on energy conservation grounds alone. The other audit was of four establishments in the Ministry's south-west region, where the consultants' report, in 1989, recommended the replacement of a boiler at one of the sites and a number of smaller measures, including the installation of energy-efficient lighting tubes, more pipe insulation and additional automatic heating controls.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will give the number of dedicated energy managers in his Department and the number of person years devoted to energy management in the latest year.

Mr. Curry: None, in the sense of full-time officials, although a departmental energy efficiency manager has been appointed who spends approximately half his time on this function. A substantial number of staff throughout the country are responsible for good energy management as part of their overall buildings management duties. The time spent is linked with other work and cannot be quantified separately.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will give for each year from 1978 the energy consumption, broken down by fuel, of the buildings occupied by his Department, expressing the figures in (a) cash terms, (b) 1978-79 money terms and (c) units of consumption for electricity in kilowatt hours, gas in therms, liquid fuel in litres and solid fuel in tonnes.

Mr. Curry: The information requested is not available for the period in question. As regards the 1989-90 financial year, I refer the hon. Member to the replies given to him on 30 April, Official Report, col. 458 and 10 May, Official Report, col. 226.

EC Surplus Food

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he has any plans to extend the scope of the European Community surplus food scheme to all pensioners; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: We have no plans to extend the EC surplus food scheme beyond its present scope. European legislation requires that the food made available be distributed only to the most deprived citizens of the Community. Not all pensioners can be described as "deprived"; but those who fall into one of the categories of person eligible under this scheme may, of course, receive produce. To extend the distribution to include all pensioners would spread the limited amounts of food available so thinly as to be of little benefit to anyone.

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many valid applications were received for each of the four categories of people who qualified for this year's European Community surplus food scheme; and what (a) quantity and (b) value of differing foodstuffs is being distributed into each of these categories.

Mr. Curry: Over 500 applications to participate in the 1990 EC surplus food scheme have been received from charitable and other non-profit-making organisations throughout the United Kingdom. These applications are currently being considered and I will make a statement once a decision has been reached. Approximately 3,800 tonnes of butter and 3,000 tonnes of beef are available for distribution this year. It is not possible to distinguish the amounts or value of produce by category as many of the organisations which have applied intend to distribute to more than one of the groups of people eligible under this scheme.

Departmental Savings

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what mechanisms exist in his Department for identifying and tracking value-for-money savings in its operations.

Mr. Curry: Apart from their normal responsibilities to seek value for money in their respective areas, line managers are involved with regular reviews and evaluations of Ministry policies, efficiency scrutinies and staff inspections, all of which contribute towards identifying improvements in value for money. The Ministry's planning and budgeting processes enable savings to be taken up.

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what were the value-for-money savings in his Department's operations identified by internal audit and internal efficiency arrangements, and by external audit and by management consultants retained by his Department between 1983-84 and 1988-89; and what is the amount of those savings fulfilled to date.

Mr. Curry: Under the principles of the financial management initiative responsibility for achieving value for money is largely the responsibility of line managers, and there is no central record of savings achieved over the period 1983-84 to 1988-89.

Poultry Meat

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much poultry meat is imported into the United Kingdom from Spain.

Mr. Gummer: The United Kingdom imported 1,124 tonnes of poultry meat from Spain in 1989 and a further 480 tonnes in the first four months of this year.

Sewage Sludge Disposal

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent information he has received with regard to marine mammal problems caused by industrial and radioactive contaminants.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: A series of studies are under way or planned on contaminant levels in marine mammals, and I hope to announce shortly new studies on strandings and contaminant levels in small cetaceans (dolphins and porpoises). From the studies reported so far, including those carried out by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and the sea mammal research unit of the Natural Environment Research Council, it appears that pollutant levels in seals are at the lower end of the reported range for the North and Baltic seas and no deleterious effects have been observed which can be directly attributed to pollution.

Further studies commissioned by my Department have been designed to examine the relationship between contaminant burdens in seals and their feeding sites by studying a group of breeding female grey seals over a number of years. Breeding performance is also being monitored and preliminary results are expected soon.

In addition, the sea mammal research unit, together with the Institute of Terrestrial Ecology, has recently carried out a study of the level of radionuclides in grey seals. The full report is to be published shortly but preliminary results show that levels of radionuclides were generally low and often below detection limits and that there were no differences between samples taken from seals in the North sea and north-east Atlantic.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Lecturers' Earnings

Mr. Peter Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what has been the real increase in the average earnings of (a) polytechnic lecturers and (b) university lecturers over the period April 1980 to April 1990; and what were the cash figures in each case.

Mr. Jackson: The real increase in the average earnings of (a) polytechnic lecturers and (b) university lecturers over the period 1 April 1980 to 1 April 1990 is set out in the table. The choice of dates colours the picture: if the period to 1 May 1990 is considered the university lecturers' real-terms increase is 8·7 per cent.

	Percentage increase	Cash increase[5] £
University lecturers[1]	0·3	9,688[3]
Polytechnic lecturers[2]	6·1	10,293

[1] Based on maximum of university lecturer scale, excluding discretionary points.
[2] Based on maximum of polytechnic senior lecturer scale, from 1 April 1989. Prior to that date, based on maximum of Further Education senior lecturer scale.
[3] Excludes settlement agreed between employers and Association of University Teachers effective from 1 May 1990. This would provide a real increase of 8·7 per cent. (£11,530 in cash) over the period 1 April 1980—1 May 1990, assuming the annual rate of inflation remains unchanged from the April level of 9·4 per cent.
[4] The latest polytechnic lecturers pay settlement covered the period 1 April 1989—31 August 1990.
[5] The figures given exclude non salary earnings.

Student Accommodation, London

Mr. Churchill: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the average cost of rented accommodation for university students studying in central London for whom in-college accommodation is not available.

Mr. Jackson: Information on the rents paid by students is not collected in the form requested. However, a survey of student income and expenditure conducted by Research Services Ltd in the 1988-89 academic year contains some information about accommodation costs faced by students living in London. A copy of the survey report is in the Library.

Teacher Training

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will provide details of (i) the total expenditure of INSET by each local education authority, (ii) the average expenditure per teacher for INSET by each local education authority, (iii) the national average expenditure per teacher for INSET, and (iv) the total number of teachers in each local education authority who attended INSET within both the primary and secondary sector for the year 1989-90, or the year for which most recent figures are available.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The latest available information for the year 1989-90 is set out in the table. It refers to estimated total expenditure, from all sources, for INSET for school teachers. My right hon. Friend expects all school teachers to have received some INSET during the five non-contact days provided for in teachers' conditions of service.

Training Grants

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will list for each local authority (i) the proposed bid made for the local education authorities training grants scheme, (ii) the indicative maxima, (iii) the actual grant allocated and (iv) the national average level of grant allocated for both national and local priority expenditure on the primary sector for the year 1990-91.

Mrs. Rumbold: In most of the areas of training which DES circular 20/89 specified as national priority areas for 1990-91, and in the local priority area for the same year, allocations of the amounts of expenditure eligible for support were made on the basis of mathematical formulae reflecting the size of the relevant pupil or student population. For training of articled teachers, allocations were determined through a process of negotiation with those consortia of authorities which had expressed an interest in participating in the scheme. Initial bids for the remaining areas are shown in table A.

The indicative maxima for 1990-91 are shown in table B. Final maxima, as notified to authorities in December 1989 or March 1990, are shown in table C. This includes all areas of the scheme except training of educational psychologists, where maxima are yet to be determined.

It is for individual local education authorities to determine what proportion of their allocations should be spent on the primary sector, since they are best placed to identify the particular patterns of training needs in their own areas. In 1990-91, however, there are three national priority areas specifically directed towards training in the primary sector. These areas provide support for a total of almost £11·7 million of expenditure, allocated on a per capita basis.

Nursery Education

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has on (i) the amount of expenditure made by each local authority on nursery education in nursery schools, nursery classes and reception classes and (ii) the average unit cost per place in each local authority.

Mrs. Rumbold: The latest available data on expenditure by local authorities on nursery schools comes from returns made to the Department of the Environment on spending in 1986-87. The details are set out in the table. Subsequent returns have not separately identified spending on nursery schools, nursery classes or reception classes. The DES chapter of the annual public expenditure White Paper shows the sums within outturn spending attributed to provision for under-fives nationally, and the allowance within grant settlements for such spending—see tables 11.2 and 11.6 of Cm. 1011.

[1] Net Institutional Expenditure includes the cost of salaries and wages, premises and certain supplies and services. It does not include the cost of school meal, central administration and inspection, dept charges or revenue contributions to capital outlay.

[2] The figures are based on local education authority expenditure returns to Department of the Environment and pupil number returns to Department of Education and Science.

Polytechnic Staff

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will give the numbers and average remuneration of administrative and clerical staff employed in the polytechnic sector for each of the past five years.

Mr. Jackson: This information is not collected centrally. Publications by the Polytechnic Finance Officers Group (PFOG) for the years 1985-86 to 1987-88 give the following number of staff defined by PFOG as administrative, professional and clerical staff in the polytechnics, excluding Wales.

Actual FTE staff

	Numbers
As at 1 November 1985	3,008
As at 1 November 1986	3,315
As at 1 November 1987	3,288

The figures for 1985 and 1987 are for 28 polytechnics only.

Veterinary Students

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what discussions he has had with the universities funding council on the Page report recommendation that veterinary student places should be funded by charging an element of private fees to all veterinary students; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: None. Determination of tuition fees is for institutions themselves.

Capital Grant Allocations

Mr. Peter Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received about capital grant allocations for schools in Bolton; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Howarth: Since the announcement last December of LEAs' annual capital guidelines and capital allocations for voluntary aided and grant-maintained schools in 1990-91, my right hon. Friend has received representations about capital expenditure in Bolton from four constituents of my hon. Friend; two constituents of my hon. Friend the Member for Bolton, West (Mr. Sackville); and one from a constituent of the hon. Member for Bolton, South-East (Mr. Young). The director of education and arts for the metropolitan borough of Bolton has also written to my right hon. Friend on behalf of the authority's education and arts committee about the level of the authority's annual capital guideline for 1990-91. Finally, the governors of one primary and two high schools in Bolton have made representations directly to my right hon. Friend on the same matter.

Nationally, annual capital guidelines (ACGs) for LEA expenditure in 1990-91 total £485 million; under the old funding system, the figure for capital allocations in the current year, 1989-90, is £352 million. Authorities are free within the flexibilities of the Local Government Acts to spend above the level of their ACGs from capital receipts and other sources. The amount available to the voluntary aided sector has increased from £86 million in 1989-90 to £109 million in 1990-91. For grant-maintained schools £8·5 million has been made available in 1990-91.

Bolton local education authority's annual capital guideline for 1990-91 was £802,000. The capital allocation for the voluntary aided sector in Bolton was £137,000. The capital allocation for St James' CE school in Farnworth, a grant-maintained school, was £667,000.

The split of resources between LEA-maintained, voluntary aided and grant-maintained schools was determined with regard to the relative needs of each sector. Bolton's ACG and its voluntary aided allocation reflect the extent to which the authority's plans accorded with my right hon. Friend's criteria. It is entirely for Bolton to decide its spending priorities in the light of local needs and circumstances, and the resources available. The allocation of the available resources for the grant-maintained sector was decided by my right hon. Friend in the light of the particular circumstances of each school, taking into account previous levels of neglect. The total sum of capital grant available to grant-maintained schools in 1990-91 is about one third of the original bids: a very similar proportion to that which can be met by LEAs under their ACGs.

School-Industry Links

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the progress of links between schools and industry.

Mr. Alan Howarth: Good progress is being made in encouraging links between schools and local industry and commerce. A recent DES survey of 500 secondary and 500 primary schools, the findings of which will shortly be published in a DES statistical bulletin, found that around 90 per cent. of secondary and over 50 per cent. of primary schools had links with local businesses. The DES is involved with the Department of Trade and Industry, the Training Agency, employers, and national school-business link organisations in a range of initiatives designed to assist in the establishment of effective links between schools and industry.

Arts Education

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he last met the rector of the Royal College of Art to discuss education in the arts.

Mr. Jackson: My right hon. Friend has not yet had an opportunity to meet the rector of the Royal College of Art. However, I have myself met the rector on several occasions during the last year, most recently on 21 May when I was guest speaker at a college function and spoke about the arts in further and higher education.

Polytechnics

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he has any plans to redesignate polytechnics as universities.

Mr. Jackson: My right hon. Friend has no such plans.

Higher Education

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the findings of the Ball report on access to higher education, a copy of which has been sent to his Department.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he has received a copy of the RSA report entitled "More Means Different"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: I regard "More Means Different", the report of the RSA/Industry Matters higher education project directed by Sir Christopher Ball, as a valuable contribution to the current debate about future arrangements for higher education. It provides much for the Government and others to take into account in reviewing policies and practices.

University Teachers' Pay

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the progress of pay negotiations with university teaching unions.

Mr. Jackson: The Committee of Vice-Chancellors and Principals and the Association of University Teachers have agreed a settlement for 1990-91. This is subject to Government endorsement and the matter is now being urgently considered.

Assisted Places

Mr. Knapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the total number of schools that now participate in the assisted places schemes; and how many places they currently offer between them.

Mr. Alan Howarth: There are now 294 participating schools in England offering some 33,366 assisted places. Of these schools, 16 will be offering places for the first time from this September.

Eutrophication

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what research has been undertaken into the possible health implications resulting from prolonged contact with algae connected with eutrophication.

Mr Heathcoat-Amory: I have been asked to reply.

The Natural Environment Research Council is sponsoring research at its institute of freshwater ecology and at higher education institutions including the university of Dundee, into the basic biology of algae and the formation of algal toxins. The aquatic weeds research unit of the Agriculture and Food Research Council is studying factors that determine the build-up of algae and possible methods of control.

The National Rivers Authority has established a task force of experts to study the factors which influence the formation of algal blooms and to make recommendations upon their control. As part of this exercise the NRA has engaged the water research centre to make a full literature search and review.

School Budgets

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many school governing bodies have refused to accept responsibility for managing their own budgets.

Mrs. Rumbold: The Department has received no formal notification of any governing body refusing to accept responsibility for managing its own budget.

Student Benefits

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will estimate the number of students on part-time and non-mandatory courses in further or higher education who will lose entitlement to housing benefit, income support and unemployment benefit as a result of current proposals to withdraw students' entitlement to those benefits.

Mr. Jackson: Part-time students will not be affected by the withdrawal of students' general entitlement to housing benefit, income support and unemployment benefit. Information is not available in the form requested about students on courses of further and higher education which do not attract mandatory awards.

National Curriculum Council

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science, pursuant to his reply to the honourable Member for Truro of 21 May, Official Report, column 47, what number and proportion of the practising teachers listed as members of National Curriculum Council committees are head teachers; what information is available to him regarding the current managerial and teaching responsibilities of such head teachers; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: The number of head teachers and the proportion they make up of the practising teachers listed as members of the National Curriculum Council (NCC) committees are set out in the table. My right hon. Friend does not have available to him any information about the current managerial and teaching responsibilities of these head teachers. The NCC is solely responsible for determining the membership of its committees.

Student Loans

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many representations he has now received about the student loan scheme.

Mr. Jackson: Since the publication of the White Paper on top-up loans for students we have received about 5,900 letters, including petitions. Of those, about 1,570 have been received since publication of the Education (Student Loans) Bill.

Local Management of Schools

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the representations he has received from school governing bodies regarding local management of schools.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend continues to receive representations from individual school governors and from school governing bodies. Many of these welcome the opportunities which delegated budgeting bring to them.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many teaching jobs have been lost in each local education authority because of the introduction of LMS.

Mrs. Rumbold: No such information is available. However, LMS does not change total resources for education; there is no evidence that the introduction of LMS will lead to any reduction in the number of teaching jobs.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list by local education authority the percentage of local management of schools spending which is incurred (a) by schools, (b) by central administration and (c) under other major headings.

Mrs. Rumbold: Budget information for 1990-91 is not yet available. However, some of the information the hon. Member has requested was included in LEAs' LMS schemes submitted to my right hon. Friend last autumn, on the basis of estimates and previous years' spending, and was published in the reply that I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Epping Forest (Mr. Norris) on 5 February, Official Report, column 451.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what percentage of United Kingdom schools are currently under local management of schools; and what is his estimate for future years.

Mrs. Rumbold: Local management of schools is currently operating in England and Wales; it will be introduced in Northern Ireland from April 1991. Where a local education authority has a statutory LMS scheme, all the schools in the authority expect for the nursery and special schools fall within the scope of that scheme. At present 87 local education authorities in England and eight local education authorities in Wales have approved LMS schemes, and 81.8 per cent. of all schools in England and Wales are operating within those schemes. By April 1992 we expect all LEAs in England, including inner London, to have approved LMS schemes; 92.6 per cent. of all maintained schools in England and Wales will then be covered by schemes.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is his estimate of the saving to be made in the first and subsequent years on salary costs under local management of schools by employing a newly qualified teacher as against (a) a teacher on average salary and (b) a teacher at the top of the scale salary.

Mrs. Rumbold: The majority of teachers are on the top of the standard scale. From 1 January 1991 such a teacher without an incentive allowance and outside London will receive £16,000. On that date a good honours graduate entering the profession will be entitled to be paid at least £10,500.

Mr Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will estimate the average school budget under local management of schools for the major types of school covered; and if he will show the percentage of that budget spent on the main expenditure headings.

Mrs. Rumbold: The information from which to make such an estimate is not yet available. According to the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy education statistics 1989-90 estimates, schools' direct costs (secondary and middle deemed secondary schools) break down as follows;

Teaching staff—63.8 per cent.
Non-Teaching Staff—5.7 per cent.
Premises—14.8 per cent.
Support Services—6.2 per cent
Other—9.5 per cent.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what proposals he has for improving the training of school governors in order to cope with local management of schools; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Howarth: In 1989-90 the Government supported, under the education support grant programme, expenditure of £4.9 million on governor training and £3 million on training support staff in schools, and, through the LEA training grants programme, £10 million to provide management training for heads and senior staff in schools. For the year 1990-91 the expenditure supported will be £5.1 million for governor training, £2 million for support staff training, and £8 million for head teacher training. Further support will be available in 1991-92. Local education authorities have a statutory duty to provide governors with such training as the LEA considers necessary. It is for LEAs to determine the nature and timetable of their training programme. LEAs were required to state in their schemes for the local management of schools what arrangements they have made for support and training; the Department will be monitoring the use of ESG funds and the level of training provided.

Teacher Redundancies

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is his estimate of the average cost of making a teacher redundant.

Mrs. Rumbold: This information is not available. Redundancy payments will depend on the age and length of relevant local government service of the teacher concerned and whether additional payments have been made under the Teachers (Compensation for Redundancy and Premature Retirement) Regulations 1989. A teacher aged 55 with 20 or more years' service would be entitled to a statutory redundancy payment of £4,968.

LEA Advisers and Inspectors

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what evidence he has of difficulties in recruiting and retaining suitable staff as local education authority advisers and inspectors.

Mrs. Rumbold: None.

Teachers' Salaries

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the full salary scale for teachers.

Mrs. Rumbold: The School Teachers' Pay and Conditions Order 1990, a draft of which is presently before Parliament, will give effect to the recommendations of the interim advisory committee on teachers' pay in 1990-91. When those recommendations are fully implemented, from 1 January 1991, teachers' salary scales will be as follows:

Standard scale (all qualified teachers other than heads and deputies)

Incremental point	Salary[1] (£)

3	10,002

Nursery Places

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many nursery places are provided by (a) local authorities and other state bodies and (b) private organisations and charities for the most recent date for which figures are available.

Mrs. Rumbold: Information on the number of nursery places provided is not available centrally. The total number of pupils under five in maintained nursery schools, nursery classes in primary schools and independent schools in England in January 1989 was as follows:

	Number
Nursery schools	50,170
Nursery classes in Primary schools	245,414
Independent schools	41,175
Total	336,759

County Education Authorities

Sir David Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish a list of the extra responsibilities placed on county education authorities in each of the past two years and his best estimate of the costs of compliance by county education authorities.

Mrs. Rumbold: New and amended responsibilities placed on education authorities are generally set out in departmental circulars and administrative memoranda. Those issued in 1988 and 1989 are listed in the table. The cost of complying with these responsibilities will vary depending on the circumstances of the authority and the extent of discretion over the timing and manner of implementation. The funding implications of new education developments are considered in the discussions between the Department and the local authority associations which inform the annual grant settlement. The Department provides support for the costs of the main reforms in the Education Reform Act through its specific grant programmes. It is for each authority to decide what funds in addition to these grants it should allocate for new responsibilities from the overall resources available to it.

Schools (Northavon)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many schools were closed in each of the past five years in the constituency of Northavon.

Mr. Alan Howarth: Information for parliamentary constituencies or other areas within education authorities is not available centrally.

Independent Schools (National Curriculum)

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many inquiries he has had from independent schools regarding the adoption of the national curriculum by them; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Howarth: My right hon. Friend welcomes the interest shown by many individual independent schools, and by their representative bodies, in adopting the national curriculum. In response to this, he has arranged for the independent sector to receive copies of all national curriculum statutory orders and other national curriculum material.

Pupil-Teacher Ratios

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish the ratios of pupils to teachers in maintained schools in England for every year since 1984-85, excluding teachers on secondment or in training.

Mrs. Rumbold: The pupil-teacher ratio in maintained nursery, primary and secondary schools in England for each year since 1984-85 was as follows:

1985-86: 18·6
1986-87: 18·4
1987-88: 18·4
1988-89: 18·4

These ratios exclude teachers absent for long periods or seconded for other duties, but include any replacements. They also exclude student teachers, instructors and supply teachers.

Energy Consumption

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will give the number of dedicated energy managers in his Department and the number of person years devoted to energy management in the latest year.

Mrs. Rumbold: Eight officials across the Department have energy management responsibilities. In person years the total time they devote to these responsibilities has been set at 0.5 years. This level of commitment is broadly in line with the recommendations contained in the Audit Commission's guidelines of one central energy manager for every £1 million of annual bill.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will give the number of energy audits carried out in his Department in the last five years and for each audit a statement of its main conclusions.

Mrs. Rumbold: The PSA was responsible for undertaking energy audits on the Department's behalf until very recently. In the interim an energy audit has been conducted at both our London and Darlington headquarters buildings.

The London audit confirmed that it was possible to achieve energy savings by installing light and water control sensors, but that in view of an impending move to new premises, capital expenditure was not justified because insufficient payback time remains available.

The audit of our Darlington headquarters confirmed that useful savings could be achieved by fitting light control sensors and by installing power factor correction equipment to upgrade the electrical power supply at that site. Both these energy audit recommendations have been implemented.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will give for each year from 1978 the energy consumption, broken down by fuel, of the buildings occupied by his Department, expressing the figures in (a) cash terms, (b) 1978-79 money terms and (c) units of consumption for electricity in kilowatt hours, gas in therms, liquid fuel in litres and solid fuel in tonnes.

Mrs. Rumbold: The information sought is not held in the Department. The PSA was responsible for monitoring energy consumption on the Department's behalf until 30 March 1990.

Geography

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he expects to make proposals for geography in the national curriculum.

Mr. MacGregor: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales and I are publishing our proposals for attainment targets and programmes of study for geography tomorrow. Our proposals are based on the recommendations of the geography working group, whose final report will be published with them. Copies of the proposals will be placed in the Library.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Disabled People (Benefits)

110.Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will review the operation of and procedures for medical assessments for benefits to disabled people.

Mr. Scott: We regularly monitor the operation of the current procedures and take action as appropriate. We are considering what changes are needed to these procedures for the new disability allowance. Our aim is that these should be helpful, and accessible to claimants.

Child Care and Family Services

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what mechanisms his Department has to deal with services and policies on child care and family services.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 23 April 1990 at column 15.

Widow's Pension

Sir Dudley Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he will give a full reply to the letter of 15 January from the hon. Member for Warwick and Leamington in connection with the widow's pension of Mrs. Joan Bains of Leamington Spa.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The issue raised by my hon. Friend is a complex one and I shall give him a full reply to his letter as soon as possible.

Disability Employment Credit

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether people in receipt of the income support or housing benefit disability premium before receiving the new disability employment credit, immediately requalify for their original benefits, if they subsequently chose to leave paid employment.

Mr. Scott: The detailed arrangements for the disability employment credit are under consideration. Our proposals are set out in chapter 5 of "The Way Ahead. Benefits for Disabled People" which we published on 10 January 1990.

Benefit Claimants

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will publish his latest estimates of the number of claimants for each of the main social security benefits, including community charge benefit;

(2) if he will publish his latest estimates of (a) the number of claimants receiving each of the main social security benefits including poll tax rebates and (b) the total number of individuals in receipt of one or more benefits.

Mr. Scott: The latest estimates of the average number of recipients for each of the main social security benefits are given in the public expenditure White Paper, Cm 1014, table 14.11, except for community charge benefit, where, in view of a level of charges higher than originally assumed, it is now estimated that numbers will be in excess of 8 million. Information is not held on the number of individuals in receipt of more than one benefit. The information requested at (b) is therefore not available.

Pensions

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what increase in contributions would be required in each of the next five years to build up the national insurance fund in order to be able to fund pensions for men payable from 60 years from that date.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The national insurance fund operates on a "pay as you go" basis, with current contribution income financing current benefit expenditure, rather than on the basis of accruing funds to meet possible future outgoings. The information is not therefore available in the form requested.

Income Support

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the (a) number of income support claimants, (b) number of partners and dependent children of income support claimants and (c) total on income support; and what was the percentage change in numbers of those on income support for each year since 1979.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The information requested is in the table.

Income Support/Supplementary Benefit

(Thousands)

Year	Claimants (a)	Partners and dependent children (b)	(a+b) (c)	Percentage change in (c) since previous year (d)
1979	2,855	1,516	4,371	—
1980	3,118	1,745	4,863	11·3
1981	3,723	2,399	6,122	25·9
1982	4,267	2,803	7,070	15·5
1983	4,349	2,888	7,237	2·4
1984	4,609	3,119	7,728	6·8
1986[1]	4,938	3,353	8,291	7·3
1987	4,896	3,309	8,205	−1·0

1979-88 annual statistical inquiries.

1989 Provisional figures based on May quarterly statistical inquiry.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claimants moved off income support in April 1989 and April 1990 in consequence of the uprating of social security benefits.

Mrs Gillian Shephard: I regret that the information is not available.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will set out the real-terms value of supplementary benefit income support for (a) a young person aged 20 years and (b) a married couple over 25 years each year since 1979, on an index basis taking 1979 = 100.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The question is not sufficiently specific concerning the circumstances of the 20-year-old and married couple to allow a table to be drawn up.

Benefits (Blyth Valley)

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many (a) men and (b) women were receiving invalidity benefit and severe disability allowance in Blyth Valley at the latest date for which figures are available.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I regret that the information is not available in the precise form requested. The Blyth Valley constituency is served by the Department's local social security office at Blyth, but their boundaries are not conterminous. Nor does the local count of cases in action distinguish between men and women beneficiaries.

The table shows the numbers of people claiming sickness benefit, invalidity benefit and severe disablement allowance at Blyth local office as at 30 April 1990, the latest date for which information is available:

	Numbers
[1]Sickness/Invalidity Benefit	4,340
Severe Disablement Allowance	435

[1]The local office count of cases in action does not distinguish between Sickness and Invalidity Benefit.

Source: 100 per cent of cases in action. The figures quoted may include a number of cases not actually in receipt of benefit. Data are provisional and subject to amendment.

Community Charge

Sir Ian Gilmour: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what will be the effect of the community charge on the numbers of working people caught in the poverty trap.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The latest figures showing the distribution of marginal deduction rates are contained in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Hornchurch (Mr Squire) on 5 April 1990 at column 790. Earlier figures were published in table 14.19 of the "Government's Expenditure Plans 1990-91 to 1992-93" chapter 14 (Cm 1014). However, it is not possible to make meaningful comparisons in order to isolate the effect of the community charge owing to a number of changes which have occurred since the publication of table 14.19 and the fact that it would be necessary to speculate on what the level of general rates might have been had they remained in place.

Mr. Higgins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of whether the income of those on income support is being reduced as a result of the introduction of the community charge; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Everyone on income support is eligible for a maximum rebate of 80 per cent. of their community charge and income support levels were adjusted in April 1989 to provide help on an average basis towards the remaining 20 per cent. On average, therefore, the introduction of the community charge will have had a neutral effect on the incomes of those on income support.

Child Benefit

Sir Ian Gilmour: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the current levels of child benefit if it had been uprated since April 1979 in line with (a) the retail price index and (b) the single person's tax allowance; and what would be the net costs after allowing for benefit savings elsewhere in the system, of uprating it to those amounts now.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The levels would be (a) £8.66, (b) £10.32.

The net costs of uprating to these levels would be £660 million and £1,440 million respectively.

Sir Ian Gilmour: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, further to his reply to the right hon. Member for Chesham and Amersham, Official Report, 5 March, column 532, what would be the cost of restoring the combined 1979 value of child benefit plus long-term national insurance addition for children of widows, invalidity and retirement pensioners.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: It is estimated that the cost would be approximately £56.7 million.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what has been the saving in public expenditure from the freezing of child benefit each year since 1987 and cumulatively, at current and 1990 prices.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The sums involved for each of the years are as follows:

Year	£ million
1988-89	140
1989-90	210
1990-91	285

On a cumulative basis this would be about £1,125 million in cash terms and £1,185 million at 1990-91 prices.

Over the same period the following extra help was channelled to the least well-off families—those in receipt of income support or family credit—who do not gain from an increase in child benefit:

Year	£ million
1988-89	200
1989-90	70
1990-91	70

The cumulative figures on the same basis as above would be around £800 million and £850 million respectively.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much it would have cost his Department to increase child benefit by double the level of index in 1989-90.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: About £645 million.

Pensions (Incomes)

Sir Ian Gilmour: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, further to his reply to the hon. Member for Oldham, West (Mr. Meacher), Official Report, 4 April, columns 687-92, if he will republish the figures in table 4 of the answer showing housing benefit, standard and certificated, separately from retirement pension.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The information is not available in the precise form requested. The table shows housing benefit separately from retirement pension.

Notes:
1. All cash figures are £ per week (to nearest 10 pence) at 1987 prices.
2. All figures refer to pensioner tax units.
3. Retirement pension and related benefits includes basic retirement pension, additional pension, income support and housing benefit.
4. In common with all other surveys, the Family Expenditure Survey draws information from a random sample of the population. This means that the FES will occasionally include some individuals whose weekly income are considerably higher or lower than those of the remainder of their group. The unrepresentative income of such individuals when averaged may give wide swings in year-to-year comparisons. In general when viewed over the longer term, the data provides a more reliable overall indication of the movement in average weekly incomes.
5. Prior to 1984 there is no information on a full year basis on standard and certified Housing Benefit.
6. For 1984-1987 the data from the FES is not sufficiently accurate to provide separate figures on the average amounts of certificated and standard Housing Benefit.

Social Fund

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much money in loans was given from the social fund in 1989-90.

Mr. Scott: Provisional loans expenditure in 1989-90 was £141 million.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much money is available in the social fund for loans in 1990-91.

Mr. Scott: The loans budget for 1990-91 is £152 million.

Unemployment Benefit

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the expenditure on earnings-related unemployment benefit each year since 1975, at current and at 1990 prices; and what is the estimated saving in public expenditure from the abolition of earnings-related unemployment benefit each year since 1982 and cumulatively, at current and at 1990 prices.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Expenditure on earnings-related unemployment benefit from 1975 to 1982 is shown in the table.

£ million

	Original price	1990-91 price
1975-76	73	247
1976-77	87	254
1977-78	92	248
1978-79	90	214
1979-80	85	171

	Original price	1990-91 price
1980-81	170	306
1981-82	176	292

Information on the expenditure saving from the abolition of earnings-related unemployment benefit each year since 1982 is not available. In 1982 it was estimated that the public expenditure saving in the first full year from the abolition of earnings-related unemployment benefit was around £100 million at 1982-83 prices; this converts to about £150 million at 1990-91 prices. Following recent research into the work history of the newly unemployed, it is now estimated that if earnings-related unemployment benefit were to be reintroduced the gross cost would be around £200 million in the current financial year. There would be an offsetting saving of about £50 million on income support.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many councils in England and Wales are not taking war pensions into account when assessing housing benefit claims; and if he will put a list of these in the Library.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Liverpool, Mossley Hill (Mr. Alton) on 14 December 1989 at columns 758-62.

Attendance Allowance

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what was the total number of applications for attendance allowance received in the United Kingdom in each year since 1980;

(2) how many applications for attendance allowance were refused in each year since 1980;

(3) how many applications for attendance allowance were granted (a) at the higher and (b) at the lower rate in each year since 1980.

Mr. Scott: The details requested for Great Britain are in the table.

Year	Initial Claims Received	Awards and Rate Higher	Lower	Rejections
1980	147,367	38,796	60,527	39,613
1981	166,572	42,526	65,493	40,608
1982	193,457	53,981	81,550	45,985
1983	233,480	61,166	98,325	57,816
1984	257,747	67,445	114,325	58,004
1985	277,017	66,218	118,381	70,526
1986	286,889	61,457	112,607	76,497
1987	319,667	78,338	130,355	91,888
1988	361,720	74,058	133,795	110,527
1989	365,219	83,647	145,095	100,973

Some claims are withdrawn before decision and some are decided in a different year from that in which they are made.

Security Screens (Benefit Offices)

Mr. Haselhurst: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his policy on the use of security screens in benefit offices.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Security screens are installed at reception points and in interview rooms of local social security offices where it is considered appropriate.

Students

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the total saving to public expenditure expected in respect of the proposed withdrawal of students' entitlement to (i) housing benefit, (ii) unemployment benefit and (iii) income support in this and the next financial year.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The Government's proposal is to withdraw housing benefit, unemployment benefit and income support entitlement from full-time students from the start of the 1990-91 academic year. The reduction in public expenditure from these benefit changes in the current financial year is estimated at £29 million. This reduction arises from housing benefit only, since students are not currently eligible for unemployment benefit during term time and the short vacations. Similarly, the vast majority of full-time students are ineligible for income support other than in the long summer vacation. In the next financial year reductions in public expenditure are estimated to be £51 million from housing benefit and £28 million from income support and unemployment benefit. It is not possible to provide a disaggregated figure for unemployment benefit as separate details of claims are not kept.

The reduction in public expenditure arising from these benefits changes will be more than offset by a total of over £200 million which is being made available in the next academic year through the student loans scheme and access funds.

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the total numbers of students currently in receipt of (i) housing benefit, (ii) income support during the long vacation and (iii) unemployment benefit during the long vacation.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Provisional quarterly figures for February 1990 indicate that around 90,000 students were in receipt of housing benefit at that time. This figure includes those receiving rate rebate only as well as those receiving rent allowance and rent rebate. The number of students receiving rent allowances or rent rebates can be separately identified only from the annual one in 100 sample of cases. Figures for May 1989 should be available shortly. A special exercise conducted in DSS local offices in the 1989 summer vacation identified 135,000 student claims for income support lasting, on average, six weeks.

I regret that information on the numbers of students receiving unemployment benefit is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what information his Department collects on the numbers of students claiming housing benefit, unemployment benefit and income support.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Information on the number of students claiming housing benefit is obtained from a quarterly count of cases by local authorities and from the annual one in 100 sample of case details.

Details of the numbers of students registered as unemployed are collected on a monthly basis and published in the Employment Gazette. It is not, however, possible to differentiate between those claiming unemployment benefit and those claiming income support.

A special exercise was mounted in the 1989 summer vacation to provide details of student claims to income support, including numbers claiming, duration of claim and amount of benefit paid.

Incomes (Yorkshire)

Mr. Patchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people in Yorkshire are on less than half the average income; how many are below average incomes; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The Government do not publish statistics on living standards disaggregated on a regional basis. However, a recent publication by the Social Services Select Committee contains results of an analysis carried out by the Institute for Fiscal Studies. Copies of the publication—"Households and Families Below Average Income: a Regional Analysis"—are available in the Library.

Allowances (Clydebank and Milngavie)

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people in Clydebank and Milngavie, or in the administrative units approximating to this area for which the information is available, are in receipt of (a) invalid care allowance, (b) attendance allowance and (c) severe disablement allowance.

Mr. Scott: I regret that details of the numbers of people in Clydebank and Milngavie receiving (a) invalid care allowance and (b) attendance allowance are not available.

As at 30 April 1990, the latest date for which the information is held, the numbers of people receiving severe disablement allowance from the Department's local social security offices at Clydebank and Glasgow (Maryhill) which serve the Clydebank and Milngavie constituency, although their boundaries are not conterminous, were:

	Numbers
Clydebank	334
Glasgow (Maryhill)	277

Source: 100 per cent. count of cases in action. The figures quoted may include a small number of cases not actually in receipt of benefit. Data are provisional and subject to amendment.

Energy Consumption

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give the number of dedicated energy managers in his Department and the number of person-years devoted to energy management in the latest year.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: In the financial year 1989-90 the division of the administration of the Department of Health and Social Security was not complete, and the following information reflects the position for both Departments.

There is one dedicated energy manager and each accommodation manager has a proportion of his time allocated for energy management. As information about the latter is not readily available it is not possible to calculate the total number of person years devoted to energy management.

Benefit Payments

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many times, in each of the latest years for which information is available, the provision to make payments to another person on the beneficiary's behalf under regulation 34 of S.I. No. 1968, 1987 has been (a) used and (b) used to pay benefit to the partner of a claimant.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The information requested could be obtained only at disproportionate cost as no record is kept of the number of cases in which regulation 34 of SI 1987/1968 (the Social Security (Claims on Payments) Regulations 1987) is used to make payments to another person on the beneficiary's behalf.

National Insurance

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what has been the end-of-year surplus/deficit on the national insurance fund in each year since 1979; and what has been the income and outgoings from the fund in each of these years.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The information for the years up to and including 1988-89 is in the table. Final figures for 1989-90 are not yet available.

Child Maintenance

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will place a copy in the Library of the new instructions to local offices on (a) assessing absent parents' ability to pay maintenance and (b) interviewing lone parents about the identity of the absent father.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Local office instructions covering the assessment of benefit and the related adjudication guidance from the office of the chief adjudication officer are published. However, it is not our practice to publish local office operational instructions because to do so would risk increased and unnecessary abuse of the benefits system.

Public Appointments

Mr. Grocott: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the full-time and part-time public appointments for which he is responsible, together with the salary and the date when each appointment is due for renewal.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 23 May 1990]: Details of some of the full-time and part-time public appointments for which the Secretary of State for Social Security is responsible can be obtained from the Cabinet Office publication "Public Bodies 1989". A copy is in the Library. Details of salaries and fees can be obtained from the same source.

The dates on which all these appointments are due for renewal are not recorded centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The readily available information is in the table.

Name of Body	Appointment Renewal Dates
Attendance Allowance Board	2 due during 1980 4 due during 1991 4 due during 1992

Occupational Pensions Board	6 due during 1990 2 due during 1991 5 due during 1992

In addition, the Secretary of State is responsible for the following appointments:

Independent Living Fund. Five appointments, which are due for renewal in 1993. No salaries or fees paid.

Social Fund Commissioner. One appointment, which is due for renewal during 1990. Salary is £15,758.

Pension Age

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received concerning equal state pension age; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: We have received a total of 119 representations in the year to 27 April 1990.

National Insurance Contributions

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list those categories of workers who pay National Insurance contributions as both employers and employees; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: We are not aware of any circumstances in which an individual will be liable for both employer's and employee's contributions in respect of the same occupation.

Medical Appeal Tribunals

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many female chairmen of medical appeal tribunals in Scotland there are.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The administration of medical appeal tribunals is the responsibility of the president of the social security and medical appeal tribunals, His Honour Judge Holden. His office advises that there are no female chairmen of medical tribunals in Scotland.

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many female medical practitioner members of medical appeal tribunals in Scotland there are.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The administration of medical appeal tribunals is the responsibility of the president of the social security and medical appeal tribunals, His Honour Judge Holden. His office advises that there are two female medical practitioner members of medical appeal tribunals in Scotland.

HEALTH

Family Doctor Service

14. Mr. Hanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on funding for the family doctor service.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We will spend almost £1,800 million this year on the family doctor service, 77 per cent. more in real terms than in 1979-80.

Social Work Training

15. Mr. Orme: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will bring forward proposals to improve basic social work training.

19. Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will bring forward proposals to improve basic social work training.

90. Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will bring forward proposals to improve basic social work training.

102. Mr Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will bring forward proposals to improve basic social work training.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Government have accepted the need to improve training for social workers and other social care staff. We are therefore implementing a balanced programme of improvements to provide a comprehensive, progressive continuum of education, training and qualifications for all social work and care staff in the personal social services.

For social work qualifying training this includes the provision of additional funding for phasing out one-year post-graduate courses in favour of a minimum of two years' training, improvement to the quality and quantity of practice placements and improvements to course curricula. We are also making additional funds available to the Central Council for Education and Training in Social Work to introduce a new qualifying course at higher education level, the diploma in social work, which will replace the existing qualifying courses over time. This new award, developed in consultation with educational, employment and professional interests, represents a radically improved approach to qualifying training for social workers which will enable students to acquire the knowledge, skills and values required for competent practice as a social worker.

Mr. Dorrell: On 14 May I announced that the Government were formally consulting on the introduction of the care programme approach for people with a serious mental illness. Westminster and Chelsea Hospital

22. Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the revised estimate of the cost of the proposed Westminster and Chelsea hospital.

Mr. Dorrell: The estimated cost of the Westminster and Chelsea hospital is approximately £203 million. This figure is based on the estimated construction cost of around £178 million plus equipment and fees. The estimates take account of expected inflation over the period of the contract which is due for completion in mid-1992.

91. Mr. Cunliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he has as to how many ballots of staff and patients on the question of the formation of self-governing trusts have resulted in majorities in favour.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: We are aware that ballots on the establishment of National Health Service trusts have taken place in a number of units. However, we have consistently made clear that it would not be sensible for changes in management of National Health Service services to be subject to ballots. Applications for National Health Service trust status will not be invited until Parliament has approved the necessary legislation. Staff and the local community will then have an opportunity to express their views on individual proposals before any decisions are made.

Hip Replacements

25. Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the current waiting time for hip replacement operations; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The latest information held centrally about waiting times by operation is for 1985 and is published in "1985 Hospital in-patient enquiry main tables for England series number MB4 No. 27", a copy of which is available in the Library. Information on waiting times in 1988-89 for specific types of operation is expected to be available shortly.

80. Mr. Flannery: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action his Department is taking following the publication of the National Audit Office report on maternity services.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The National Audit Office reported that, despite the halving of infant mortality rates between 1985 and 1987, there remained wide-ranging geographical variations in the incidence of infant mortality. Last July, in the Government reply to the first report from the Social Services Committee (Session 1988-89) on "Perinatal, Neonatal and Infant Mortality" (Cm 741), we announced a major new initiative to address this problem. The National Audit Office endorsed our approach and we are taking its findings into account in its implementation.

Figures just published by the Office of Population, Censuses and Surveys in its weekly monitor bulletin of 16 May, a copy of which is available in the Library, show that the decline in infant mortality continued in 1989 and rates are now lower than in any previous year.

General Practitioner Practices (Staff)

33. Dr. Woodcock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the number of practice staff in the average general practitioner service practice.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The average number of practice staff per partnership qualifying for direct reimbursement was 6·3 (3·7 whole-time equivalents) in 1988, the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Dorrell: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply my hon. Friend the then Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State gave my hon. Friend the Member for Welwyn, Hatfield (Mr. Evans) on 23 January at column 670. Additional preventive medicine initiatives mounted by the Department since 23 January include:

(a) support for a wide range of programmes to prevent the spread of HIV infection through local authorities and health authorities, voluntary bodies and the Health Education Authority, whose latest mass media campaign was launched on 14 February 1990.

(b) the launch of the latest national drug publicity campaign in February at a cost of £3·8 million. Its aim is to maintain the current level of awareness about the dangers of drug misuse among young people. Complementary regional campaigns are being run in Yorkshire, Mersey and West Midlands.

(c) the funding by the Department, through the Health Education Authority, of the appointment of regional alcohol misuse co-ordinators in each of the 14 health regions. Their tasks include encouraging all the relevant agencies within their regions to co-operate in ensuring that help is available for people who misuse alcohol or are at risk of doing so, and in promulgating the importance of drinking sensibly. National Drinkwise Day on 12 June will provide a focus for health education about the dangers of alcohol misuse.

(d) as part of the "Look After Your Heart" programme a national fitness survey, jointly sponsored by the Department of Health, the Health Education Authority, and the Sports Council in conjunction with Allied Dunbar, was launched on 20 February 1990 to measure the nation's fitness. This entails the study of at least 6,000 adults of all ages to explore the relationship between exercise, fitness and health.

(e) as a further contribution to the "Look After Your Heart" programme, the national Heartbeat Award scheme was launched on 26 April 1990. This award is intended to encourage caterers to play an active role in reducing coronary heart disease by promoting healthy food choices, smoke-free areas and good standards of food hygiene. The award is endorsed and implemented by the Institute of Environmental Health Officers.

(f) together with the Health Education Authority and regional health authorities, 28 regional "Look After Your Heart" officers are in the process of being appointed and

(g) the preparation, with the Health Education Authority, of a further phase of a major education campaign on vaccination and immunisation due to be launched in September 1990. This has already been piloted in the north-west region.

National Health Service, North Debyshire

36. Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will meet a delegation of North Derbyshire health authority members to discuss cuts in the National Health Service; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: Members of North Derbyshire health authority should discuss any concerns they have with the chairman of the Trent regional health authority which is the body responsible for allocating North Derbyshire's resources. National Health Service funding has risen to £29·1 billion this year and is well ahead of inflation on any measure; North Derbyshire's budget of £64·1 million represents an increase of nearly 3 per cent. over last year.

Out-patient Departments

39. Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether any initiatives are being taken to improve out-patient departments.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The following initiatives have been taken by the Department to improve out-patient departments:

i. Out-patient Demonstration Projects—Aims

As part of the Government's drive to raise quality standards in hospitals, the Department is supporting six demonstration projects in out-patient departments at a total cost of £750,000. The aim is to improve the quality of services and make them more responsive to the needs of consumers by providing care in pleasant physical surroundings with better facilities, clear information to patients and effective appointment systems. The first results will be disseminated as good practice advice to the health service later this year.

ii Demonstration Projects to be Funded 1990-91

Some five more projects are likely to be funded in 1990-91. Health authorities and units will be informed in June 1990 which projects have been selected.

iii. Waiting Times in Out-patients

A report issued in December 1989 on "Reducing Waiting Time in Out-patient Departments' is now being followed up by development of a visual simulation package to assist NHS out-patient departments in planning efficient appointment systems.

iv. Role of Nurses and other Non-Medical Staff in Out-patients

A departmental study report on "The Role of Nurses and other Non-Medical Staff in Out-patient Departments" was issued to health authorities in March 1990. The report contains proposals for changing the skill mix of qualified and non-qualified staff better to reflect the nature of tasks undertaken and to make the best use of available resources.

GP Contracts

40. Mr. Favell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he has received any representations claiming that patients are being removed from doctors' lists as a result of the new general practitioners' contract.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I have received a number of such representations and I have had the facts investigated wherever possible. None of these cases has proved to result from the GPs' new contract and some well-reported complaints have proved to be quite inaccurate. As I have repeatedly said, it is dishonest and unprofessional for GPs to suggest that the Government's new contract justifies the removal of any patient from a practice list.

43. Mr. Brandon-Bravo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the effect of the new general practitioners' contract on the family doctor service.

49. Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the operation of the new general practitioner contracts.

69. Mr Charles Wardle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the effect on service to patients of the new general practitioners' contract.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer my hon. Friends and the hon. Member to the reply my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State gave the hon. Member for Cunninghame, South (Mr. Lambie) on 1 May at columns 517-18.

The rest of the cost of practice staff is reimbursed indirectly through GPs' fees and allowances.

[3] 1989-90 figures are on a similar basis but show provisional out-turn.

[4] 1990-91 figures are preliminary allocations for cash limited expenditure on direct reimbursement of practice staff costs, cost rents and improvement grants and estimated non cash limited expenditure on other rent and rates.

85. Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals he has for the improvement of family planning services.

86. Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals he has for the improvement of family planning services.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The day-to-day management of family planning services is a matter for individual health authorities since they can best judge local circumstances and priorities. The Government continue to regard family planning as an important preventive service and guidance issued by the Department of Health makes it clear that health authorities should ensure that full use is made of family planning services, and that a proper balance is struck between services provided by specialist clinics and those provided by GPs.

57. Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on his policy towards the establishment of needle exchange schemes to reduce the spread of HIV among injecting drug misusers.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We issued guidance to health authorities in September 1988 on establishing syringe exchange schemes. We estimate that there are currently some 120 schemes in England and schemes are now starting in Wales. Selected schemes continue to be monitored. Overall, our aim is to determine their effectiveness in changing drug misusers' behaviour away from practices which carry a risk of acquiring or transmitting HIV infection.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Hospital doctors' pay has risen by more then 33 per cent. in real terms since 1979. For details of the 1990 pay settlement for National Health Service hospital doctors, I refer my hon. Friends to the reply my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister gave my hon. Friend the Member for Gainsborough and Horncastle (Mr Leigh) on 1 February at columns 260-62.

We have recently issued detailed guidance to health authorities on consultant's contracts. By 1 April 1991 all hospital consultants will have job plans agreed with local managers setting out their main responsibilities and their fixed commitments in the National Health Service.

The issue of junior doctors' hours remains a priority for the Government. I recently met representatives of all the key parties, including the profession and National Health Service management, to discuss the way forward. A working group has been established to explore the key issues.

78. Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the latest figure for the number of hospital doctors in the National Health Service.

Patient Care

81. Dame Jill Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether any initiatives are being taken to promote a better quality of care for patients.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The White Paper reforms aim to provide a better National Health Service with more attention to quality of care and customer service flowing from greater devolution, the separation of purchaser and provider functions and the introduction of contracts, wider choice and the extension of medical and clinical audit. These proposals are being reinforced by a £10 million programme of project-based initiatives to make the consumers' interest more central to the management and delivery of health care. The Government have also initiated talks with the royal colleges and other statutory bodies with an interest in assessing clinical standards in the National Health Service after implementation of the reforms. Agreement has been reached on the provision of advice and assistance in the assessment and monitoring of clinical standards for all National Health Service patients through a clinical standards advisory group. An amendment to the National Health Service and Community Care Bill has been tabled to provide a statutory basis for the group.

Regional Health Authorities (Funding)

84. Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a further statement on funding for regional health authorities in 1990-91.

Mr Dorrell: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply my hon. Friend the then Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State gave my hon. Friend the Member for Hyndburn (Mr. Hargreaves) on 1 May at column 523.

88. Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he last visited St. George's hospital, Tooting to discuss doctors' working hours.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State has not visited St. George's hospital to discuss this matter.

On 10 April 1990 I met the representatives of health departments, the joint consultants committee, including the presidents of the Royal Colleges of Surgeons and Physicians, the British Medical Association and National Health Service management, to begin the process of identifying and implementing ways forward on the complex issue of junior doctors' hours.

A working group is to explore the main issues relating to junior doctors' hours and strategies for tackling them. They are expected to make an initial report to the ministerial group during the summer.

Organ Transplants

92. Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what further representations he has received about the availability of human organs for transplantation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: Since the reply given to my hon. Friend by my hon. Friend the then Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Health on 5 April 1990 at columns 736-37, we have received representations from hon. Members on behalf of the president of the British Kidney Patient Association and of several constituents. We are also in frequent contact with organisations and individuals interested in promoting organ donation.

Hospital Patients

93. Mr. Donald Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many in-patients are being treated annually by the National Health Service.

Mr. Dorrell: In the year ending March 1989, 6·6 million in-patient cases were treated in National Health Service hospitals in England, representing an increase of 22 per cent. since 1979.

NHS Services

95. Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what major changes there have been in provision of services within the National Health Service since 1979.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Since 1979, the level of spending on the National Health Service in the United Kingdom has increased by nearly 44 per cent. in real terms and the gross annual expenditure on the service now stands at over £29 billion (1990-91). The numbers of people providing care has also increased. There are 14,000 more doctors and dentists and 68,000 more nurses and midwives. These extra resources mean that 44,000 NHS operations are now carried out every week including a 22 per cent. increase in in-patient treatments, a 6.5 per cent. increase in out-patient attendances and an 81 per cent. increase in day cases over the 1979 totals. Considerable improvements have also been made in screening, vaccination and immunisation. Over 90 per cent. of low birth weight babies now survive the crucial first four weeks of life. The impact of these and other developments including the general improvement in standards of living can be seen in changes to key indicators such as the decline in the rate of infant mortality which now stands at an all-time low and the increase in life expectancy.

Day Patients

99. Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many day-patient cases were treated last year.

Mr. Dorrell: In the year ending March 1989 there were over 1 million day-case admissions in England representing an increase of over 70 per cent. since 1979.

NHS Management

101. Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what changes are being made in management within the National Health Service.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The National Health Service management executive is in close contact with regional health authorities as they take forward proposals for the delegation of functions and other management aspects of "Working for Patients". Considerations include the need for any changes to be made to management structures both in health authorities and units to improve services.

Progress overall in the implementation of the NHS review is good and we remain confident that management arrangements will be in place to enable the reforms contained in the NHS and Community Care Bill to be implemented next year, resulting in improved standards, more effective use of resources and better patient care.

Patient Choice

104. Mr. Janman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health in what specific ways the National Health Service reforms will extend patient choice; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Batley and Spen (Mrs. Peacock) on 1 May 1990 at column 534.

General Practitioners

105. Mr. Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general practitioners there are currently.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave my hon. Friends the Members for Beverley (Mr. Cran) and for Erith and Crayford (Mr. Evennett) earlier today.

Hospital Waiting Lists, Northumberland

106. Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the total number of patients on the Northumberland health authority's hospital waiting lists; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: At 30 September 1989, a total of 1,610 patients were awaiting admission to hospital for in-patient treatment and 491 were awaiting day case treatment in Northumberland health authority. In September 1987, the corresponding figures were 1,789 and 539. Between September 1987 and September 1989 the percentage of patients waiting over a year fell from 20 per cent. to 11 per cent. for in-patients and from 7 per cent. to 3 per cent. for day cases.

Medicine Imports

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his estimate of the number of overseas production sites supplying parallel imports of medicines to the United Kingdom market under licence from his Department; and how many such overseas sites have been inspected by the United Kingdom's medicines inspectors in each of the last five years.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: There are 143 overseas production sites currently listed on product licences for parallel imported medicinal products. Inspections of these sites carried out by United Kingdom medicines inspectors over the last five years are as follows:

Year	No. Inspections
1989	7
1988	5
1987	5
1986	12
1985	1

Additional visits have been carried out on behalf of the United Kingdom by local inspectorates.

Regional Health Authorities (Creditors)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list by regional health authority the amounts creditors were due to be paid that were (a) one month, (b) two months, (c) three months, (d) four to six months, (e) six months to one year and (f) over a year overdue.

Mr. Dorrell: This information is not available centrally.

Land Sales

Mr Ralph Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if, pursuant to his parliamentary reply of 9 May, Official Report, column 128, he will give a breakdown of the figures given for the proceeds from disposal of National Health Service land in the East Anglian region, to show proceeds in each of the district health authorities in the East Anglian region, for 1984-85, 1985-86, 1986-87, 1987-88 and 1988-89.

Mr. Dorrell: The regional health authority has provided the information in the following table. They are unable to provide a breakdown by districts for the years 1984-85 and 1985-86.

Income from land sales

District Health Authority	1986-87	1987-88	1988-89
Cambridge	160,890	178,271	2,809,500
Peterborough	146,250	72,000	387,499
West Suffolk	1,860,400	124,900	2,182,500
East Suffolk	736,723	945,582	2,310,460
Norwich	449,286	1,201,120	1,800,706
Great Yarmouth and Waveney	328,250	349,475	60,000
West Norfolk and Wisbech	220,503	419,838	1,013,150
Huntingdon	29,580	325,000	96,050

The figures given represent the total of sales within each district. The figures given for Norwich health authority therefore differ from those supplied on 26 April by my hon. Friend the then Paliamentary Under-Secretary of State at columns 293-94, which were restricted to sales of over £50,000.

Geriatric Beds

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish a table showing for each National Health Service region for 1980 through to 1989 (a) the number of geriatric beds, (b) the number of patients per geriatric bed and (c) the population over 65 years of age, in each case as an index taking 1980 as the base.

Mr. Dorrell: The information requested is given in the tables. The following changes affect the comparability of figures over time:

(a) In 1982 National Health Service restructuring led to changes in the region of management of some London hospitals.

(b) The 1987-88 and 1988-89 figures are for beds in wards classified as being for elderly patients whereas earlier figures are for beds assigned to the geriatrics department.

(c) The 1987-88 and 1988-89 figures for in-patients are for patients treated by a geriatric clinical consultant whereas earlier figures are for patients treated in the geriatric department. Some patients previously categorised as geriatric are now categorised as being treated in general medicine.

Mid year population estimates, by Regional Health Authority, aged 65 and over, thousands.

Hospital Beds, Peterborough

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total of hospital beds in each of the past five years within the constituency of Peterborough.

Mr. Dorrell: The available information is given in the table.

Average daily available beds, (wards open overnight) and in-patient cases treated, Peterborough District Health Authority 1984 to 1988-89

Year	Available Beds	In-patient cases treated
1984	1,161	30,250
1985	1,146	31,966
1986	1,145	32,137
1987-88	1,148	33,934
1988-89	1,187	35,163

DES/Stilboestrol

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will implement the recommendations made in 1989 by the European Commission regarding the drug DES/Stilboestrol;

(2) if there are any plans to compile a register of people who have been exposed to the drug DES/Stilboestrol;

(3) if he has any plans to assist individuals and their families who have been adversely affected by a prescription of the drug DES/Stilboestrol.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: About 7,500 women in the United Kingdom were prescribed diethylistlboestrol during pregnancy. There is published evidence that this may have increased their risk of getting breast cancer by a small amount. There is also evidence of an increased risk of the daughters of women who received diethylstilboestrol in pregnancy getting vaginal cancer (a rare disease) or cervical cancer.

The number of women who might develop such a cancer is very small, and no specific arrangements have been made to identify them. However, the prospects for early detection of breast and cervical cancer, irrespective of its origin, have been greatly enhanced by the introduction of national screening programmes. It is open to any woman who does not fall within the age groups covered by the programmes to consult her doctor, who will arrange for any test which he or she considers necessary. Women who develop any symptoms which worry them should of course go immediately to their GP.

In June 1989 the European Parliament adopted a resolution on the use of diethylstilboestrol and its effects on the health of users and their children. The resolution called on the European Commission to identify those exposed to DES and to take appropriate action. It is for the European Commission to respond on the resolution.

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research is being conducted into the effects of the drug, DES/Stilboestrol.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This Department has sponsored no such research. Information about research conducted by other research institutions is not collected centrally by the Department.

Dentures

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the number of complete and partial dentures, respectively, supplied under the National Health Service during the years 1978 and 1988.

Mr. Dorrell: Figures for synthetic dentures are available as requested. Figures for metal dentures are available only as provided. Calendar year figures ceased to be kept from 1986.

	England
	1978 (calendar year)	1988-89 (financial year)
Number of complete synthetic dentures supplied	1,042,060	1,107,940
Number of partial synthetic dentures supplied	586,750	690,460
Number of courses of treatment involving the provision or repair of metal dentures	52,140	187,990
Total	1,680,950	1,986,390

Diabetes

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he has on how many diabetes sufferers need one third ml amounts of insulin per dose, how much it costs to provide (a) the smaller syringes and (b) the larger syringes to diabetics for each of the last 11 years; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: No information is available centrally on the numbers of diabetics needing one third ml of insulin per dose. The estimated costs of providing one half ml and 1 ml disposable syringes, available since 1 September 1987, on the list of appliances general practitioners may prescribe in England were as follows:

Year	ml size	£ million
1987 (last 2 quarters)	0·5	0·7
	1	minimal
1988	0·5	2·3
	1	1·46

I cannot add to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Leicester, East on 17 May 1990 at column 492, that there is insufficient clinical demand for one third ml syringes for this product to be added to the general practitioners list.

Polychlorinated Biphenyls

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what studies have been undertaken to establish levels of polychlorinated biphenyls in breast milk; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: The results of surveys on polychlorinated biphenyl (PCB) residues in food and human tissues, conducted by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, have been published in food surveillance papers 13 and 16, copies of which are available in the Library. The levels of PCBs in breast milk have fallen. The Committee on the Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment has considered the report of the working party on pesticide residues and in commenting on PCB residues in human breast milk said

"the levels of PCBs found in the UK survey are at least one order of magnitude below the lowest levels which are claimed to have had adverse effects on infant health".

A further, more comprehensive, survey on the levels of PCBs and other organochlorine residues in human breast milk is currently under way. The results should be available at the end of this year.

Hospital Beds

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total number of hospital beds in each of the past five years within the constituency of Northavon.

Mr. Dorrell: The available information is given in the table.

Available beds and in-patient cases treated, Frenchay and Southmead district health authorities, 1984-1988/89

Incontinence

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information the Körner database collects on the continence advisory service and the provision of incontinence supplies.

Mr. Dorrell: Körner community returns do make provision for the recording of the annual number of patient contacts made by community continence nurses, but since many districts treat this service as part of the general duties of community nurses, they do not identify it within their returns. No information is available through Körner on the provision of incontinence supplies.

Performance-related Pay

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give details of the maxima of performance-related pay paid out by Central Manchester, South Manchester and Trafford district health authorities in the financial year 1989-90.

Mr. Dorrell: The maxima of performance-related pay for general managers in Central Manchester, South Manchester and Trafford health authorities is 6 per cent. and for senior managers it is 4 per cent.

Details of performance-related pay awarded to individual general managers are confidential between them and their employers.

Project 2000

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will announce the detailed timetable for the full introduction of the Project 2000 training initiative for nurses in each part of England, giving the specific implementation dates for each health authority.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: As I announced in reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Chelmsford (Mr. Burns) on 17 May at column 494, we have now approved the implementation of Project 2000 in 17 more schools of nursing over the next 12 months. This is in addition to 16 schemes approved last year. Approval has now been given to nearly 40 per cent. of nursing schools in England, covering a total of 64 health districts, and about 20,000 student places. We have provided central funding of approximately £38 million in 1989-90 and 1990-91 for the implementation of Project 2000 in England.

The timetable for future implementation must be largely determined by the funding which can be made available against the background of other competing needs. We must also have regard to the size of the management and planning tasks involved at a time when we recognise that the National Health Service is undergoing many other changes.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment he has made of the problems that will arise in respect of manpower planning in health authorities in England if the introduction of the Project 2000 training initiative for nurses is not fully implemented as originally planned in 1990-91;

(2) what assessment he has made of the problems that will arise in respect of administrative and personnel matters if the introduction of the Project 2000 training initiative for nurses is not fully implemented as originally planned in 1990-91;

(3) what assessment he has made of the problems that will arise in respect of nurse morale if the introduction of the Project 2000 training initiative for nurses is not fully implemented as originally planned in 1990-91;

(4) what assessment he has made of the problems that will arise in respect of nurse recruitment in health authorities in England if the full introduction of the Project 2000 training initiative for nurses is not implemented as originally planned in 1990-91.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: It has always been envisaged that the implementation of Project 2000 in England would be phased over a number of years.

Health Authority Capital Charges

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether estimates of health authority capital charges have been completed and valued; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: Most health authorities have now compiled asset registers in preparation for capital charging. Estimates of capital charges for the first period of shadow operation in 1990-91, based on valued asset registers as at 31 March 1990, are expected to be available during July.

Cervical Smear Tests

Mr Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what up-to-date information he has about the extent of delays in processing cervical smear tests; what steps he proposes to take to reduce delays; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Information is not available in the form requested. Laboratories must aim to return the results of cervical smear tests to the doctor who undertook them within one month. Where this target is not met health authorities are required to take action to reduce delays. This has taken the form of overtime working or increasing the number of laboratory staff and making use of other less busy laboratory facilities either in the National Health Service or private sector. As at March 1990, the latest available date, over 80 per cent. of laboratories were meeting this one-month target. The average processing time of those districts which were failing to meet the target was 7·1 weeks.

Psittacosis

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make psittacosis a notifiable illness; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: The Public Health (Control of Diseases) Act 1984 and the Public Health (Infectious Diseases) Regulations 1988 define "notifiable" diseases and list the diseases that are to be notified. A review of this legislation is currently being carried out. A consultation document, "Review of the law on infectious disease control", issued by the Department in October 1989, invited comments on an extensive range of options and proposals for changes to the current law. Section 3 of the document identified the diseases which are currently notifiable and sought views on a number of questions including whether any additional diseases should be added to the list. More than 500 responses to the consultation document were submitted, many of which suggested additional diseases, including psittacosis, that should be made notifiable. Officials are now considering all the responses received. The case for making psittacosis a notifiable disease will be given careful consideration.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether his Department has investigated the recent outbreak of psittacosis in Nottingham; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: Local clinicians are responsible for initiating epidemiological investigations. We are satisfied that appropriate action was taken at the time of the outbreak.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what studies his Department has undertaken on psittacosis; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: None.

Spinal Injury Units

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations the supra-regional forum has received from spinal injury units on the need for central Government funding for psychologists and peripatetic nurses; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I understand that the supra-regional services advisory group is now receiving applications for funding in 1991-92. It is too early to specify how many spinal injury units will request additional funds for psychologists or peripatetic nurses.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will list, for each spinal injury unit, the number of beds in the unit, the number of psychologists and peripatetic nurses employed at the unit and the source of funding for each of these positions;

(2) when the first psychologist was appointed to a spinal injury unit; and what is the accepted role of psychologists and peripatetic nurses at spinal injury units.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The table shows the average daily available bed numbers. Information on the numbers and funding of psychologists and peripatetic nurses is not available centrally and the question of their role is for determination locally.

NHS Spinal Units, England 1988-89

* Data for these spinal units were not separated in the statistical return from data on other beds and it is not possible to give a useful figure.

Dental and Eye Charges

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much revenue he expects to be raised from dental and eye charges in 1990-91; and how much revenue has been raised since the inception of charges at current prices.

Mr. Dorrell: The 1990-91 estimates laid before Parliament show income from patient charges for general dental services in England as £388 million. There are no patient charges in the general ophthalmic service. Certain priority groups, including children and those on low incomes, are eligible for free National Health Service sight tests and vouchers towards the cost of glasses where these are necessary. People not included in these priority groups pay private fees to opticians for ophthalmic services.

National Health Service dental and ophthalmic charges were introduced in 1951. Charges for the supply of National Health Service glasses through the general ophthalmic service stopped from 1 July 1986, when vouchers were introduced. The estimated total revenue collected in England since the inception of these patient charges is set out in the following table:

Revenue collected adjusted to 1990-91 prices using the GDP deflator

	Cash total
	£ million	£ million
Charge income from the General Dental Service 1951-52 to 1989-90	2,590	5,710
Charge income from the General Ophthalmic Service 1951-52 to 1986-87	490	2,080

These totals are based on estimates of the England-only income in the period 1951-52 to 1968-69; accounts for these years combined figures for England and Wales. They are gross of any refunds to patients who were incorrectly or inadvertently deemed liable to pay charges.

Competitive Tendering

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money he estimates has been saved in total by health authorities as a result of compulsory competitive tendering in each of the last five years; and what likely savings he expects to be made in 1990-91 at current prices.

Mr. Dorrell: An initiative was started in 1983 to encourage health authorities to place contracts through competitive tendering of laundry, domestic and catering services. Up to the end of 1988-89 this initiative had resulted in cumulative savings of £110 million with an additional £6 million savings expected in 1989-90. Estimated savings for 1990-91 are not yet available.

Epilepsy

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many nuclear magnetic resonance scanners are possessed by the National Health Service; and what proportions of these are designed for use solely to identify epilepsy.

Mr. Dorrell: I am advised that magnetic resonance scanning is not a useful means of diagnosing epilepsy since most people with epilepsy would have a normal scan.

Food Hygiene Regulations

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement about progress on the proposed amendments to the Food Hygiene Regulations.

Mr. Dorrell: Amendment regulations will be laid before Parliament shortly.

Blood and Blood Products

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for each National Health Service region, what was the cost of purchases of blood and blood products (a) external to the region, and (b) from outside the United Kingdom.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 23 May 1990]: The cost of blood for those regions which were net receivers from regional transfusion centres elsewhere in the United Kingdom, for the financial year 1989-90, is given in the table. No blood is imported from outside the United Kingdom.

Information on the value of the blood products supplied by the bio products laboratory (formerly the blood products laboratory) is commercially sensitive. Information on the value of the blood products imported into the United Kingdom is not held centrally either for individual regions or in total.

Nurseries

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many women have children under five years; how many of these women work; what the estimated demand for nurseries is; and how many women who do not go to work place their children in nurseries.

Mr. Dorrell: Not all the information requested is centrally available but such data as can be provided are as follows:

Table 1
Great Britain

	1986 per cent.	1988 per cent.
Percentage of women with children under 5 years	17	17
Sample base (women aged 16 to 59)	7,478	7,326

Great Britain

Percentage of women, with children under 5, who went out to work
Full time	9	11
Part time	24	25
Total going out to work[1]	33	36
Sample base (women aged 16 to 59 with child(ren) aged 0 to 4	1,238	1,281

[1] Includes a few cases for which hours of work were not given.

Notes:

1. Table 1 shows that, in 1986 and 1988, 17 per cent. of all women of working age had at least one child aged under five years. Table 2 gives the percentages of these women who, in the same years, were working full time or part time. The data are taken from the General Household Survey, which obtains information from a sample of private households, and are therefore subject to sampling variability.
2. 1988 is the most recent year in which the survey carried questions on day care for children under 5. It showed that 6 per cent. of children under five whose mothers did not go out to work attended a day nursery. This percentage is based on 1,105 children covered by the survey sample, some of whom would be from the same family. The percentage of non-working mothers of children under five whose children attended a day nursery is not available.
3. No information is available on the demand for nurseries.

Kawasaki Disease

Mr. John Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the threat to children's health of (a) meningitis and (b) Kawasaki disease; how many people in various age groups have died of Kawasaki disease; and if he will issue information to alert the public to the disease's symptoms.

Mr. Dorrell: The two most important causes of meningitis in childhood are meningococcal meningitis and haemophilus influenza B meningitis. The Public Health Laboratory Service's communicable disease surveillance centre and the Department closely monitor meningococcal meningitis, which is a notifiable disease, so that local outbreaks can be dealt with promptly.

The chief medical officer wrote to all doctors and health authorities in February 1988 about the early management and prevention of spread of meningococcal infection. Copies of the two letters, PL/CMO(88)1 and PL/CMO(88)2, are available in the Library.

The Public Health Laboratory Service is paying special attention to the surveillance of haemophilus influenza B meningitis, and there are prospects for the use of effective vaccine following appropriate trials.

Surveillance of Kawasaki syndrome has been conducted jointly by the British Paediatric Association and the Public Health Laboratory Service's communicable disease surveillance centre since 1983. A total of 112 reports of Kawasaki disease was received for cases with onset in 1989. This gives an incidence of 1·5 per 100,000 children under five years old.

The following table shows the number of deaths from acute febrile mucocutaneous lymph node syndrome[1] (MCLS), which includes Kawasaki disease, in England and Wales:

Year	Age Under 1 year	1 years	2 years
1985	—	—	1
1986	1	—	—
1987	1	—	—
1988	1	—	1
[2]1989	—	—	—

[1] 9th Revision International Communicable Disease Code 446·1
[2] Provisional

Kawasaki syndrome is a disease mainly of young children and has clinical features similar to other infections. The results of routine investigations may suggest the diagnosis but are not specific. Public information on the disease would not, therefore, assist in early diagnosis of the condition. Greater professional awareness amongst paediatricians in this country of its signs and symptoms would be more appropriate. In this regard, a leading article has recently appeared in the British Medical Journal (21 April 1990), copies of which are available in the Library.

Artificial Sweeteners

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many members of the Committee on the Toxicity of Chemicals in Food are consultants to companies that are involved with the manufacture, marketing or use of artificial sweeteners in their products; and if he will make a statement.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, further to his answer to the hon. Member for South Shields on 22 May, if he will name the one member of the Committee on the Toxicity of Chemicals in Food who acts as a consultant to the International Sweeteners Organisation.

Mr. Dorrell: It is not our policy to publish details of the outside interests of members of the independent expert advisory committee on toxicity. Members declare, in confidence, to the Department any specific pecuniary relationship between themselves and any company in the field in which the advisory committee operates. When an item in which a member has an interest is discussed the interest is declared and the declaration is minuted.

One member has declared an interest in a company associated with another company which manufactures an artificial sweetener, another member has declared an interest in a company manufacturing an artificial sweetener and a third has declared an interest in an organisation representing manufacturers of artificial sweeteners.

Mentally Ill and Mentally Handicapped People

Mr. Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what changes in expenditure on and statutory provision for services to the mentally ill and mentally handicapped there have been since 1979.

Mr. Dorrell: Gross spending on hospital and community health services for the mentally ill and mentally handicapped increased in real terms by 20 per cent. (to £1,149 million) and 11 per cent. (to £497 million) respectively between 1978-79 and 1986-87, the most recent year for which information is available. Estimated gross expenditure by local authorities for the two groups increased in real terms by 50 per cent. (to £44 million) and 69 per cent. (to £288 million) respectively over the same period.

Since 1979 there have been a number of important changes to the statute law relevant to services, most notably the Mental Health Act 1983 and the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act 1986. In addition, further changes are proposed in the NHS and Community Care Bill.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how the Government intends to meet the provisions of section 7 of the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act 1986 with regard to mentally handicapped people leaving long-stay hospitals.

Mr. Dorrell: As announced in the White Paper "Caring for People" the Government do not now intend to implement section 7 of the Act. The need to do so will be reconsidered in the light of several years' experience of the introduction of the assessment and case management procedures outlined in the White Paper. Current guidance already stresses the need for health authorities to ensure that there is provision for assessing individuals' particular needs.

Hospital Waiting Lists, London

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people are currently on hospital waiting lists in the London area; and what was the figure 12 months ago.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Between 30 September 1988 and 30 September 1989, the latest figures available, the in-patient waiting lists for London health authorities fell from 131,115 to 124,793, a decrease of 4·8 per cent.

Energy Consumption

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will give for each year from 1978 the energy consumption, broken down by fuel, of the buildings occupied by his Department, expressing the figures in (a) cash terms, (b) 1978-79 money terms and (c) units of consumption for electricity in kilowatt hours, gas in therms, liquid fuel in litres and solid fuel in tonnes;

(2) if he will give the number of energy audits carried out in his Department in the last five years and for each audit a statement of its main conclusions;

(3) if he will give the number of dedicated energy managers in his Department and the number of person years devoted to energy management in the latest year.

Mr. Dorrell: For the whole of the period for which records are available, energy consumption for the Department of Health and the Department of Social Security, formerly DHSS, was jointly managed. I refer the hon. Member to the replies my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Social Security gave today.

Written Answers to Questions

Wednesday 6 June 1990

NORTHERN IRELAND

North Eastern Education and Library Board

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what evidence was reported by the Royal Ulster Constabulary investigating team of fraud, misappropriation or financial losses attributable to the management of mechanical and electrical services by the former principal engineer of the North Eastern education and library board;

(2) what was the total cost of Royal Ulster Constabulary investigation into allegations made against the former principal engineer of the North Eastern education and library board; if he will publish the conclusions arrived at by the Royal Ulster Constabulary investigation team; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope: An RUC investigation into allegations of irregularities in North Eastern education and library board contracting commenced in June 1986. As a result of the investigation, in August 1987 the RUC forwarded a file to the Director of Public Prosecutions who directed "No prosecution". Details of the costs of the police investigation are not available.

Seat Belts

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the wearing of seat belts by drivers and front-seat passengers in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Lives should be saved if all drivers and front-seat passengers wear their seat belts. The Northern Ireland seat belt survey, based on data collected in August 1989, indicates a gradual decline in seat belt usage since May 1983 when 92 per cent. of car drivers wore belts compared with the most recent results when 84 per cent. of observed front-seat passengers were wearing seat belts. Seat belts usage overall in Northern Ireland is lower than the rest of the United Kingdom; 81 per cent. of all observed drivers of all vehicle types in Northern Ireland wore seat belts, compared with a 93 per cent. usage rate of all driver observed in Great Britain.

In addition to the evidence produced by the survey, RUC statistics for 1988 showed that in those cases of front-seat fatalities where it was possible to determine whether seat belts had been worn almost half of those killed were not wearing seat belts.

Failure by front-seat occupants to wear seat belts is against the law though there are certain exemptions. The RUC, in the light of the recent report, will be increasing its vigilance to detect law breakers and to advise and protect them from the folly of their actions.

We shall continue to draw attention to the dangers of failing to wear seat belts within our programme of road casualty reduction.

Departmental Savings

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what were the value-for-money savings in his Department's operations identified by internal audit and internal efficiency arrangements, and by external audit and by management consultants retained by his Department between 1983-84 and 1988-89; and what is the amount of those savings fulfilled to date.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 5 June 1990]: The improvements resulting from inquiries and studies of the kind the hon. Member mentions are taken into account in the setting of annual budgets and internal targets. The results are not collected centrally.

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what mechanisms exist in his office for identifying and tracking value-for-money savings in its operations.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 5 June 1990]: The annual public expenditure round plays a key role in promoting value for money through the top down pressure exerted by taut allocations on programme and administrative expenditure. Departments are required to achieve efficiency savings of at least 1·5 per cent., per annum in their running costs, and to produce management plans detailing how these savings are to be achieved. Potential savings can be identified from a variety of sources such as efficiency studies, audit reports, purchasing studies, market testing of in-house operations and policy reviews, as well as by routine management action. All such activities inform the detailed planning and scrutiny of programme and running cost expenditure.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Grant-maintained Schools

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many schools in England and Wales have held ballots on grant-maintained status.

Mrs. Rumbold: Parental ballots have been held at 90 schools in England and four schools in Wales.

Chalvedon School

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he expects to make a decision on the application of Chalvedon school for grant-maintained status.

Mrs. Rumbold: The governing body of Chalvedon school has not yet published proposals for grant-maintained status. When it does so my right hon. Friend will consider them carefully, together with any objections that are received.

Independent Schools (National Curriculum)

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what assessment he has made of the likely impact on educational diversity and choice of independent schools adopting the national curriculum.

Mr. Alan Howarth: My right hon. Friend is committed to the breadth and diversity of educational choice provided by the independent sector. He is pleased that many independent schools are choosing to adopt the national curriculum.

Special Schools

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether membership of the joint working party for residential special schools will be affected by any new arrangements for determining the pay and conditions of teachers; what bodies form the membership of the joint working party for residential special schools; and how membership of the joint working party for residential special schools was determined.

Mrs. Rumbold: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to him on 23 March 1990, Official Report, column 760.

Education Ministers (Meeting)

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what was the outcome of the meeting of Education Ministers in Brussels on 31 May.

Mr. MacGregor: My hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State and I attended the meeting on 31 May of the Council and the Ministers of Education meeting within the Council. The Ministers adopted conclusions on meetings of senior officials in the education sector, on the treatment of equality of educational opportunity in the training of teachers, and on the preparation of a new convention for the European schools. The Ministers also adopted a resolution on the integration of children and young people with disabilities into ordinary systems of education. There were also discussions on education for enterprise and distance education and training.

The conclusions relating to the European schools invite the commission to draft a new convention which would codify the existing statute and its amending instruments. The conclusions envisage that the draft convention should be finalised with a view to its adoption by the intergovernmental conference to be held before the end of 1991. Unanimity would be required for the adoption of a new convention, which would be subject to ratification by all of the member states. All the member states noted the possibility that the draft convention could incoporate a change in the voting arrangements on the board of governors of the European schools from unanimity to a qualified majority of two thirds, subject to the safeguarding of the specific interests of member states on whose territory European schools are situated. All the member states except the United Kingdom noted the possibility that the Community could become a contracting party to the agreement establishing the European schools alongside the member states. The Government favour the adoption of majority voting in the board of governors, but is not convinced that contracting party status for the Community is necessary or would bring any practical benefit to the management of the European schools.

THE ARTS

National Museums

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Minister for the Arts how many qualified accountants are employed by each of the national museums; and when each institution was last audited.

Mr. Luce: I am advised that the number of qualified accountants currently employed by each of the national museums is as follows:

	Number
British museum	nil
Imperial war museum	nil
National maritime museum	1
National museums and galleries on Merseyside	2
Natural history museum	1
Science museum	3
Victoria and Albert museum	1

All national museums are audited annually by the National Audit Office, the last time being 1989.

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Minister for the Arts how many staff were seconded from national museums to regional institutions and vice versa during 1989.

Mr. Luce: I understand that during 1989 four national museums staff were seconded out to regional institutions; and that two members of staff from regional institutions were seconded to work in national museums. I welcome exchanges of staff of this kind.

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Minister for the Arts how many outreach programmes by national museums were initiated (a) to schools and (b) to regional museums during 1989.

Mr. Luce: Detailed information on outreach programmes by national museums initiated during 1989 are not held centrally, but the following cases are examples of the wide range of programmes undertaken to schools and regional museums last year.

The British museum provided teachers' packs, training aids and professional advice to about 6,000 teachers individually and in connection with about 2,000 schools groups visiting the museum. The museum's two travelling exhibitions "Celtic Britain" and "Thomas Rowlandson Prints" toured to four regional venues.

The natural history museum's travelling discovery centre was initiated last year in conjunction with sponsorship from the Clore Foundation.

The science museum undertook an extensive programme of 10 travelling exhibitions to 29 venues during 1988-89.

The Victoria and Albert museum loaned a total of 1,875 objects to 184 venues, of which three were schools and colleges, during 1989.

In addition to these examples the Museums and Galleries Commission's travelling exhibitions unit is actively encouraging national museums to regularly tour their temporary exhibitions to regional venues.

Arts Council

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Minister for the Arts when he last met the chairman of the Arts Council; and what was discussed.

Mr. Luce: I meet Mr. Palumbo from time to time, to discuss matters of mutual interest.

MEDIA Programme

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Minister for the Arts what assessment he has made of the assistance that the European Community's MEDIA programme has given to enable British film producers to work in Europe.

Mr. Luce: The MEDIA programme is an initiative of the European Commission. They have not yet produced a full evaluation of the results achieved in film and television distribution, production, training and so on, so it is not easy to assess at this stage the precise assistance given to British film producers.

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Minister for the Arts if the Government will support the European Commission's proposal to increase the budget of its MEDIA 92 programme to 250 million ecu over the next five years.

Mr. Luce: The European Commission made proposals last month for an action programme to promote the development of the European audiovisual industry at a cost of 250 million ecu over the years 1991-95. This is based on its existing MEDIA programme, the outcome of which has yet to be evaluated. I am considering with colleagues what our approach should be to its new proposals.

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Minister for the Arts what support he has given to the work of (a) Media Guarantee, (b) Media Venture, (c) Media Investment Club, (d) CARTOON, (e) European Audivisual Entrepreneurs, (f) Euro Aim, (g) Broadcasting Across the Barriers of the European Language, (h) the European Film Distribution Office and (i) the European Script Fund under the MEDIA 92 project.

Mr. Luce: The MEDIA programme is a specific initiative of the European Commission which has not been presented to member states for approval. It is funded direct by the Commission from the general budget, to which the United Kingdom is a contributor. Her Majesty's Government do not provide direct support to these individual MEDIA projects.

Energy Consumption

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Minister for the Arts if he will give for each year from 1978 the energy consumption, broken down by fuel, of the buildings occupied by the offices for which he is responsible, expressing the figures in (a) cash terms, (b) 1978-79 money terms and (c) units of consumption for electricity in kilowatt hours, gas in therms, liquid fuel in litres and solid fuel in tonnes.

Mr. Luce [holding answer 5 June 1990]: The figures requested by the hon. Member are available only in (a) cash terms and (b) 1978-79 money terms, for the following years:

	Electricity £	Gas £	Liquid fuel £
1987-88	5,069	1,349	659
	(2,470)	(657)	(321)
1988-89	6,717	970	845
	(3,056)	(441)	(384)
1989-90[1]	5,877	872	778
	(2,511)	(373)	(332)

Note: () denotes 1978-79 money terms.
[1] 1989-90 expenditure relates to eleven months consumption only.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Minister for the Arts if he will give the number of dedicated energy managers in the offices for which he is responsible and the number of person-years devoted to energy management in the latest year.

Mr. Luce [holding answer 5 June 1990]: The Office of Arts and Libraries has no dedicated energy manager. It is advised by the Cabinet Office in such matters.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Minister for the Arts if he will give the number of energy audits carried out in the offices for which he is responsible in the last five years and for each audit statement of its main conclusions.

Mr. Luce [holding answer 5 June 1990]: No energy audits have been carried out in the Office of Arts and Libraries, but surveys to improve energy efficiency have been undertaken and measures to reduce energy consumption have been, and are being, taken.

Departmental Savings

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Minister for the Arts what were the value for money savings in his Department's operations identified by internal audit and internal efficiency arrangements by external audit and by management consultants retained by his Department between 1983-84 and 1988-89; and what is the amount of those savings fulfilled to date.

Mr. Luce [holding answer 5 June 1990]: Improvements resulting from inquiries and studies of the kind referred to are taken into account in the setting of the office's annual budgets and internal targets. It is not possible, however, to quantify savings fulfilled in the way suggested because of the effect of wider organisational changes within the office.

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Minister for the Arts what mechanisms exist in the Office of Arts and Libraries for identifying and tracking value for money savings in its operations.

Mr. Luce [holding answer 5 June 1990]: The Office of Arts and Libraries has no mechanisms for identifying and tracking value-for-money savings, but is advised by the internal audit and staff inspection teams of the Cabinet Office.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Unemployment Benefits

Ms. Short: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will provide estimates for each of the years 1987-88, 1988-89 and 1989-90 of the amount of income tax collected from the taxation of unemployment benefits.

Mr. Lilley: The latest estimates of the yield from taxing unemployment benefit and supplementary benefit or income support paid in lieu of unemployment benefit are as follows:

	£ million
1987-88	320
1988-89	220
1989-90	180

These estimates are based on national amounts of benefits paid each year to the unemployed and information on income of the unemployed derived from the results of the 1987 family expenditure survey. The figures are subject to revision.

Inflation

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he now expects inflation to fall below 5 per cent.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The "Financial Statement and Budget Report" forecast that all-items RPI inflation would be 5 per cent. in the second quarter of 1991 and would fall further thereafter.

Investment

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on current levels of investment.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Total investment in 1989 was at record levels. Since 1979 total investment has increased by over 40 per cent. or an average of 3½ per cent. a year. This compares to the last Labour Government's record where investment grew by an average of only ¼ per cent. a year.

Poor People

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what fiscal policies the Government have to protect the poorest in society.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The main objective of the Government's fiscal policies is to improve the performance of the economy, which benefits everybody, including the poorest. Since 1979, the basic rate of income tax has been cut from 33 to 25 per cent., benefiting all taxpayers; the main personal allowances have been increased by about 25 per cent. in real terms, taking about 2 million individuals out of tax, compared to the 1978-79 regime indexed for inflation; and the structure of national insurance contributions has been reformed, benefiting in particular the low paid.

Overseas Financial Assets

Mr. Hanley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the present stock of the overseas financial assets; and what was the level of such assets in 1979.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The estimated level of identified United Kingdom external assets, net of identified liabilities, at the end of 1989 was about £110 billion ("Financial Statement and Budget Report 1990", paragraph 3.39), compared with about £12½ billion at the end of 1979. Later information will be published in the balance of payments Pink Book in August.

PAYE

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what instructions the Inland Revenue has issued relating to PAYE to be applied on fees paid to one-man service companies; and under what statutory authority such instructions were formulated.

Mr. Lilley: Schedule E (PAYE) applies to the emoluments of an individual arising from either an employment or an office. Whether in any particular case there is a contract of employment with an individual, or his services are supplied under a contract with a one-man service company, are questions to be decided by reference to all the facts and circumstances.

Tax Debts

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the tax debts at the latest date for which figures are available for (a) overall income tax, (b) PAYE and (c) corporation tax.

Mr. Lilley: The amounts of tax outstanding at the annual balance date to the end of October 1988 (the latest published figures), together with provisional figures for the year to October 1989, are as follows:

		£ billion
Assessed taxes	October 1988	October 1989 (provisional figures)
Income tax	2·3	2·3
Corporation tax	1·5	1·6
CGT	0·1	0·2
PAYE
Closed years	0·8	0·8
Current year	0·6	0·7
Total	5·3	5·6

The outstanding balances at October are equivalent to 7·75 per cent. and 7·25 per cent. respectively of the total tax due for 1988-89 and 1989-90. They include over £1 billion which had only recently become due, and the bulk (about four-fifths) attracts interest. The amounts actually remitted or written off—mostly due to insolvency—in these years were less than 1 per cent. of the tax due.

Financial Statistics

Sir Ian Gilmour: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish for each year since 1978-79, including estimates for 1990-91, showing revenue at current and at constant, April 1990, prices from (a) local authority domestic rates/community charge, (b) local authority commercial rates/uniform business rate, (c) employers' national insurance contributions, (d) employees' national insurance contributions, (e) self-employed national insurance contributions and (f) personal income tax.

Mr. Major: In so far as it is available, the information requested is given in the tables. In the second table the figures are expressed in constant 1989-90 prices.

Sir Ian Gilmour: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish figures, at constant 1990 prices, for each year since 1979, showing (a) revenue from North sea oil and gas, (b) revenue from privatisation, (c) public sector borrowing requirement, (d) balance of payments current account, (e) the rate of inflation at April of each year and (f) interest rates at April of each year.

Mr. Major: In so far as it is available, the information requested is given in the table. The appropriate figures are expressed in 1989 (or 1989-90) prices.

Cannabis

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps are taken to minimise environmental pollution when seized cannabis is disposed of.

Mr. Ryder: Most cannabis seized by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise is destroyed by incineration within Queen's warehouses. The incinerators used are designed to comply with the emission requirements of Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution, ensuring total burnout of solid and gaseous material.

Customs staff are instructed to consult with local authorities for advice where destruction of drugs might lead to environmental hazard.

Inland Revenue

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) whether Inland Revenue databanks cover by name people living long term in lodging houses;

(2) how many individuals are included by name on Inland Revenue databanks;

(3) whether Inland Revenue databanks include the home as well as place of work addresses of all people recorded in them.

Mr. Lilley: The Inland Revenue records an address for all individuals whom it may need to contact in connection with their own tax liabilities or their accountability for PAYE as an employer. The type of accommodation is of no relevance to the Department.

A taxpayer's computer record will include his personal address. It will not show his place of work address, unless he is a self-employed person working from his home. It is not possible to say at any given time exactly how many individuals are on record, but we would expect currently to have approximately 33 million.

National Savings

Mr. Hanley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will take further measures to change National Savings products.

Mr. Ryder: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced in his Budget increases of 1 per cent. in the interest rate on the national savings investment account and income bonds. Changes to the terms of some other key national savings products which encourage long-term savings are being made over the next three to four weeks, as follows:

a new fixed interest savings certificate, offering a tax free guaranteed return of 9·5 per cent. a year if held for five years;

a similar improvement in the associated regular monthly savings scheme, the yearly plan; a new index-linked savings certificate revalued monthly by reference to the RPI, and offering tax free guaranteed extra interest of 4·5 per cent. a year, if held for five years;

a new series capital bond offering a guaranteed return of 13 per cent. a year (taxable, but credited without prior deduction of income tax), if held for five years.

These measures show the determination of my right hon. Friend to encourage more people to save, and people to save more. They maintain the momentum of the savers' Budget, and demonstrate that national savings will play a significant part in continuing to stimulate the savings habit.

Teachers' Salaries

Mr. Latham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the cost to public funds in the current financial year and with retrospective effort to 6 April of transferring the total cost of teachers' salaries from local government to the Exchequer but leaving the current level of grant to local authorities unchanged; and what addition that would require to (a) income tax and (b) value added tax if the extra cost were divided equally between them.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 23 May 1990]: If local authorities spent in line with the education component of total standard spending in England and Wales, and total current expenditure in Scotland, the total cost of teachers' salaries would be around £9½ billion. If there were no change to revenue support grant and the cost of teachers' salaries were divided equally between local authorities and the Exchequer, this would imply additional central Government expenditure of around £4¼ billion. This is equivalent to an increase of around 3p in the basic rate of income tax or an increase of around two percentage points in the VAT rate.

Energy Consumption

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give the number of energy audits carried out in his Department in the last five years and for each audit a statement of its main conclusions.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 5 June 1990]: Surveys of the lighting efficiency of Treasury buildings were carried out in 1987. The main recommendation was that there was scope for greater lighting efficiency, mainly in the Parliament street building. This is being taken into account in the forthcoming rewiring.

Income Tax

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish his estimates of the numbers of people paying income tax in (a) England, (b) Scotland and (c) Wales.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 5 June 1990]: The estimated number of individuals resident in England liable to income tax is 20·4 million for 1987-88, the latest available year. The corresponding estimates for Scotland and Wales are 2,160,000 and 940,000 respectively. Married women are included where their earned income exceeds the wife's earned income allowance and any personal allowances and reliefs unused against the husband's income.

PRIME MINISTER

Greek Prime Minister

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Prime Minister what subjects she discussed during her meeting with the Prime Minister of Greece in London on 16 May.

The Prime Minister: We discussed a wide range of topics including East-West relations, Cyprus, Greece's relations with Turkey, South Africa, the European Community, the case of Mr. Paul Ashwell, and the opportunities for strengthening bilateral links between our two countries.

South Africa

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Prime Minister if, during her discussions with the President of South Africa on 19 May at Chequers, she or Mr. De Klerk raised the matter of the prospects of South Africa joining the nuclear non-proliferation treaty.

The Prime Minister: No. But my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs raised the nuclear non-proliferation treaty with the South African Foreign Minister.

Executive Agencies

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to her answer on 15 May, Official Report, column 375, whether Ministers will continue to give substantive answers to questions on matters delegated to executive agencies where the Member concerned has indicated that he or she does not wish in the first instance to deal directly with the agency chief executive.

The Prime Minister: As I told the hon. Member on 15 May, Ministers remain fully accountable to Parliament for the work of their Department, including executive agencies and are, therefore, ready to reply to questions about any aspect of this work. But one of the objectives of establishing executive agencies is to respond better to the concerns of hon. and right hon. Members. Chief executives and agency managers will have the immediate detailed knowledge which the hon. Member is seeking, as well as the necessary delegated authority to take appropriate action. Where right hon. and hon. Members' concerns relate to an operational matter for which the Minister has delegated authority to the chief executive under the agency's published framework document, they will therefore best be met by going direct to the chief executive or, as appropriate, the local agency manager to get a prompt and effective response.

Energy Consumption

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to her answer of 30 April, Official Report, column 385, whether the figures quoted on energy consumpton for the Cabinet Office include accommodation occupied by the Privy Council Office.

The Prime Minister: No.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to her answer of 11 May, Official Report, column 256, what energy consumption figures are available for the buildings occupied by the Cabinet Office.

The Prime Minister: Energy consumption figures for 1989-90 are available for approximately 76 per cent. of Cabinet Office holdings. The consumption was:

	Consumption
Electricity	3,497,992 kWh
Gas	34,092 therms
Liquid fuel	488,110 litres

Efficiency Unit

Mr. Amos: To ask the Prime Minister what topics have been covered in the efficiency unit's central scrutiny programme in the last financial year; and how many of the scrutiny reports have been published.

The Prime Minister: Twenty-three efficiency scrutinies have been undertaken by Departments in 1989-90 in association with the efficiency adviser and the efficency unit. The programme of scrutinies, including those which are not yet completed, is as follows:

ENERGY

Mines

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) how many people were employed in (a) England, (b) Scotland and (c) Wales in (i) British Coal opencast mines, (ii) licensed private opencast coal mines, (iii) British Coal deep mines and (iv) licensed private deep coal mines in each of the last five years;

(2) how many (a) British Coal opencast mines, (b) licensed private opencast coal mines, (c) British Coal deep mines and (d) licensed private deep coal mines were in operation in (i) England, (ii) Scotland and (iii) Wales in each of the last five years.

Mr. Baldry: These are matters for the British Coal Corporation.

Radioactive Wastes

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy, pursuant to the reply to the hon. Member for Derbyshire, North-East (Mr. Barnes) of 21 May, Official Report, column 11, if he will set out those suggestions made by the International Atomic Energy Agency which have been incorporated by Nuclear Industry Radioactive Waste Executive into the future research programme.

Mr. Baldry: This is an operational matter for UK Nirex Ltd.

British Gas

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Colne Valley (Mr. Riddick) of 14 May, Official Report, column 315, if there are any issues discussed at his regular meetings with the chairman of British Gas which he does not consider fall within his responsibility in so far as he is ready to give answers to parliamentary questions.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Yes. My right hon. Friend and I discuss a range of matters relating to the gas industry and its development; such discussions are no different from those we also have routinely with representatives of other major United Kingdom energy companies.

Research

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will give for each year from 1979-80 to 1991-92 inclusive the outturn estimate, provision or planned expenditure on research funded by his Department into (a) coal technology, (b) nuclear power and (c) energy efficiency expressing these figures in (i) money terms, (ii) 1990-91 real terms and (iii) as a percentage of his Department's total research expenditure.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Figures for the years up to and including 1990-91 are given in the table. Figures for 1991-92 are not available separately but are incorporated in table 5.1 of chapter 5 of the 1990 public expenditure White Paper (Cm. 1005).

Notes:

1. 1979-80 and 1980-81 figures include some non-R and D expenditure but do not include associated Departmental staff costs.
2. 1981-82 to 1987-88 are taken from the "Annual Review of Government Funded R and D" and cover R and D plus associated Departmental staff costs (ie Frascati R and D). 1988-89 figures are calculated on the same basis.
3. 1989-90 figures are forecast outturn and 1990-91 figures are taken from Estimates. These are R and D only and do not include associated Departmental staff costs. The 1989-90 figure may be subject to end year adjustment.

Generation Fuels

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will give, for the latest available year, a regional breakdown of figures consistent with those on fuel used for generation in table 53 of the "Digest of United Kingdom Energy Statistics 1989".

Mr. Wakeham: Information on fuel used for electricity generation by region is not collected by the Department.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will give 1988-89 figures consistent with the figures for previous years on the fuel used for generation in table 53 of the "Digest of United Kingdom Energy Statistics 1989".

Mr. Wakeham: The quantities of fuel used for electricity generation by the public supply system in 1988-89 were as follows:

Type of fuel	Million tonnes of coal or coal equivalent
Coal[1]	80·69
Oil for firing boilers[2]	6·81
Oil for lighting up boilers[3]	1·47
Natural gas[4]	0·01
Nuclear	19·67
Hydro	2·33
Other[5]	0·16
Total fuel used	111·14

[1] Used in coal fired stations, and coal fired sections of mixed fired stations.
[2] Used in oil fired stations, and oil fired sections of mixed fired stations, plus all oil used in Northern Ireland.
[3] Used in coal fired stations, and pulverised coal fired sections of mixed fired stations. Also used for flame control and overburning. Oil used at coal fired power stations in Northern Ireland is included with oil for firing boilers.
[4] Used in mixed fired stations.
[5] Includes oil used in diesel engine and gas turbine stations or sections (excluding Northern Ireland—see footnotes 2 and 3).

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will give, for the latest available year, figures for each power station on the fuel used for generation consistent with those in table 53 of the "Digest of United Kingdom Energy Statistics 1989".

Mr. Wakeham: Information on fuel used for electricity generation by individual power stations is not collected by the Department.

Electricity Privatisation

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether any individual who has advised the Conservative party on advertising or public relations was involved in selecting the company awarded the advertising contract for electricity privatisation.

Mr. Wakeham: In deciding which company to appoint as advertising agency for the flotation of the regional electricity campaign, I and the companies were advised by a panel of officials and advisers of Government Departments and the regional electricity companies. One of these advisers was Mr. Tim Bell the chairman of Lowe Bell Communications who are the Department's marketing advisers. Mr. Bell has provided general advice to the Conservative party.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what budgetary provision has been made for the cost of the advertising campaigns to promote the flotation of the electricity supply industry in England and Wales.

Mr. Wakeham: All expenses in respect of the advertising campaigns for the sale of the electricity supply industry will be met from the proceeds of the sale.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether any individual who has advised the Conservative party on advertising or public relations is involved in the company awarded the advertising contract for electricity privatisation.

Mr. Wakeham: The Government and the regional electricity companies have already announced the appointment of WCRS Mathews Marcantonio as advertising agency for the flotation of the companies. The chairman of the agency is Mr. Robin Wright who provided some advice on advertising issues to the Conservative party over two years ago.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy in the case of each of those companies advising him and also advising electricity boards on electricity privatisation what is the percentage of fees borne by his Department; and what was the equivalent percentage in 1988-89 and 1989-90.

Mr. Wakeham: Where the appointment is solely by the Department it meets 100 per cent. of the costs involved. Where, however, the appointment is made jointly by the Department and the industry, the costs are apportioned between the parties. The precise split in costs varies from contract to contract and is commercially confidential between the Department, the company or companies concerned and the firm of advisers appointed.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether before entering into a binding contract with an advertising agency for the campaigns to privatise the electricity supply industry on the basis of competitive tenders, the agency was given an indication of the likely budget for the campaigns.

Mr. Wakeham: No indication of the likely budget for the campaigns was provided.

Electricity Generation

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is the cost of one kilowatt hour of electricity generated by (a) coal, (b) oil, (c) gas and (d) nuclear power, respectively; and what are his Department's latest estimates for (i) wind power, (ii) wave power and (iv) tidal power.

Mr. Wakeham: The costs of generating electricity from coal, oil, nuclear and gas are a matter for the industries. The Department's latest estimates for wind, wave and tidal power are as contained in Energy Paper No. 55, a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Mr. Andrew Balfour

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Don Valley on 6 March, Official Report, column 559, whether he has yet made a decision in respect of the future career of Mr. Andrew Balfour.

Mr. Sainsbury: Mr. Balfour was informed by letter dated 16 March that he had been suspended from his duties in accordance with departmental regulations pending inquiries into what further action should be taken. Mr. Balfour has now replied formally. The case will be dealt with under internal diplomatic service procedures.

Bulgaria

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what commitment he has made on the provision of economic aid to Bulgaria following the elections on 10 June.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have made no commitment. What assistance we offer will depend on whether the elections on 10 and 17 June are free and fair and how far the new Government are committed to economic and political reform.

Civil Nuclear Affairs

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent changes there have been in the responsibilities of his Department for international civil nuclear affairs and safeguards matters.

Mr. Waldegrave: The overall responsibilities of this Department have not changed. There has, however, been an internal reorganisation, as a result of which non-proliferation and safeguards matters are handled by the non-proliferation department and civil nuclear matters are handled by the environment, science and energy department.

Hong Kong (Laboratory Tests)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has any plans to discuss with the appropriate authorities in the Crown territories of Hong Kong the introduction of a standardised laboratory testing scheme along the lines of the United Kingdom national measurement accreditation service.

Mr. Waldegrave: No. The Hong Kong Government have already introduced a laboratory accreditation scheme along the lines of the United Kingdom national measurement accreditation service (NAMAS) and this has entered into a mutual recognition agreement with NAMAS.

Nuclear Energy Safeguards

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which states, party to the nuclear non-proliferation treaty, have nuclear energy programmes not within the safeguards regime of the International Atomic Energy Agency; and what steps have been taken to encourage such states to conclude such agreements with the International Atomic Energy Agency.

Mr. Waldegrave: The only party to the non-proliferation treaty—the NPT—which has significant nuclear facilities and has not concluded a safeguards agreement with the IAEA is North Korea. We do not recognise North Korea as a state, but we have made clear our concern about the absence of a safeguards agreement, as required under article III of the NPT, at the International Atomic Energy Agency.

Libya

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has any information concerning (a) the possession of and (b) attempts to produce nuclear weapons by Libya.

Mr. Waldegrave: No. Libya is a party to the nuclear non-proliferation treaty and, as such, has undertaken not to manufacture or otherwise acquire nuclear weapons.

NATO Foreign Ministers

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list all the items on the agenda for the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation Foreign Ministers meeting in Scotland on 7 and 8 June.

Mr. Waldegrave: This meeting will be an important opportunity to discuss the Vienna negotiations on conventional forces in Europe, and options for further conventional arms control; developments in east-west relations and the CSCE process; the security aspects of German unification; the need to adapt NATO in response to changes in Europe; and preparations for the NATO summit, to be held in London in early July. Ministers are also likely to consider the negotiations in confidence and security-building measures and "open skies"; nuclear issues; and NATO science, environment and fellowship programmes.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Council of Industry Ministers

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proposals he intends to put forward at the next European Ministers Industry Council.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: An Industry Council meeting was held on 28 May to discuss steel, shipbuilding, small and medium-sized enterprises and semiconductors. The next meeting is scheduled for 21 September, and at present I have no plans for the United Kingdom to table any proposals.

Environmental Audits

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any plans to meet the chairman and the officials of the Co-op to discuss the utility of the recent Co-op decision to conduct a full environmental audit of its own brands.

Mr. Forth: Ministers have no plans to meet the chairman and officials of the Co-op to discuss their environmental audit. The Government have made clear their commitment to introduce an official environmental labelling scheme for consumer goods as soon as possible and recently announced the establishment of an advisory group to assist its development. In the meantime, the initiative of the Co-op to audit its own brand products is to be welcomed.

Rolls-Royce

Mr. Roger King: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he has recently exercised his powers as special shareholder in Rolls-Royce plc.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Consent was given on behalf of the special shareholder to a resolution passed at the company's annual general meeting on 30 May amending article 43 of the articles of association which deals with United Kingdom control of the company. The amendment will facilitate the setting up of a depositary receipts programme by the company enabling foreign investors to purchase an interest in shares in Rolls-Royce more easily while maintaining the overall limit on foreign shareholdings of 29·5 per cent.

Securities and Investments Board

Mr. Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he has received a report from the Securities and Investments Board on the exercise of its functions under the Financial Services Act.

Mr. Redwood: A copy of the board's report, made in accordance with section 117 of the Act, was laid before Parliament yesterday. The report covers the period from 1 April 1989 to 31 March 1990. Copies are now available in the Library.

Departmental Savings

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what were the value-for-money savings in his Department's operations identified by internal audit and internal efficiency arrangements and by external audit and by management consultants retained by his Department between 1983-84 and 1988-89; and what is the amount of those savings fulfilled to date.

Mr. Forth [holding answer 5 June 1990]: In my answer to another question from the hon. Member today, I described the mechanisms for identifying and tracking value-for-money savings within my Department. These mechanisms have been refined over the period referred to in the question. Prior to 1988-89, follow-up was specific to each of the mechanisms. Since 1988-89 the Department has been committed to achieving efficiency savings averaging at least 1·5 per cent. of departmental running costs each year over three years from these and other sources. In 1989-90 it is estimated that the Department achieved savings on running costs from all sources of 3·2 per cent. Savings aggregated centrally are not attributed to specific mechanisms: the figures requested cannot therefore be given.

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what mechanisms exist in his Department for identifying and tracking value-for-money savings in its operations.

Mr. Forth [holding answer 5 June 1990]: The Department has a variety of efficiency review mechanisms such as efficiency scrutinies, staff inspection and internal audit. These include arrangements for follow-up action where they identify efficiency savings. In addition, the Department conducts an annual review of activity and resource management which takes into account in the allocation of resources the outcome of these reviews and other efficiency savings identified.

Research and Development

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will estimate the amount of money manufacturing industry spends on research and development, excluding military research, in the United Kingdom and its major industrial competitors.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Collection of separate figures for United Kingdom non-military research and development performed by manufacturing industry began only this year, relating to calendar year 1989. An analysis of the returns, prepared by the Central Statistical Office, is scheduled to be published during 1991. Data in the form requested are not available for the United Kingdom's major industrial competitors.

Bankruptcy

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many licences have existed to enable persons to act as trustees for the purposes of the Bankruptcy (Scotland) Act 1985 for each year since 1985-86.

Mr. Redwood: The information is as follows:

Schedule of authorisations under the Insolvency Act 1986

Food Storage (Temperature)

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received about the refrigeration industry's ability to meet statutory temperature requirements for storage of food; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: My Department has participated in discussions between the refrigeration industry and the Department of Health, which is responsible for temperature requirements for food storage. Decisions about these will take account of the timely availability of suitable refrigeration equipment.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Tobacco Exports

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the answer of the Minister for Overseas Development on Monday 14 May, Official Report, column 596, what action his Department is taking to look into the matter of British American Tobacco exports of cigarettes to the third world.

Mrs. Chalker: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Harrow, West (Mr. Hughes) on 24 May, at column 370, which set out the Government's policy on aid to the tobacco sector. Aid funds are not used to finance imports of cigarettes and tobacco into developing countries. The Government have no plans at present for an inquiry into their export from the United Kingdom.

Brazil

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what matters were discussed with the Brazilian Environment Minister, Dr. José Lutzenberger, during his recent visit to the United Kingdom.

Mrs. Chalker: I had a very useful meeting with Dr. Lutzenberger. We discussed Brazil's environmental problems, including the preservation of the rain forests and the protection of the Indian population, the role of sustainable agriculture in conservation, and progress with the United Kingdom environmental co-operation programme with Brazil.

Nicaragua

Mr. Franks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what further assistance he proposes to provide to the new Government in Nicaragua.

Mrs. Chalker: We plan to provide a grant of £600,000 in support of one or more sectors of the Nicaraguan economy. The offer will be made at the conference of aid donors to Nicaragua which is being held in Rome on 6 and 7 June.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Immigration

Mr. Hayward: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he intends to make changes in the immigration rules.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: My right hon. and learned Friend the Home Secretary has today laid before Parliament a "Statement of Changes in the Immigration Rules", which removes Argentina and the German Democratic Republic from the list of countries whose nationals need visas for the United Kingdom. The changes come into effect on 8 June.

IBA (Transmission Functions)

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Torridge and Devon, West (Miss Nicholson) of 8 May, Official Report, columns 32-33, by what criteria it will be judged appropriate to remove the restrictions on British Telecom and the Channel 3 and 5 franchises.

Mr. Mellor: It is our intention to remove the ownership restrictions on British Telecom and the Channel 3 and 5 franchisees as soon as the United Kingdom broadcasting and telecommunications markets are sufficiently competitive to guard against the dangers of market domination and vertical integration.

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received on his proposals to introduce ownership restrictions in respect of the transmission company which will replace the Independent Broadcasting Authority's transmission functions.

Mr. Mellor: We have received three representations in connection with the proposed ownership restrictions which were announced on 8 May.

Dog Fighting

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions were taken against those involved in dog fighting activities in 1989 and so far in the current year.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Information is not available centrally.

Wandsworth Prison

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent discussions he has had with the Wandsworth branch of the Prison Officers Association on staffing levels at Wandsworth prison; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: My right hon. Friend the Minister of State, Lord Ferrers, visited Wandsworth in January and staffing levels were included in discussion with the local POA branch secretary. Since then, staffing levels have been discussed in the normal course between the governor and the local branch of the POA.

Television Licences

Mr. Hanley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) black and white and (b) colour television licences were issued in 1989.

Mr. Mellor: Licence issues are recorded by financial year. A total of 17·4 million colour and 2·2 million monochrome licences were issued in 1988-89. Figures for 1989-90 are expected in several weeks time.

TRANSPORT

School Buses

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the consultation paper, referred to in his answer of 14 November 1989 to the hon. Member for Torridge and Devon, West (Miss Nicholson), Official Report, column 111, on the requirement for a distinctive sign to be carried on school buses, will be issued; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: Today. Draft regulations are being circulated to interested parties and their comments invited by 31 August.

The proposed regulations would require all buses—except those running scheduled services for the general public—to display a distinctive sign while carrying children to or from their school. They would also permit the fitting of flashing amber lights near such signs, and their use when children are getting on or off the bus.

The use of these signs will make a significant contribution to improving the safety of children using school buses. They will alert motorists to the fact that children are about and might be crossing the road. Motorists should exercise extra caution every time they overtake a stationary bus displaying the sign, whether or not it is equipped with the additional flashing lights.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced recently a wide programme of steps to promote safety of children on roads. We hope that, taken together, all these measures will help to bring about the reduction in child road deaths that we all want to see.

The regulations would also require better reflective rear markings on new large lorries in future. The new markings are much brighter than those required by the present British standard. They would have to meet the latest European standard, ECE regulation 70. The new markings would also be permitted on existing vehicles as an alternative to the Btitish standard markings, which were introduced nearly 20 years ago.

Rush-hour Traffic

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will estimate the saving in costs of road building, road maintenance, policing and congestion if the volume of rush-hour traffic in our major cities were reduced by 10 per cent.

Mr. Atkins: I am not aware of any estimates which have been made on this matter.

Motor Insurers Bureau

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will list the number of claims registered with the Motor Insurers Bureau in each year since the operation of the voluntary agreement; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he has any plans to review the operation of the voluntary agreement entered into by the Motor Insurers Bureau; and if he will make a statement;

(3) if he will list the average period of time taken to deal with claimants applying to the Motor Insurers Bureau in each year since the operation of the voluntary agreement; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: The numbers of claims submitted to the Motor Insurers Bureau each year under its agreements with the Secretary of State are listed in the table. The figure for 1989 includes 3,154 claims for property damage only, which are admissible under the revised uninsured drivers agreement which came into force on 31 December 1988.

Transport Fuels

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make it his policy to commission a study along the lines of that undertaken by the United States Department of Energy and Argonne National Laboratories, published by the United States national technical information service, on the potential for reducing atmospheric pollution from transport vehicles through the introduction of alternative transport fuels.

Mr. Atkins: The options, including the potential for using alternative fuels, to further reduce pollution from motor vehicles are currently being reviewed. This may lead to the commissioning of more detailed assessments to complement the results of existing national and international research.

Reprocessed Waste (Transport)

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what studies have been commissioned by his Department in regard to the design and development of transport flasks or other containers for the movement of vitrified high-level waste back to its countries of origin, following reprocessing.

Mr. Atkins: Design and development studies are undertaken by the consigners, who then submit them to the Department for independent assessment. Shipments of vitrified high-level waste by any mode of transport will be required to be carried in containers which have been approved and certified by my Department as fully complying with stringent national and international safety regulations.

Roads

Mr. Blair: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his Department's planned expenditure on road construction and repair for (a) the United Kingdom, (b) the north of England and (c) County Durham in the present financial year.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 5 June 1990]: Planned expenditure on trunk road construction and repair in 1990-91 is as follows:

	£ million
England	1,808·1
North of England	342·1
County Durham	5·2

Figures for any single year are a poor indicator of the geographical balance of the programme. The road programme contains schemes in the north worth £2·9 billion (works cost, November 1987 prices) amounting to one quarter of the total for England. Major improvements to the A167 in County Durham form part of this programme.

HEALTH

Medicines Control Agency

Mr. Rost: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the Medicines Control Agency is included among those autonomous agencies, as defined by Treasury documents Cm. 914, on "The Financing and Accountability of Next Steps Agencies", published in December 1989.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: No.

Mr. Rost: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) under what statutory authority he has ruled that the Medicines Control Agency may not charge turnover-related fees;

(2) whether the Medicines Control Agency may charge turnover-based fees;

(3) why a system of turnover-related fees has not been adopted by the Medicines Control Agency, as authorised by the Medicines Act 1988.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: No ruling has been given prohibiting the MCA from charging turnover-related fees. In order to meet the criteria for exemption from gross running cost control the agency has to be self financing from receipts which vary in line with the demand for its services. Another requirement was that such fees had to be seen as related to the cost of the services provided: a turnover-related levy could not satisfy this criterion.

Mr. Rost: To ask the Secretary of State for Health under what statutory authority the Medicines Control Agency budget for 1990-91 is projected to make a net profit.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Medicines (Fixing of Fees Relating to Medicinal Products for Human Use) Order 1989 SI 1989 No. 684 sets out the matters to be taken into account in setting fees under the Medicines Act 1971. There is no statutory requirement to make a net profit, but any past deficit is subsequently recovered.

Mr. Rost: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will define the interpretation and meaning of the exemption from gross running costs control, applied to the operation of the Medicines Control Agency.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The meaning of running cost control and of exemption from such control is explained in paragraph 21.3.10 of the 1990 public expenditure White Paper (Cm. 1021). The Medicines Control Agency, while remaining part of the Department of Health, may be exempted from gross running cost control provided certain conditions are met, one of which is that its costs, excluding British Pharmacopoeia Commission activities, are recovered from fees payable by licence holders and applicants. Like other parts of the Department, the MCA is required to submit a bid for funds each year. The effect of exemption from gross running cost control is that, once funds have been voted by Parliament, the MCA will not be subject to a reduction in those funds, otherwise than by supplementary estimates submitted to and approved by Parliament or other parliamentary instructions.

Mr. Rost: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the statutory instruments or other legislation which sets out the establishment and basis of the existence of the Medicines Control Agency.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: No statutory instrument or other legislation was needed to establish the Medicines Control Agency.

Mr. Rost: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the projected revenue, gross running costs and net profit or loss for the Medicines Control Agency for 1990-91.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The latest published figures are contained in the Department of Health supply estimates 1990-91 dated 20 March 1990, copies of which are available in the Library. The forecast net profit or loss figures for 1990-91 are not yet available. They await the completion of the agency's accounts for the year to 31 March 1990.

Mr. Rost: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when, and by what authority, the Medicines Control Agency became, or is proposed to become, an autonomous agency.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Medicines Control Agency is not an autonomous agency but remains part of the Department of Health. No decision has been taken on whether in due course it might become a next steps agency.

Mr. Rost: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how his Department has applied the provisions of the Health and Medicines Act 1988 in relation to the charging of licence fees for medicines on the turnover of a company and of a product as well as on a fixed basis, and authorisation of the Medicines Control Agency to fix charges on those criteria.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Until 31 March 1989 fees in relation to applications for licences or certificates under the Medicines Act 1968 were charged on two bases—an annual fee or turnover levy related to the turnover of licensed products and capital fees in relation to particular applications payable on submission of the application. From 1 April 1989 the annual fee was abolished.

Section 21 of the Health and Medicines Act 1988 clarified the basis under which regulations could be made in relation to an annual fee and also validated the basis on which previous annual fees had been charged.

Mr. Rost: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines setting out their relationship and terms of reference for the operation of the Medicines Control Agency have been issued by him.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Medicines Control Agency was set up from 1 April 1989 following the recommendations of the Evans Cunliffe report on the control of medicines. I refer my hon. Friend to the reply my right hon. Friend the then Minister for Health gave my hon. Friend the Member for Lewisham, West (Mr. Maples) on 14 April 1988 at column 206, indicating the particular recommendations which were accepted as the basis of the agency's operations.

Nurses (Regrading)

Mr. John Garrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many nurses are awaiting decisions on their regrading nationally, and in the Norwich health authority; and in each case, what percentage they are of total nurse employment.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not collected centrally.

Operating Theatre Closures

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give by region the number of operating theatres closed in 1989.

Mr. Dorrell: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Hospital Closures

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give by region the number of hospitals closed (a) wholly and (b) partly during 1989.

Mr. Dorrell: The table gives the numbers of hospitals or facilities which we are aware were approved for closure in total or in part in 1989. It is important to bear in mind that closures are often balanced by openings or other reprovision.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what basis he will set the annual financing limit for each national health service hospital trust.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State will set the external financing limit for each trust annually in the light of the trust's business plan and available resources.

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the target number of national health service trusts to be developed for ministerial approval set by the national health service management executive in its 1990-91 operational programme.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The NHS management executive has indicated that it aims to develop for my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State's approval approximately 50 NHS trusts. There is no firm target and some 80 Health Service units currently intend to prepare applications for NHS trust status in April 1991, subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary legislation.

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the financial proformas to be submitted by national health service trust status applicants.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: No. The supporting financial statements to be submitted by applicants for NHS trust status will include detailed information on their financial plans which it would not be appropriate to make publicly available.

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list those potential first-wave trusts identified by the Department's analysis of regions short-term programmes as having problems eliminating underlying deficits in 1990-91.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: No. The NHS management executive is engaged in continuing discussions with regional health authorities. Such information is not yet available.

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans his Department has to employ outside consultants to evaluate national health service trust applications.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Outside consultants will assist the Department in the analysis of financial management and information systems in potential NHS trusts as part of the assessment of trust applications when the necessary legislation has been passed.

District Health Authority Allocations

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list for each district health authority its (a) population, (b) revenue allocation, (c) capital allocation, (d) revenue allocation expressed as a sum per head of population and (e) capital allocation expressed as a sum per head of population.

Mr. Dorrell: Financial allocations are made to regional health authorities. Information is not held centrally about allocations made by regions to their districts.

Blood

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will identify for each national health service region the value of sales of blood and blood products outside national health service services.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 23 May 1990]: Health authorities make a handling charge designed to recover the costs of supplying whole blood and blood components to non-NHS hospitals. No charge is made for the blood itself which is freely donated by volunteer donors.

Information derived from the annual accounts of health authorities for 1988-89 (the latest available) is as follows:

Income from blood handling charges

Northern	17,930
Yorkshire	61,198

SOCIAL SECURITY

Community Charge

Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will set out the net weekly and marginal tax rate spending of (a) a single person, (b) a married couple, one working, (c) a man and wife and two children, one parent working, whose wage was £50, £100, £150 and £200, respectively, after taking into account income tax and national insurance and any benefits or rebates to which they could be entitled (i) before 1 April and (ii) after 1 April, to show the effect of the introduction of the community charge.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The answer is set out in the tables. It should be noted that the results in the tables remain arbitrary. They cannot reflect, except by chance, the actual circumstances of particular people and cannot claim to be representative of the population at large. The tables use hypothetical community charges and rents, so they do not reflect the full range of community charge and housing costs which people can pay.

Residential Care

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he intends to publish the Government's response to the second report of the House of Commons Social Services Committee of the current Session, on the future funding of private and voluntary residential care.

Mr. Newton: The response was laid before Parliament yesterday.

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will give figures for spending on income support for people living in private residential care in Sunderland for each year from 1985 including the first quarter of 1990;

(2) if he will give the number of people in Sunderland who are in receipt of income support and who are living in private residential care for each year since 1985 including the first quarter of 1990.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I regret that information in the form requested is not available.

Attendance Allowance

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give the number of people in Sunderland who are in receipt of attendance allowance for 1988, 1989 and the first quarter of 1990; and how many receive payments from the independent living fund.

Mr. Scott: The information requested is not available.

Severe Disability Premium

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give the number of people in Sunderland who are in receipt of severe disability premium for 1988 and 1989.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The information is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. O

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the reasons for the delays in resolving the case of Mr. O reference RM173P/C0999/71/83/3; and what steps have been taken to resolve this case.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I regret that we are unable to identify this case from the information supplied. If the hon. Member will let me have full details I shall be pleased to look into the matter.

Disallowed Unemployment Benefit

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what information is available regarding the duration of periods of unemployment benefit disqualification imposed in each quarter since April 1989.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: No information is available on the duration of periods of unemployment benefit disqualification since April 1989.

Income Support

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Birkenhead, (Mr. Field), on 8 May, Official Report, column 87, what was the proportion and number of income support and unemployment benefit claimants who (i) successfully and (ii) unsuccessfully claimed reduced income support under the hardship rules in each month since 9 October 1989 and, for each category, the numbers whose claim was in doubt due to (a) actively seeking work, (b) availability and (c) restricted availability, and the numbers in each case whose claim was awaiting adjudication, had been disallowed, or was subsequently allowed; and if he will break the figures down by region.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The statistics kept are given in the table. The remainder of the information requested is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Actively Seeking Work Test

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps have been and are being taken to improve liaison between adjudication officers in the Departments of Employment and Social Security in respect of adjudication on actively seeking work; and if he will make a statement on the process of adjudication in both Departments on claimants whose actively seeking work is brought into question, and the benefit sanctions which can be imposed by the staff in each Department before and after adjudication.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Instructions are in place to ensure close liaison between the Department and the employment service. These instructions are kept under review.

When a doubt arises as to whether a claimant is actively seeking work unemployment benefit is suspended for the weeks of doubt, usually the two weeks since the claimant was last paid. The case is then referred to an employment service adjudication officer to make a decision on title to unemployment benefit. If only income support is in payment he gives an opinion. If he decides that the claimant did not actively seek work, unemployment benefit will be disallowed. His decision/opinion is passed to the Department of Social Security adjudication officer to help him decide what income support should be paid. This happens for each fortnight during which the claimant fails to fulfil the actively seeking work condition.

The Department of Social Security adjudication officer has to decide entitlement to income support, and, if awaiting the employment service adjudication officer's decision/opinion, will assume it to be adverse to the claimant. Income support will then be withdrawn until such time as he satisfies the adjudication officer that he is again actively seeking work. If, in the adjudication officer's opinion, hardship will result, income support reduced by 40 per cent. of the personal allowance element can be paid. If the employment service adjudication officer's subsequent decision/opinion is that the claimant did actively seek work, arrears of benefit can be paid.

Wath upon Dearne Office

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what expenditure has been incurred in the maintenance or improvement of the Wath upon Dearne office of his Department during the last five years; and what further expenditure on this office is planned.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Expenditure incurred over the last five years has been as follows:

Year	Expenditure (£)
1985-86	10,581
1986-87	39,444
1987-88	53,173
1988-89	65,530
1989-90	103,713
Total	272,441

The projected expenditure for 1990-91 is around £18,000.

Rotherham Offices

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the total number of persons employed at each of the offices of his Department within the metropolitan borough of Rotherham.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The total number of such persons employed on 30 May 1990 was 278. This figure consists of 74·5 staff employed in Rotherham North and 203·5 in Rotherham South local offices.

Unemployment Benefit

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list for each month since October 1989 the number of (a) successful and (b) unsuccessful appeals by unemployed claimants against benefit sanctions arising from (i) actively seeking work, (ii) refusal of employment and (iii) restricted availability by social security region; and if he will make arrangements to place these decisions and future decisions in the Library.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Information on unemployment benefit appeals is not available for any period later than the quarter ending 30 September 1989. Moreover statistics are not routinely produced showing the breakdown of decisions within an overall benefit category.

The publication of decisions of the social security appeal tribunals is a matter for the president of the social security and medical appeal tribunals, his Honour Judge Holden, and the hon. Member may wish to contact him direct.

Energy Consumption

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give the number of energy audits carried out in his Department in the last five years and for each audit a statement of its main conclusions.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 5 June 1990]: Information is not readily available for the years 1985-86 and 1986-87. During the subsequent three years energy surveys were carried out in 30 DH/DSS buildings. The main conclusions are shown as follows:

1. Convert tungsten lighting to compact fluorescent lighting.
2. Adjust boiler controls to avoid overheating during occupancy.
3. Adjust boiler controls to eliminate unnecessary heating during silent hours.
4. Install water meters.
5. Install controls to restrict the flow of water to taps and urinals.
6. Change fluorescent tubes to a high efficacy type.
7. Improve number of switches available to staff to enable them to control their lighting.
8. Remedy defects to window frames.
9. Maintain records of the utilities.
10. Display "Energy Management" posters for publicity.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give for each year from 1978 the energy consumption, broken down by fuel, of the buildings occupied by his Department, expressing the figures in (a) cash terms, (b) 1978-79 money terms and (c) units of consumption for electricity in kilowatt hours, gas in therms, liquid fuel in litres and solid fuel in tonnes.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 5 June 1990]: Information is only available for DH/DSS jointly, from the financial year 1985-86. The figures are in the table.

	Year
	1985-86	1986-87	1987-88	1988-89

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Energy Consumption

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether the Duchy intends to appoint a dedicated energy manager devoted to energy management; and what advice he provides to leaseholders of Duchy-owned buildings about energy efficiency.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The Duchy has no plans to appoint a dedicated manager devoted to energy management, or to offer advice to its leaseholders about energy efficiency. Under the terms of lease Duchy tenants are responsible for their own energy management and consumption.

ENVIRONMENT

Water Supplies (North-East)

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many households in the north-east were disconnected from their water supplies in 1987-88 and 1988-89.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Information on disconnections is available by water company areas only. The numbers of household disconnections by the former Northumbrian and Yorkshire water authorities and by the statutory water companies (SWCs) operating in their areas were as follows:

	1987-88	1988-89
Northumbrian WA	480	770
Yorkshire WA	560	945
SWCs[1]
Hartlepools	n/a	120
Newcastle	n/a	558
Sunderland	n/a	70
York	n/a	79

[1] Total disconnections, household and non-household.

Clinical Waste

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many local authorities have facilities for the collection of clinical waste.

Mr. Trippier: My Department is currently conducting a review of clinical waste management systems, but there is no comprehensive information available at present. Every waste collection authority has a duty to collect all clinical waste that is also household waste and a duty to collect any such commercial waste if requested to do so.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many local authorities charge for the collection of clinical waste from (a) private nursing homes, (b) voluntary sector residential homes and (c) private dwellings under the Collection and Disposal of Waste Regulations 1988; and on what basis each local authority charges for its collections.

Mr. Trippier: Information on local authority charges is not held centrally. DOE circular 13/88 (Welsh Office circular 19/88) advises local authorities that charges should be realistic and should have a direct relationship to the cost of providing the service.

Local Government Officers

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what number of people will be excluded by the change of qualifying date to 1 April 1986 from buying back reckonable service under the local government officers' superannuation scheme.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: This information is not available.

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the total cost of providing pensions for part-time local government officers who retired between 1974 and 1 April 1986.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: It is not possible to provide an estimate, since the number of retired officers concerned is not known.

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment for what reason the original qualifying date of 1974 for the superannuation scheme for local government officers was replaced by a new qualifying date of 1 April 1986.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: When pensions for part-time employees in local government were first established by the Local Government Superannuation (Miscellaneous Provisions) Regulations 1987 it was not possible to backdate them beyond 1 April 1986 because of the destruction of pay records for earlier years and the need to avoid double payment of pensions where employees had been contributors to SERPS. For similar reasons, it will not be possible to apply the new draft regulations now being circulated for purchase of added years before that date.

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to finalise the regulations to permit part-time local government officers to join the superannuation scheme.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Part-time local government officers were first admitted to the local government superannuation scheme under the terms of the Local Government Superannuation (Miscellaneous Provisions) Regulations 1987. Further regulations to allow these employees to purchase additional service at a concessionary rate are currently the subject of consultation with local government. It is hoped to make them as soon as possible once the responses to the consultation have been considered.

Shetland Seabirds

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the research projects commissioned by the Nature Conservancy Council into the breeding failure of Shetland seabirds, together with relevant dates and sums allocated.

Mr. Trippier: The information is as follows:

Attlebridge Tip, Norfolk

Mr. John Garrett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what toxic substances are dumped in the tip at Attlebridge, Norfolk.

Mr. Trippier: The responsibility for determining which substances may be deposited at waste disposal facilities rests with the disposal authority who exercise this control through the conditions of the site licence. The Control of Pollution Act 1974 requires that each disposal authority maintains, for public inspection, a register containing copies of all disposal licences issued by that authority and currently in force. I suggest, therefore, that the hon. Member should apply to Norfolk county council for the information he seeks.

Toxic Wastes

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the text of the recent letter sent to the Major of Rotherham, Councillor Ron Hughes, by his right hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment and Countryside concerning his Department's involvement in the problem of toxic wastes imported to Wath Recycling in Rotherham.

Mr. Trippier: Councillor Hughes wrote to me, at the close of his year of office as Mayor of Rotherham, seeking an announcement about a solution to the problem of imported wastes at Wath Recycling. I replied to him on 18 May explaining that we have been working closely with the United States Environmental Protection Agency to secure a settlement between the parties to avoid lengthy litigation. This involves a programme of action to secure the return of as much waste as possible to the USA and to deal with the remainder in an environmentally sound manner. Agreement to any such programme still depends on a number of aspects under investigation.

I invited Councillor Hughes and local hon. Members to make my letter public if they wished and I am sending the hon. Member a copy.

Electro-osmosis

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he possesses on the process developed at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and recently made public, to clean up contaminated soils of hazardous waste substances using a technique called electro-osmosis.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: My officials are aware of the MIT process and have been monitoring its progress. There have been commercial applications involving electro-osmosis in the United Kingdom but not so far involving the treatment of contaminated land.

Landslides

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment has been made by his Department, or consultants to his Department, of the dangers posed from potential landslides; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: The Department has been actively commissioning research on landslides since the mid-1970s and is continuing so to do. A list of relevant projects is appended to this answer. Initially work was concentrated in the valleys of the south Wales coalfield, where landslides had been known to cause problems for many years.

However, in 1984, it was recognised that the information on landsliding in Britain as a whole was deficient and a national review of research into landsliding in Great Britain which aimed to discover what work had been done on landslides in Britain, to assess its general applicability and to identify any gaps in knowledge and priorities for any further work needed was undertaken. This review was completed towards the end of 1987. The detailed results are available in the Department's library and a summary report will shortly be published.

The results of this work have assisted in providing the basis for planning policy guidance (PPG 14) on development on unstable land which was issued by my Department and the Welsh Office on 30 April.

Greenhouse Effect

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what research is being undertaken for his Department on the greenhouse effect by the James Rennel centre for ocean circulation at Southampton university.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The Department is not commissioning any research at the James Rennell centre for ocean circulation at this time. The centre is currently being established by the natural environment research council at Southampton university with funding from the science budget. It will open in October 1990.

Romanian Oil Refineries

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consideration he has given to making available pollution control expertise gained in the United Kingdom oil industry to Romania to assist in environmental clean up of the oil refineries in Ploiesti.

Mr. Trippier: The extent of the environmental damage by the communist regimes in eastern Europe requires international assistance. The United Kingdom is acting primarily through a joint programme co-ordinated by the European Commission. This programme is expected to extend to Romania. In the United Kingdom the oil industry would no doubt consider requests by the Romanian Government where it could offer practical assistance.

Atmospheric Conditions (Monitoring)

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) pursuant to the answer of 1 May, Official Report, columns 502-3, if he will give comparable figures on nitrogen dioxide, ozone and acidity of rain at each of the monitoring sites then in operation for each year since 1979; (2) pursuant to the answer of 1 May, Official Report, columns 502-3, if he will give comparable figures for suphur dioxide concentrations in each region for every year since 1979.

Mr. Trippier: The information requested is in the table. Additional data have been published in the relevant Department of the Environment scientific review group and other reports: "Ozone in the United Kingdom" (United Kingdom photochemical oxidants review group), "Acidity in United Kingdom Fresh Waters" (United Kingdom acid waters review group second report), "Acid Deposition in the United Kingdom" (United Kingdom review group on acid rain second report) and "Lake Acidification in the United Kingdom" (paleoecology research unit, University College London). Parish Councils

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will seek powers to apply section 28 of the Local Government Act 1972 to England.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer, 5 June 1990]: No: there seem to be no compelling reason to change the present arrangements in England for creating or dissolving parish councils.

Energy Consumption

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give for each year from 1978 the energy consumption broken down by fuel, of the buildings occupied by his Department, expressing the figures in (a) cash terms, (b) 1978-79 money terms and (c) units of consumption for electricity in kilowatt hours, gas in therms, liquid fuel in litres and solid fuel in tonnes.

Mr. Chris Patten [holding answer 5 June 1990]: Information on my Department's energy consumption is not available in the form requested. New monitoring systems not in place will ensure that detailed consumption information will be available in the future and will assist in measuring the success of our energy conservation programme.

Sewage Works

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list all outstanding applications for (a) long sea outfalls, and (b) sewage treatment works.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 17 May 1990]: Responsibility for granting consents for discharges made by the water services companies rests with the National Rivers Authority. This responsibility includes the determination of all undetermined applications submitted to the Department by the former water authorities which, under the transitional provisions of the Water Act 1989, are treated as if they had been made by the water services company to the National Rivers Authority.

The only exceptions to these are applications that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has called in for his own consideration. In the case of sewage treatment works, these were applications from the former water authorities for time-limited consents for those works covered by the accelerated improvement programme announced by my hon. and learned Friend the then Minister for Housing and Planning on 7 December 1988 at column 199. All but those listed have been determined and my Department will shortly be writing to all objectors informing them of the outcome of each application.

Anglian Water Authority—Bletsoe and Newton Blossomville
Severn Trent Water Authority—Baschurch
North West Water Authority—Rossendale and Rochdale

Details of all outstanding applications are available from the public registers held by the National Rivers Authority.

The Department has no outstanding applications in respect of discharge consents for long sea outfalls.

Energy Consumption

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the information collected by the Property Services Agency about the use of energy in Government buildings.

Mr. Chope: The PSA collects no information about the use of energy in Government buildings, apart from that required for its own energy management purposes. Responsibility for energy management rests with individual Departments and, centrally, with the Department of Energy.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Neil Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will confirm the charge cap of Hillingdon borough council.

Mr. Chris Patten: I have today laid before the House of Commons a draft order under section 104 of the Local Government Finance Act 1988 stating that the amount ("the cap") which Hillingdon's budget for 1990-91 is not to exceed is £141,700,000. If the House approves the draft I shall make the order and serve on the council as soon as reasonably practicable thereafter a notice confirming the amount of Hillingdon's final cap. The way will then be clear for the council to set a new, lower budget within the capped amount and for the charge payers of Hillingdon to benefit from the lower charge that will ensue.

WALES

Cardiff Bay Development Corporation (Chief Executive)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what advice or instructions were given by his Department to the board of the Cardiff Bay development corporation concerning the appointment of a chief executive in 1987-88; and if he will list his powers and responsibilities in relation to such appointments.

Mr. David Hunt: Under the provisions of schedule 26 of the Local Government, Planning and Land Act 1980 sole responsibility for the appointment of the chief executive rests with the Cardiff Bay development corporation.

Wrexham Maelor Hospital

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he will decide whether to authorise a subsidiary dialysis unit at Wrexham Maelor hospital; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: Agreement in principle to fund a subsidiary renal unit at Wrexham Maelor hospital was announced on 21 May and Clwyd health authority has been invited to submit appropriate proposals to the Welsh Office.

Operating Theatre Closures

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give the number of operating theatres closed in 1989.

Mr. David Hunt: Figures on numbers of operating theatres were first collected as at 31 March 1989. Subsequently, quarterly figures have been collected. Provisional figures show a net gain of two operating theatres during the period from 1 April to 31 December 1989.

Hospital Closures

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give the number of hospitals closed (a) wholly and (b) partly during 1989.

Mr. David Hunt: There were no closures of hospitals in 1989. 13 permanent partial closures were implemented in the year on service rationalisation and policy grounds.

Waste Disposal

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will identify the location and status of waste disposal sites in Wales by waste disposal authorities, waste type, town, location of facility, name of facility and land size.

Mr. Grist: Information on waste disposal sites is held on the public registers required to be maintained by district councils in Wales, and I would refer the hon. Gentleman to the relevant authority of authorities.

Insulation

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proportion of dwellings in each district in Wales are insulated to the standard recommended by his Department.

Mr. Grist: All new houses have to meet the standards of insulation specified in building regulations. No information is available centrally giving the number of houses which meet these standards.

SCOTLAND

National Health Service

16. Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many health boards in Scotland will remain within budget in the current year.

Mr. Rifkind: All health boards are required to remain within resources made available to them.

17. Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any plans to meet the chairman of Lothian health board to discuss the financing of the board.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Yes.

18. Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what new investment and improvements his Department has made to health services in Scotland so far this year.

Mr. Forsyth: I do not wish to detain the House with a lengthy list, but improvements include the helicopter ambulance, the commitment of a heart transplant service and a number of new hospital projects including a maternity unit for Moray.

44. Sir Hector Monro: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what new developments he is proposing for the national health service in Scotland.

Mr. Rifkind: My hon. Friend the Minister responsible for health recently announced six substantial new developments for the national health service in Scotland. First, he has asked Grampian health board to prepare detailed proposals for a new specialist maternity unit in Elgin and for a new cottage hospital in Peterhead. Both units are to be developed on the existing hospital sites. Tayside health board's proposals for a new hospital in Crieff to replace outdated facilities at Crieff cottage hospital and Bridge of Earn hospital have been approved. Together these three capital projects represent an investment of some £20 million in the NHS estate.

The helicopter ambulance services based on Inverness will be centrally funded to serve the more remote parts of Scotland and allow rapid transfer of patients requiring urgent hospital treatment. This will cost some £600,000.

A new national service for the rehabilitation of brain-injured patients is to be established to complement and enhance the work already being carried out in the NHS and the private sector. It is estimated that there are around 500 patients in Scotland who would likely to benefit from intensive specialised rehabilitation services, many of whom are young people whose quality of life could be vastly enhanced if these facilities were available.

Finally, I am delighted that Scotland is to get its first heart and heart/lung transplant unit so that Scots patients do not have to travel to England for transplant surgery. Many Scots have benefited from the service in England but the long journeys are distressing for very ill patients and their relatives. A new Scottish unit will be much more accessible and will build on the considerable improvements in cardiac surgery in Scotland, which now carry out 2,500 cardiac operations a year.

41. Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent discussions he has had with Grampian health board on its 10-year development strategy.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Health Boards are required to submit strategic plans and my officials meet boards regularly to review and monitor progress.

35. Mr. Ron Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met Lothian health board to discuss its funding problems; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The chief executive of the NHS in Scotland has been in regular contact with the Lothian health board chairman and officials over recent weeks about the board's financial problems.

Newbattle Abbey College

19. Mr. Eadie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland following receipt of the proposals from the governors of Newbattle Abbey college to the Scottish Education Department meeting the points raised by the Secretary of State when he withdrew grant aid to that college last year, whether he is now in a position to announce his intention to restore grant aid to the college.

Mr. Lang: My right hon. and learned Friend has considered the plan submitted to him recently by the governors of Newbattle Abbey college and has concluded that it does not represent a basis for reopening his decision to withdraw direct funding for the college. The trustees and the board of governors have been advised of this decision.

Community Care

20. Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has met the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities to discuss the Government's community care proposals.

Mr. Lang: I have had two wide-ranging and constructive discussions with representatives of the convention's social work committee on this subject—one on 8 September 1989 and the other on 15 May 1990.

Edinburgh Royal Hospital for Sick Children

21. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has on the waiting time between arrival of emergency cases and examination of those cases at the Edinburgh Royal Hospital for Sick Children.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I understand that Lothian health board is taking action to minimise delays by increasing the number of doctors and changing the doctors' rota system.

Passenger Ferry Services

22. Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met both the chairman and the chief executive of Caledonian MacBrayne to discuss passenger ferry services in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. and learned Friend has not met the chairman or chief executive of Caledonian MacBrayne since he took the company into his direct ownership on 2 April. However, my noble Friend the Minister of State and I met the chairman on 19 February shortly after his appointment, and I expect to meet the full board of the company on 25 June. Regular and frequent discussions take place between officials of the Scottish Development Department and Caledonian MacBrayne.

Self-governing Schools

23. Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many schools in Scotland have formally expressed interest in opting out.

36. Mr. McKelvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many schools in Scotland have expressed interest in opting out.

Mr. Lang: At one school, Holm primary school in Orkney, parents have presented the school board with a formal request seeking a ballot on self-governing status.

Local Government

24. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any plans to devolve more powers to Scottish local authorities; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: We propose to delegate to local authorities further powers to issue relaxations of the Building Standards (Scotland) Regulations. This would take effect early next year at the same time as proposed new building standards regulations come into force.

Housing

25. Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what initiatives he intends to take with respect to solving Scotland's housing problem.

29. Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what initiatives he intends to take with respect to solving Scotland's housing problem.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave earlier today to the hon. Members for Banff and Buchan (Mr. Salmond) and for Moray (Mrs. Ewing).

Ancillary Staff

26. Mr. Moonie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has received any representation on the reimbursement of ancillary staff costs via general practitioners in Scotland.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Eight general practitioners in Scotland have made representations.

Incomes

27. Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland by how much average real incomes in Scotland have risen since 1979.

Mr. Lang: It is estimated that between 1979 and 1989 the average earnings of full-time employees on adult rates in Scotland grew by a quarter (25 per cent.) in real terms.

Steel Industry

28. Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any plans to meet trade union representatives from the Scottish steel industry to discuss investment in the Scottish steel industry.

Mr. Lang: I refer the hon. Member to the answer which my right hon. and learned Friend gave today to the hon. Member for Motherwell, North (Dr. Reid).

Nuclear Waste

30. Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received about the siting of a nuclear waste repository in the Highlands.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. and learned Friend received a number of representations about the siting of a nuclear waste repository during his consideration of the appeal lodged by the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority against Highland regional council's decision to refuse planning permission for the drilling of two test boreholes at Dounreay. However, these representations were not relevant to that appeal, which related only to the application for test drilling. Any proposal for a nuclear waste repository would be the subject of a separate planning application and any objections which it attracted would be considered in that context.

Education Funding

31. Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what consideration he has given to removing the funding of education from local authority control.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: None.

COSLA

32. Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met the president of the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities to discuss local government.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I refer the hon. and learned Member to the reply which my right hon. and learned Friend gave to the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce) on 2 May.

39. Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met the president of the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities to discuss the first year of the administration of the poll tax.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. and learned Friend and I met the president and other senior officers of the convention on 6 April. This was the first of this year's meetings to discuss Government support for local authority current expenditure in 1991-92. There was also some discussion of a progress report prepared by the convention on the first year of the administration of the community charge.

Coronary Care

33. Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he is taking to secure improved coronary care.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Cardiac surgery funding has been increased; a heart transplant unit is planned; and further educational initiatives will focus on the prevention of coronary heart disease.

Freightliner Working Party

34. Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next expects to meet the Freightliner working party to discuss job prospects for Scotland, including those arising from the Channel tunnel project.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The remit of the Scottish Freight working group, one of a number of advisory groups set up by British Rail to advise it on the preparation of its plans for the provision of freight and passenger services to the Channel tunnel, has now been completed and there are no plans for the group to reconvene. My right hon. and learned Friend is not aware of the existence of a Freightliner working party.

Head Teachers

37. Mr. Buchan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many head teachers of mixed-sex secondary schools in Scotland are women; what is the total number of head teachers in such schools; and what percentage of that total are women.

Mr. Lang: Of 419 head teachers of public sector mixed-sex secondary schools in Scotland recorded in the school census of September 1988, 15 (4 per cent.) were women.

Infertility Clinics

38. Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the average waiting time for a first appointment at an infertility clinic.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: This information is not collected centrally.

Lowland Scottish Bus Group

40. Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State if he will make a statement on the privatisation of the Lowland Scottish bus group.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. and learned Friend announced on 1 June 1990 that he has given his consent to the sale by the Scottish Transport Group of Lowland Scottish Omnibuses Ltd. to the company's management-employee buy-out team.

Scottish Assembly

42. Mr. Gow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent representations he has received about the setting up of an assembly in Edinburgh.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Five letters in the past six months.

Training

43. Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will detail the information on training matters, hitherto available through Parliamentary questions, which will be restricted under the heading of commercial confidential following the establishment of Scottish Enterprise and Highlands and Islands Enterprise.

Mr. Lang: To the extent that information on training matters is regarded as commercial in confidence at present, it is likely to be so regarded in future; and conversely where such information is not presently regarded as commercial in confidence, it is not likely to be so regarded in future.

Flooding, Tayside

45. Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give details of the aid which his Department has given to flood victims in Tayside; and what assistance his Department has received from the Tayside regional council and the Tay purification board.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: No claims have yet been received from farmers in Tayside in respect of the special assistance for the repair of elevated floodbanks. Similarly, claims from local authorities from assistance under the Bellwin arrangements are still awaited.

The Scottish Office received valuable assistance from the Tay river purification board in the form of situation reports and detailed information on river levels and flows. The board also concluded that a flood warning system for the River Tay should be completed as soon as practicable. The Scottish Office endorsed this proposal by adjusting the board's borrowing consent to permit the necessary expenditure to be incurred this year.

Tayside regional council acted as co-ordinators for the emergency services during the flood. Council staff operated the emergency control centre and teams of workmen and equipment were supplied to meet problems as they arose. In addition, situation reports were provided to the Scottish Office.

In response to a suggestion by my noble Friend the Minister of State, the regional council has taken the lead in co-ordinating the various interests concerned with river corridor management in the Tay area. The council has identified a need for an independent survey by expert hydrologists and has already interviewed consultants in this field about the terms of a possible brief for such a study. A meeting of interested parties is currently being arranged and will be held shortly.

For our part, the Government have agreed to contribute up to £10,000 towards the costs of the study and Scottish Office officials will continue to co-operate in these initiatives.

Barrhead

46. Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with the Scottish Development Agency about the regeneration of Barrhead.

Mr. Lang: My right hon. and learned Friend has had no recent discussions with the SDA about the regeneration of Barrhead. However, following the meeting I had with my hon. Friend the Member for Eastwood (Mr. Stewart), the agency is participating in the Barrhead regeneration study. A meeting to discuss the results of that study is planned for the middle of this month.

The agency continues to be involved in plans to develop the vacant land on the Armitage Shanks site. It has also provided advice to the management on its recent buy-out of the stainless steel operation at Barrhead.

A92-94

47. Mr. Buchanan-Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects the dualling of the A92-94 road Perth to Aberdeen to be completed and in operation: and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Rifkind: During the past decade the Government have given high priority to the upgrading of the Perth to Aberdeen route to dual carriageway. During this period, 12 schemes have been completed on the route at a total cost of £75 million. Three further schemes valued in total at nearly £20 million are currently under construction and are all programmed to be completed during this financial year. The penultimate improvement on this route is the £10 million Tarbrax to Forfar scheme, which is due to start construction later this year, leaving the Brechin bypass as the final improvement scheme to be undertaken. The necessary preparatory work and statutory procedures for this scheme are expected to be completed later this year and it will then be considered for a start date in light of its relative priority and available resources.

Low flying

48. Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what action he proposes to take in the light of the recommendations of the Defence Select Committee's recent report into low flying by the Royal Air Force.

Mr. Neubert: I have been asked to reply. The Government are considering very carefully the report on low flying by the House of Commons Defence Committee and will respond to all its recommendations in their reply to the Committee.

Bankruptcy

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list for each year since inception of the Bankruptcy (Scotland) Act 1985 the names of the 10 trustees who were most frequently appointed in sequestrations, and for each year the number of cases in which each was appointed.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is set out in the table:

Nursery Education

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of three and four-year-old children were receiving nursery education at local authority maintained nursery schools in each education authority area in Scotland (a) during the present academic year and (b) in 1979-80.

Mr. Lang: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. and learned Friend to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Garscadden (Mr. Dewar) on 15 May.

Operating Theatre Closures

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give by health board the number of operating theatres closed in 1989.

Mr. Rifkind: Forth Valley health board closed and relocated five old theatres in 1989. Argyll and Clyde closed one pending refurbishment.

Hospital Closures

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give by health board the number of hospitals closed (a) wholly and (b) partly during 1989.

Mr. Rifkind: There were no partial closures in 1989 but two hospitals in Lothian health board and two hospitals in Highland health board were wholly closed.

During the same period six major hospital developments were completed, including phase 1 of St. John's hospital, Livingston.

ICI (Explosives Dumping)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to the reply to the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce), of 17 May, Official Report, column 517, what steps he is taking to ensure no omission will occur in future publications of reports on disposal of waste at sea.

Mr. Lang: The figures previously given for 1986 and 1987 are being checked against the detailed Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland records of all dumping operations licensed under part II of the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985. Figures for 1988 and 1989 are being checked on the same basis. The corrected figures will be published as soon as possible.

Appropriate instructions have now been issued to ensure that any figures given in future are derived directly from the records of licences issued. This should avoid unintended omissions.

Sodium Leak, Dounreay

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what dangers were posed to the work force and local public in Caithness by the sodium leak at Dounreay nuclear power development establishment on 26 April.

Mr. Lang: There was no danger to either the work force or the general public from the incident at Dounreay on 24 April.

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what considerations lay behind the decision not to make public the leak of sodium at Dounreay nuclear power development establishment on 26 April.

Mr. Lang: I understand that the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority included information about the incident which had occurred at Dounreay on the previous day in the site newsletter which was issued on 25 April, copies of which were deposited in the Libraries of both Houses.

Dumping, Firth of Clyde

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what findings have emerged from the survey of the dump site for explosives at Birch Point in the Firth of Clyde; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: A report on the survey, by a DAF research vessel from 14-17 May, and other investigations on the explosives dumped at the Birch Point site is in preparation and will be published as soon as possible. The visual evidence and observations of trawlers in the area confirm that there has been recent and continuing trawling of fishing gear across the dump site. A warning to steer clear of the area, with guidance on what to do if explosives are encountered in fishing nets, was given by notice to fishermen on 8 May and on 18 May. My right hon. and learned Friend will consider what further action may be necessary in the light of the final report.

Local Enterprise Companies

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what decisions he has reached about the bids submitted to him from local enterprise companies wishing to run training credits pilot schemes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Rifkind: I am delighted to announce that, of the three bids submitted to me, two have been approved for further development.

The two successful bids are from Fife Enterprise and Grampian Enterprise, each of which will receive £10,000 to work up detailed bids by 27 July. Both successful bids offered imaginative approaches to mounting training credits pilot schemes in their area, and were able to demonstrate wide-ranging support from both the private and public sectors locally.

I regret that the third bid—from Caithness and Sutherland Enterprise—was not successful. However it too had interesting elements, and I have therefore asked that the Training Agency Highland area office explore with the consortium the extent to which its ideas can be developed within the existing training framework.

That two out of the three bids submitted from Scottish local enterprise companies succeeded on merits (as compared with 15 out of 29 bids submitted from England and Wales) clearly demonstrates the quality of these Scottish bids.

I congratulate the two successful local enterprise companies on their efforts to date, and look forward to receiving their detailed bids in due course.

Redundancies, Glasgow

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many notified redundancies there have been in the former GEAR area/east end of Glasgow in 1987, 1988, 1989 and 1990 to date.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 24 May 1990]: Information is not available for the whole area specified but the numbers of redundancies, involving 10 or more workers, notified to the Department of Employment in the Parkhead jobcentre area are as follows:

	Numbers
1987	489
1988	1,074
1989	417
[1]1990	146

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Spongiform Encephalopathy (Cats)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information he has on the number of cats awaiting diagnostic tests for spongiform encephalopathy at Bristol university.

Mr. Gummer: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 5 June 1990.

Bees

Mr. Mills: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what consultations he has held concerning European and national control of diseases affecting bees.

Mr. Curry: The EC Commission has recently issued proposals for EC controls on bee health to replace national measures after 1992. The Department is in close touch with United Kingdom beekeeping associations and other interested organisations on these proposals. Our aim in the forthcoming negotiations will be to obtain the best safeguards possible to protect United Kingdom bee health.

Rabies

Mr. Mills: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent representations he has received concerning the control of rabies after the completion of the channel tunnel.

Mr. Maclean: This year the Department has received 31 letters concerning rabies controls for the channel tunnel. The inquiries have been assured that planned control measures will ensure that the channel tunnel presents no greater rabies risk than other forms of cross-channel transport.

Topsoil

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many tons of topsoil are being lost per acre due to overcultivation, improper irrigation, ploughed grassland, and deforestation in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Curry: This information is not available.

I am, however, concerned that good agricultural practices are followed to contain soil losses through erosion on susceptible land. There has been considerable research, much of it funded by this Department, and Agricultural Development and Advisory Service staff and their counterparts in Scotland and Northern Ireland are well equipped to provide advice on the means of minimising soil losses.

Pet Food

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to ensure those pet food manufacturers not represented by the Pet Food Manufacturers Association do not include those offals specified in the Bovine Offals Order in their pet food products; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: This is a commercial matter. There is no scientific justification for not using the specified bovine offals in pet food.

Mink Farms

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information he has on the disposal of carcases from mink farms; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: I understand that most are disposed of on licensed toxic waste tips.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will send to Manchester city council and Trafford council the same information given by Her Majesty's Government to Westminister city council in relation to BSE.

Mr. Maclean: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for South Shields (Dr. Clark) on 17 May.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the likely total number of cattle which have consumed scrapie-infected feed and which are still alive.

Mr. Maclean: This information is not available.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will update the reply given to the hon. Member for Caerphilly (Mr. Davies) on 1 May, Official Report, column 465, concerning the youngest confirmed case found of bovine spongiform encephalopathy in a calf.

Mr. Maclean: The youngest confirmed case remains the 22-month-old cow.

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the number of cattle slaughtered because of bovine spongiform encephalopathy by their specific breeds.

Mr. Maclean: The total number of confirmed cases in each breed up to 23 May is as follows:

Mr. Maclean: A listing of the current membership of the Advisory Committee on Novel Foods and Processes is set out in the table. Members are requested to observe the confidential nature of the commercial information put before them. However, they are not asked to give a specific undertaking on secrecy.

Bass

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he proposes to proceed with plans to designate nursery areas for the protection of juvenile bass stocks; and if he will make a statment.

Mr. Curry [pursuant to his reply, of 19 April 1990, c. 980]: Regulations establishing 34 nursery areas in the coastal waters of England and Wales and prohibiting fishing for bass from vessels for all parts of the year were laid before Parliament today. The Bass (Specified Sea Areas) (Prohibition of Fishing) Order 1990, SI 1990 No. 1156, will take effect from 27 June this year.

The nursery areas are those announced on 19 April with one modification so as to exclude a portion of the eastern areas of Poole harbour. The regulations complete the package of measures that the Fisheries Departments are adopting for the long-term conservation and management of the bass fishery. The other parts of the package, an increase in the minimum landing size from 32 to 36 cm and the introduction of mesh size controls for gill and similar nets, came into operation in January.

An advisory leaflet, "Bass: Nursery Areas and Other Conservation Measures", will be issued by the Department and the Welsh Office within the next fortnight. Copies will be sent to fishermen's organisations, sea anglers' associations, sea fisheries committees and the National Rivers Authority and will also be available on request from this Department and the Welsh Office.

EMPLOYMENT

Low Pay

49. Mr. Allen Adams: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he has any proposals to improve the financial circumstances of low-paid workers.

Mr. Nicholls: The best way to help the lower paid is through continuing economic and employment growth and greater prosperity for all.

Mines

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) how many (a) fatal accidents and (b) major accidents there were in (i) British Coal deep mines, (ii) licensed private deep coal mines, (iii) British Coal opencast mines and (iv) licensed private opencast coal mines in (1) England, (2) Scotland and (3) Wales in each of the last five years;

(2) what was the number of (a) fatal injuries and (b) major injuries in (i) British Coal deep mines, (ii) licensed private deep coal mines, (iii) British Coal opencast mines and (iv) licensed private opencast mines in (1) England, (2) Scotland and (3) Wales in each of the last five years for which figures are available.

Mr. Nicholls: It is not possible to determine the number of accidents that resulted in (a) fatal injuries or (b) major injuries without incurring disproportionate cost.

The numbers of fatal injuries at the premises listed are:

	England			Scotland			Wales
	British Coal deep mines	Licensed coal mines	Opencast coal quarries	British Coal deep mines	Licensed coal mines	Opencast coal quarries	British Coal deep mines	Licensed coal mines	Opencast coal mines
[1]1984-85	17	—	—	1	—	1	2	2	—
1985-86	22	—	2	3	—	—	3	1	—
1986-87	11	1	—	1	2	—	3	—	1
1987-88	8	2	—	1	—	1	—	1	1
1988-89	14	1	—	—	1	1	4	—	—

[1]Covering a 15 month period January 1984 to March 1985.

It is not possible to separate major injuries for England, Scotland and Wales without incurring disproportionate cost. National figures are as follows:

	British Coal deep mines	Licensed coal mines	Opencast coal quarries
[1]1984-85	365	13	19
1985-86	715	17	29
[2]1986-87	952	30	49
1987-88	729	27	48
1988-89	685	25	45

[1]Covering a 15 month period January 1984 to March 1985.

[2]The introduction of the RIDDOR Regulations on 1 April 1986 widened the coverage of the "serious" injury category. Major injury figures from 1986-87 are therefore not directly comparable with those from earlier years.

Adjudication Officers

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give the number of unemployed claimants in Great Britain, each region, London and each

London employment service area who have been referred to an adjudication officer on grounds of voluntary unemployment, for each month since 9 October 1989, categorised according to each reason for disqualification; and how many in each case have (i) been disqualified; (ii) not been disqualified and (iii) are awaiting adjudication.

Mr. Eggar: The employment service, which is responsible for the administration of unemployment benefit, became an executive agency on 2 April 1990. Mr. Mike Fogden, the employment service's chief executive, will be replying in writing to the hon. Member.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) if he will update the information on decisions by adjudication officers he gave in the Official Report, 25 October 1989, columns 501-2, for each month since 9 October 1989, and including information on the number of referrals to adjudication officers;

(2) what information he has on the average time between the submission of cases to adjudication officers on (i) actively seeking work, (ii) refusal of employment and (iii) availability, and on adjudication decision, in London and its employment service areas, and throughout Great Britain; and if he will make a statement on adjudication officer staffing levels.

Mr. Eggar: The employment service, which is responsible for providing statistical information on claims for unemployment benefit, became an executive agency on 2 April 1990. Mr. Mike Fogden, the employment service's executive, will be replying in writing to the hon. Member.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list his Department's area adjudication sections in London and the number and physical location of adjudication officers; and if he will make a statement on their relocation, indicating where they will be located in the future and the methods that will be used to ensure that adjudication officers have the necessary local labour market knowledge required to adjudicate on questions of availability and actively seeking work.

Mr. Eggar: The employment service, which is responsible for the location of adjudication officers, became an executive agency on 2 April 1990. Mr. Mike Fogden, the employment service's chief executive, will be replying in writing to the hon. Member.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what information he has on the percentage of (i) refusal of employment, (ii) actively seeking work, (iii) availability and (iv) restricted availability questions decided within four weeks of referral to an adjudication officer for each employment service area, for the last four quarters.

Mr. Eggar: The employment service, which is responsible for collating statistics on claims for unemployment benefit, became an executive agency on 2 April 1990. Mr. Mike Fogden, the employment service's chief executive, will be replying in writing to the hon. Member.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the information collected on the 5 per cent. sample of adjudication officers' cases referred to in his answer of 8 January, Official Report, column 490, with regard to the average time between receipt of a referral and an adjudication decision on (a) refusal of employment and (b) actively seeking work.

Mr. Eggar: The employment service, which is responsible for collecting statistics on claims for unemployment benefit, became an executive agency on 2 April 1990. Mr. Mike Fogden, the employment service's chief executive, will be replying in writing to the hon. Member.

Employment Service Office Managers

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the names, addresses and telephone numbers of each employment service area office manager.

Mr. Eggar: The employment service, which is responsible for the network of local and area offices, became an executive agency on 2 April 1990. Mr. Mike Fogden, the employment service's chief executive, will be replying in writing to the hon. Member.

Restart

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many restart interviews were conducted, and how many people were (a) referred to each menu option at the restart interview, (b) what numbers actually took up their referral, (c) what numbers were referred to the unemployment benefit service for (i) failure to attend the restart interview, (ii) refusal of employment, (iii) actively seeking work, (iv) non-availability and (v) restricted availability, for the quarters ended September 1989, December 1989, and March 1990; and in each case what number had their benefit suspended or withdrawn; and if he is able to give a regional breakdown of the figures.

Mr. Eggar: The employment service, which is responsible for the restart programme, became an executive agency on 2 April 1990. Mr. Mike Fogden, the employment service's chief executive, will be replying in writing to the hon. Member.

Mines and Quarries Inspectors

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many inspectors from Her Majesty's mines and quarries inspectorate were based in (a) England, (b) Scotland and (c) Wales in each of the last five years.

Mr. Nicholls: The information requested is shown in the table. Figures relate to the locations of district or area offices; some mines inspectorate district offices cover areas which extend over territorial boundaries and mines and quarries inspectors may work in more than one district or area.

Number of inspectors in HSE's Mines and Quarries Inspectorates[1] based in:

	England[2]	Scotland	Wales	Total
(1 April)
1985	70	9	13	92
1986	65	7	10	82
1987	66	7	11	84
1988	56	5	11	72

	England[2]	Scotland	Wales	Total
1989	51	6	10	67
1990	47	[3]2	9	58

[1] On 1 October 1989, the quarries inspectorate transferred to HSE's factory and agricultural inspectorate division.
[2] The totals for England include inspectors based in the inspectorates' headquarters.
[3] The mines inspectorate's Scottish and north eastern district office moved from Edinburgh to Gosforth in September 1989.

Toxic Chemicals

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the work of the working group on the assessment of toxic chemicals, in so far as it affects the health and safety of industrial work forces.

Mr. Nicholls: The working group on the assessment of toxic chemicals undetakes scientific assessments of the toxicological, epidemiological, and other data relating to hazardous substances to which persons may be exposed in workplaces. It makes recommendations to the Advisory Committee on Toxic Substances, which advises the Health and Safety Commission, on the assignment of occupational exposure limits for such substances. These limits are for use in determining the adequacy of the control of exposure under the Control of Substances Hazardous to Health Regulations 1988.

Advisory Committee on Dangerous Substances

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he has any plans to expand his Advisory Committee on Dangerous Substances by inviting professional environmentalists to become members.

Mr. Nicholls: No. This is an advisory committee of the Health and Safety Commission and its terms of reference and membership are matters for the commission to consider.

Labour and Social Affairs Council

Mr. Stevens: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the outcome of the Labour and Social Affairs Council meeting held in Brussels on Tuesday 29 May.

Mr. Howard: The meeting was very constructive. The main business was the adoption of a resolution put forward by the Irish Presidency on action to assist the long-term unemployed.

The council also adopted a resolution on the fight against racism and xenophobia; and a proposal for an action programme on continuing training. I expressed my support for the objectives of this decision; but made clear our objections to the inclusion of the social charter in the recital.

There was a discussion of how we should amend existing regulations governing the freedom of movement for workers within the Community; and of a proposal for a new regulation on eligibility of migrant workers and their families to non-contributory benefits. It was agreed both issues needed further consideration.

The council also adopted a resolution on the protection of the dignity of women and men at work, which is concerned with protection against sexual harassment; the third joint programme to encourage the exchange of young workers within the Community; and two directives on minimum health and safety requirements for workers in these areas: handling heavy loads where there is a risk of back injury for workers; and for work with display screen equipment. A common position was reached on a third directive on the protection of workers from the risks related to exposure to biological agents at work.

In informal discussion, we considered how we might support the efforts of Poland and Hungary to move to a free market economy. Their Ministers for Employment had addressed Community Employment Ministers at an informal meeting on 28 May.

Finally, Commisssioner Papandreou gave a first informal report on member states' implementation of measures already agreed in the social area. This was in response to my request for regular reports on implementation; and I have asked her to let member states have her report in writing.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Higher Education

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has on the numbers of people who applied for higher education, by higher educational establishment, for each of the last five years.

Mr. Jackson: Complete information on the numbers of candidates applying for entry to individual institutions, each of which will typically make applications to several institutions, is not held centrally.

Many candidates applying for admission to an higher education course through the Universities Central Council on Admissions (UCCA) and the Polytechnics Central Admissions System (PCAS) make use of both schemes, and the candidates are included in both instances in the table as appropriate. Just over 92,000 candidates for entry in 1989 were common to both schemes.

Information on the numbers of people applying for higher education through the two central admission agencies is as follows:

UCCA Applicants[1]			Year of entry
	1985	1986	1987	1988	1989

[1] Candidates applying for admission to UK universities (excluding the Open University and the University of Buckingham) through UCCA for full-time undergraduate first degree or first diploma courses.
[2] The PCAS admissions scheme started with entry for 1986 and covered 30 polytechnics in England and Wales offering full-time and sandwich first degree and Dip. HE courses.
[3] For 1988 entry, institutional coverage extended to include eight of the larger colleges of higher education in England.
[4] For 1989 entry, the scheme was extended to cover entry to full-time HND courses.

Undergraduate Courses

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what are the latest figures for applications to undergraduate courses beginning in September 1990 and September 1991.

Mr. Jackson: By 31 March 1990, there had been 851,693 applications through the Universities Central Council on Admissions (UCCA) from UK domiciled students for admission to UK universities at undergraduate level and 603,105 applications through the Polytechnics Central Admissions System (PCAS) for admission to undergraduate courses including HNDs at polytechnics and colleges in England and Wales. Information on applications deferred to 1991 is not yet available.

The Attorney-General: I shall write to the hon. Gentleman very shortly.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

IGM Polsotersystene AG

Mr Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received concerning the operations in the United Kindgdom of IGM Polsotersystene AG; and what action he intends to take.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: None. I shall be replying soon to the hon. Member's letter of 24 May about a non-UK company, which may be the company he has in mind.

Cable Television

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what arrangements he proposes to make for licensing under the Telecommunications Act 1984 existing cable television relay systems which do not at present require to be licensed under the Cable and Broadcasting Act 1984, should the proposals in the Broadcasting Bill receive parliamentary approval.

Mr. Forth: Relay systems of any size carrying only the four terrestrial TV channels will be covered by a class licence under the Telecommunications Act. Other relay systems, not requiring a licence under the Cable and Broadcasting Act at the date the new proposals come into force and not at that date carrying all four terrestrial TV channels and all five DBS channels will be allowed to continue to carry those channels that they carried on that date also under the terms of a class licence. Any subsequent upgrading will be treated for licensing purposes as a new system and the right of first refusal for existing broadband cable licensees or local delivery operators will apply where appropriate.

Relay systems of any size which carry all four terrestrial TV channels and all five DBS channels on the date that the new proposals come into force will thereafter be authorised to carry any TV or radio services other than those proscribed under provisions contained in clause 165 of the Broadcasting Bill. Those restricted to a single building or to adjacent dwelling houses will be covered by another class licence. Larger systems will, however, require an individual Telecommunications Act licence for which they will need to apply in advance of the new regime.

Such licences granted in respect of systems covering fewer than 1,000 homes will be on the same terms as those for new systems of the same size. Unlike licences for new systems, the award of these licences will not be subject to the right of first refusal procedure. Multiple licence applications will not, however, be accepted in respect of systems that had previously been connected to form a larger system of over 1,000 homes. Further details about the licensing arrangements will be given later this year.

Systems of the type described in the previous paragraph, covering 1,000 homes or more and lying within a cable franchise area will, under the terms of the Bill, be deemed to have a Cable and Broadcasting Act diffusion service licence with an initial life of five years. Each such system will also receive a concurrent Telecommunications Act licence.

Systems covering 1,000 homes or more and lying outside any cable franchise area will, under the provisions of the Bill, be deemed to have a local delivery licence, with an initial term of five years. These will also receive individual Telecommunications Act licences, similar to those in the previous category and, in particular, not granting the licensee powers under the telecommunications code.

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what arrangements he proposes to make for licensing cable television systems covering fewer than 1,000 homes under the Telecommunications Act 1984.

Mr. Forth: My hon. and learned Friend the Minister of State, Home Office confirmed on 2 March 1990 at column 351 that subject to parliamentary approval of our proposals, cable TV systems covering fewer than 1,000 homes will not require to be licensed by the Independent Television Commission. All such cable systems will, however, continue to require licensing under section 7 of the Telecommunications Act 1984.

Systems restricted to single buildings or to two adjacent dwelling houses will be covered by a class licence which will authorise them to carry any TV or radio service not specifically proscribed under provisions contained in clause 165 of the Broadcasting Bill. We would be prepared to consider extending this class licence to cover groups of up to, say, five terraced houses if there proved to be a significant demand for such systems from groups of neighbours. Individual licences will be granted in respect of other systems passing fewer than 1,000 homes subject, in areas where a licence has been granted to a broadband cable or local delivery operator, to the right of first refusal being given to that licence holder. These individual licences will contain similar authorisations to those in the class licence and run for 10 years. They will be renewable.

The first refusal procedure will operate only if the system lies wholly or partly within a cable franchise area licensed under the Cable and Broadcasting Act by the Cable Authority before its abolition, or within that part of a local delivery operator's area for which the operator has undertaken to provide a service. The cable or local delivery operator will be given the right to provide an alternative service to that proposed unless he is in default of his build timetable or has failed to honour a previous commitment to provide an alternative service elsewhere in the cable/LDO area. Any operator that qualifies for this right will be given 20 working days in which to offer to provide an alternative service. We would expect the service to be fully operational within four months from the date my Department offers the operator first refusal. The service must provide a similar or superior service to that proposed by the SMATV applicant, at a reasonable price, and, in particular, include at least the same major satellite and terrestrial channels and a similar range of alternative channels. In the case of cable franchise areas, the alternative system should be capable of being upgraded to a broadband service without further internal rewiring.

If the cable operator/LDO waives the right of first refusal or fails to honour his commitment to provide an alternative service, the SMATV operator will be granted an individual Telecommunications Act licence of 10 years' duration and renewable. The licence, would, however, be liable to revocation if the promised service was not provided within four months of the licence being issued.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prison Population

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department to what extent it is estimated by his research unit that demographic trends reduced the number of people entering Her Majesty's prisons in the last five years; and what is the projection for the next five years.

Mr. Mellor: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what legal representation is available to those who seek asylum in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: It is open to asylum seekers in the United Kingdom to approach solicitors, law centres or other organisations who may make representations on their behalf. Asylum seekers are eligible to apply for legal aid. Representations from any source are considered carefully before a final decision is taken. When we are minded to refuse an applicant who is not legally represented and who does not have a right of appeal exercisable in this country, the case will normally be referred to the United Kingdom Immigrants Advisory Service which will consider making representations.

White Lion Public House, London

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis into the cost, during the past four months, of police time and resources devoted to visits to the White Lion public house, in Central street, London EC1.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Metropolitan police officers have visited the White Lion public house in Central street, London EC1 on a number of occasions over the last four months as part of ordinary police duties. Information is not available to enable the costs of these visits to be calculated.

Drugs

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what stage of development the demand reduction task force, the setting up of which was announced by the Prime Minister at the world ministerial drugs summit in April, has reached.

Mr. Mellor: An interdepartmental steering group is actively considering how to take forward this initiative and other actions following on from the summit. We hope shortly to announce how the task force will be organised and will approach its important work. In the meantime, my right hon. and learned Friend is discussing with the Secretary of State for Health where the co-ordinating group for the task force might best be located.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much money has been set aside to help with the setting up of the demand reduction task force.

Mr. Mellor: Subject to parliamentary approval, the funding of the task force will be £257,000 in the current financial year and £500,000 in subsequent years.

Correspondence

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the hon. Member for Walsall, North will be receiving a reply to the letter he wrote on 22 March regarding the television concessionary licence and Walsall council.

Mr. Mellor: I replied on 5 June.

ENERGY

British Coal

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether the future external financing requirements of British Coal have yet been determined, as indicated in paragraph 93 of Cm. 1005.

Mr. Baldry: British Coal has reviewed its external financing requirement (EFR) for 1990-91 in the light of the final outcome of its negotiations with the electricity supply industry, and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has agreed to its proposal that its external financing limit (EFL) for 1990-91 should be set at £905 million. This is consistent with British Coal achieving profitability this year. Within this figure my right hon. Friend has also agreed that the corporation's capital allocation for 1990-91 should be £445 million. This compares with the provisional EFL and capital allocation figures of £385 million and £490 million respectively shown in Cm. 1005. This increase in the EFL will be charged to the reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure. A supplementary estimate for restructuring grant, deficiency grant, and loans on vote in order to finance this increased EFR will be presented shortly. The EFRs and capital allocations for later years remain under review.

Electricity Supply

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether suppliers of renewable energy in Scotland who have a contracted use of the interconnector can sell electricity to England and Wales as part of the non-fossil fuel obligation.

Mr. Baldry: I refer the hon. Member to my answer to his earlier question on 8 February 1990, Official Report, column 724.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what steps he is taking to ensure that contracts to supply electricity under the non-fossil fuel obligation are of sufficient duration to secure the viability of capital-intensive wind energy projects.

Mr. Baldry: The terms of the contracts concluded in order to meet the requirements of the non-fossil fuel obligation are a matter primarily for the public electricity suppliers concerned. I am satisfied that sufficient flexibility exists under the NFFO arrangements to secure an adequate number of viable projects. In addition my right hon. Friend proposes to set a tranche of the NFFO next year specifically for wind projects.

Wave Power

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether disciplinary action is to be taken against any Atomic Energy Authority staff or civil servants who produced misleading comparisons of the cost of wave power; and if he will make a statement.

Mr Peter Morrison: The question of disciplinary action does not arise, since no misleading comparisons have been made. A series of research reports has been published in recent years each contributing to the understanding of wave power. There is considerable uncertainty about the costs of wave power and this is reflected in the range of assumptions incorporated in the reports.

Leukaemia

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) what studies have been undertaken of the incidence of leukaemia in the children of people working for the Atomic Energy Authority;

(2) what studies have been made of the incidence of leukaemia in the children of people working in nuclear power stations.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I am advised that no studies have yet been undertaken specifically to examine the incidence of leukaemia in the offspring of people working at nuclear power stations in the United Kingdom or at Atomic Energy Authority sites. However, in February of this year, a report from the Medical Research Fund epidemiology unit at Southampton (Professor Gardner et al) was published in the British Medical Journal. This study documented a statistical association of leukaemia and non-Hodgkins lymphoma in children living near the Sellafield reprocessing plant and the employment of their fathers at the plant.

In view of the importance of this complex matter, the Government referred Professor Gardner's study to the Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment (COMARE) for its urgent consideration and preliminary advice. On 2 April my hon. Friend, the then Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, announced to Parliament that the Government had received COMARE's preliminary advice and accepted all its recommendations. The relevant Government Department's bodies have set up arrangements to enable them to take this work forward as speedily as possible.

In its advice, COMARE recommended that high priority be given to a study which it had recommended at an earlier stage to consider any possible health effects on the offspring of parents occupationally exposed to radiation. I understand that the UKAEA and Nuclear Electric are fully committed to assisting with any independent studies recommended by COMARE and accepted by Government.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Angola

Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how he will respond to the appeal by the United Nations Secretary-General for emergency assistance to Angola.

Mrs. Chalker: We are making available £500,000 for emergency supplies to help alleviate the consequences of drought in southern Angola. We are already discussing with British and international relief agencies the most effective uses to which our assistance can be put.

Uganda

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will provide a breakdown of (1) emergency aid, (2) project aid and (3) programme aid to Uganda for each of the last five years, giving details of the regional distribution and sectors supported.

Mrs. Chalker: Gross British bilateral aid to Uganda over the five-year period 1985-1989 was as follows:

£ million

	1985	1986	1987	1988	1989
Emergency Aid	0.244	1.056	0.070	0.436	1.541
Project Aid	3.298	2.713	5.604	3.651	5.421
Programme Aid	0.206	0.005	0.016	17.126	12.626
Technical Assistance	2.867	2.784	3.510	6.392	6.766
Other	2.556	2.018	2.979	1.374	2.046
Total	9.171	8.576	12.179	28.979	28.400

The project aid figures include funds invested through the Commonwealth Development Corporation. The 1989 figures are provisional at this stage.

The majority of the emergency aid has gone to the northern and eastern parts of Uganda. Project aid has largely been disbursed in the Kampala, Entebbe, and Jinja region on the rehabilitation of Owen Falls power station, certain key roads and Mulago hospital, and on support to the police force. Programme aid has been allocated mostly to transport, industry and agriculture; no data are readily available on its distribution by region.

Global Warming

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what he estimates to be the third-world population at risk from a loss of agricultural income if global temperatures rise by (a) 0·5 deg, (b) 1 deg, (c) 1·5 deg, and (d) 2 deg, by 2030;

(2) what studies or research his Department has commissioned on the effect of global warming and sea level rise on developing countries;

(3) what estimates are available of the area of land in developing countries that would be flooded by a sea level rise of (a) 20 cm, (b) 50 cm, (c) 70 cm, and (d) 1 m;

(4) what estimates he has of the number of people who would be forced to relocate by a 1 m rise in the sea level in (a) Bangladesh, (b) Egypt and (c) the Maldives;

(5) what estimates are available of the number of people in developing countries who currently live on land that would be flooded if the sea level rose by (a) 20 cm, (b) 50 cm, (c) 70 cm and (d) 1 m; and if he will estimate at expected population growth rates what these populations are likely to be in 2030;

(6) what is the estimated global cost of building sea defences in developing countries to protect land against a sea level rise of (a) 20 cm, (b) 50 cm, (c) 70 cm, and (d) 1 m;

(7) what estimates are available of the effect of (a) a 1 deg and (b) a 2 deg rise in temperature on agricultural output in (i) west Africa, (ii) east Africa, (iii) southern Africa, (iv) south Asia, (v) south-east Asia, (vi) central America and (vii) Latin America.

Mrs. Chalker: The scale and effects of sea level rise and changing agricultural productivity arising from global warming on people in developing countries remain uncertain. The most detailed study is that carried out by the intergovernmental panel on climate change (IPCC), now nearing completion. Copies of the IPCC's report will be placed in the Library of both Houses when it is published. Last year the ODA commissioned a study on options for limiting CO_2 emissions in developing countries. I will place a copy of the report in the Library of both Houses.

Tobacco

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what assessment has been made of the results of the World Health Organisation's tobacco and health programme aimed at helping countries elaborate on their tobacco control policies;

(2) whether his Department has been approached by any developing countries asking for advice about (a) anti-smoking education and (b) information gained from epidemiology of smoking-related diseases;

(3) what is Britain's contribution to the World Health Organisation tobacco and health programme.

Mrs. Chalker: The World Health Organisation's tobacco or health programme was approved by the World Health Assembly in May 1989 based on a plan of action for 1988-1995. A meeting of the director-general's technical advisory group on tobacco or health was held from 28 to 30 November 1989 to evaluate the first year of practical implementation of the plan of action and to study and advise on issues concerning the various aspects of the programme. This group will continue to review the content, scope and activities of the programme. The United Kingdom supports the World Health Orgnisation's tobacco or health programme through its assessed contribution to the total regular budget of the World Health Organisation. Our budgetary contribution is paid by the Department of Health and totals £9·041 million in the 1990-91 biennium. About 0·18 per cent. (US$1·197 million) of the total WHO regular budget for this biennium is allocated to the tobacco or health programme. The United Kingdom has received no requests from developing countries for assistance with anti-smoking education or the epidemiology of smoking-related diseases under the United Kingdom aid programme.

Kenya National Parks

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made with the request from the Government of Kenya for equipment to improve the communications system in the Tsavo and Meru national parks.

Mrs. Chalker: The draft project proposal was discussed recently with the Kenya wildlife service. A few details remain to be settled, but we hope to agree the project with it shortly.

PRIME MINISTER

Rain Forests

Q76. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what assessments she has made of Her Majesty's Government's financial assignment for helping preservation of the rain forests; and what study she has made of proposals to give intellectual property rights to indigenous peoples.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: I have been asked to reply.

British aid for tropical forestry is continuously monitored and assessed by the ODA. On intellectual property rights, my hon. and learned Friend the Minister for Industry wrote to the hon. Member on 24 May. ODA officials met Dr. Darrell Posey on 16 May and the issue is under study.

West Yorkshire

Q123. Mr. Cryer: To ask the Prime Minister when she next expects to pay an official visit to west Yorkshire.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: I have been asked to reply.

My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister has at present no plans to do so.

High-tar Tobacco

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Prime Minister if she will raise at the next meeting of the European Council the impact on public health in the third world of the expenditure by the European Economic Community on the production and dumping of high-tar tobacco; and if she will make a statement.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: I have been asked to reply.

The Government are concerned at the grave consequences on health of smoking cigarettes and other forms of tobacco both in Europe and in the third world. We have long been critical of the Community's CAP tobacco regime. We have consistently argued that support for this crop should be reduced. We were successful in securing the introduction in 1988, of measures to reduce expenditure and discourage the production of the less-marketable and higher-tar varieties, for example through the stabiliser mechanism. Further reductions in support for certain of the less-marketable varieties were agreed in this year's price-fixing negotiations. Our objective is less production, reduced intervention and less subsidised export, of the higher-tar varieties. We shall take every opportunity to continue to pursue this policy in future negotiations.

Air Ambulances

Mr. Harris: To ask the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on co-ordination between the Department of Health and the Scottish Office on the provision of air ambulances.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: I have been asked to reply.

It is for health authorities in England and the Common Services Agency, of which the Scottish ambulance service is a division, in Scotland, to decide the level, nature and extent of patient transport services required taking into account their resources and the competing demands upon them.

Engagements

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 7 June.

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 7 June.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 7 June.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 7 June.

Mr. Stern: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 7 June.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: I have been asked to reply.

My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister has given an address at the luncheon of the North Atlantic Council at Turnberry. Later today she will begin a visit to the Soviet Union.

Brymbo Steelworks

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Prime Minister if she will visit Brymbo steelworks to meet steelworkers.

The Prime Minister: I have at present no plans to do so.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Panama

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his reply of 22 February, Official Report, column 871, what is the latest information he has on the number of Panamanian civilians killed as a result of the invasion of Panama by the United States of America.

Mr. Sainsbury: We have no independent source for such figures. We understand that information from the Panamanian Institute of Legal Medicine suggests a figure of 202. Other estimates range between 200 and 300.

Eastern Europe

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, further to his answer of 2 May, Official Report, column 568, if he has any proposals to provide further reinforcement for the United Kingdom diplomatic missions in eastern Europe following democratisation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: Sixteen new diplomatic service and 28 locally engaged staff posts have already been authorised to reinforce our embassies in eastern Europe and the Soviet Union since October 1989. Further strengthening is currently under consideration.

Nuclear Tests

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if British nuclear tests will be affected by the agreement between the United States of America and the Soviet Union of verification protocols to the threshold test ban treaty and the peaceful nuclear explosions treaty and the ratification of those treaties.

Mr. Waldegrave: For many years the policy of the United Kingdom has been to test nuclear devices within the 150 kiloton yield limit imposed by the US-Soviet threshold test ban treaty. Because our nuclear tests are conducted at the Nevada test site we have agreed that the verification measures, which will allow each party to monitor the yield of certain tests conducted by the other, can be extended to British tests. We are satisfied that these arrangements will not significantly affect British tests and that there are no security implications.

EC Council of Ministers

Mr. Stevens: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish a statement of forthcoming business in the European Community Council of Ministers.

Mr. Waldegrave: The Environment Council will meet on 7 and 8 June. The Presidency hopes for agreement on the amended waste framework proposal to amend directive 75/442 which establishes the basic structure for waste management in the Community; on the proposal on the labelling, use, content and disposal of batteries and accumulators containing dangerous substances, and on a resolution to establish policy targets on the reduction of greenhouse gas emissions. The Council will also seek to conclude a Community negotiating position for the London ozone layer conference in June. There will be a discussion and possible agreement of the proposal to add four substances to annex II to the directive concerning the discharge of dangerous substances to water, and the Presidency hopes for agreement on the proposal to establish a committee to facilitate amendment of existing directives on drinking water, bathing water and surface water quality. There is likely to be detailed discussion about the protection of waters from pollution by nitrates, and about the proposal to consolidate Community anti-pollution standards for all sizes of motor car. The Presidency will report progress on the proposal concerning the protection of habitats and of wild fauna and flora and on the proposal to treat municipal waste water before discharge into the environment.

The Economic and Finance Council will meet on 11 June to discuss multilateral surveillance of member states' economies and the possible development of economic and monetary union beyond stage 1. On 8 May 1990 the Commission published its technical proposals for VAT, mutual assistance and intra-EC trade statistics, based on the agreements reached at ECOFIN at the end of 1989. Initial discussion of these proposals is expected. The Council is expected to discuss the investment services directive, and may also discuss the package of three tax measures to encourage cross-border co-operation between companies (mergers directive, parents/subsidiaries directive and arbitration procedure) and hear a statement by the Taxation Commissioner on the Commission's corporate taxation policy.

The Consumer Council will meet on 13 June. After lengthy and inconclusive discussion on the directive on general product safety at official level, Ministers will be asked to give a clearer direction for future negotiations. They will be particularly concerned with the main areas of contention, notably the scope of the directive, its overlap with other directives and the procedure of handling emergencies at Community level. A draft directive on unfair contract terms is in preparation within the Commission and a progress report is expected. The French have requested a discussion and are expected to press the Commission to step up efforts in this area. The Commission has asked the Dutch Consumer Safety Institute to lead a working party to undertake a review of achievements of the European home and leisure accident surveillance system (EHLASS), and its report is to be tabled at the Council on 13 June. There is likely to be a presentation in the margins by the Commission on a three-year plan for future priorities in consumer policy, which has been agreed and is in the public domain. An item on the package travel directive has been included at the suggestion of the French. However, the Commission has recently accepted a number of substantive amendments proposed by the European Parliament. No revised text will be available from the Commission in time for the Council discussion, although the Council could still act by unanimity to adopt the common position text agreed at Internal Market Council in February 1990.

At the Foreign Affairs Council on 18 and 19 June, Ministers will discuss preparations for the 25 and 26 June European Council (including political union; economic and monetary union; the free movement of people; and co-operation against drugs and international organised crime). The Commission will present a draft mandate for approval by the Council on the opening of negotiations to create an enhanced free trade area with the EFTA countries, and will present a new strategy for strengthening economic relations with the Mediterranean countries in general. The Council will propose ways of enhancing the EC's co-operation agreement with Yugoslavia and the association agreement with Turkey. There will be an orientation debate on the Communities' relations with central and eastern Europe, and discussions of voting rights in local elections and of the situation in the occupied territories. Ministers will consider the current state of play in the GATT Uruguay round, and preparations for the Houston economic summit on 9 to 11 July. The food aid directive and Community policy on the generalised system of preferences 1991-2000 may also be discussed. Ministers will also discuss political co-operation subjects.

The Transport Council will meet on 18 and 19 June. Ministers will discuss aviation matters which cover the components of the second liberalisation package. It is expected that restrictions on market access and the approval of fares will be further relaxed. Air traffic control discussions should centre on increasing capacity in Europe by integrating air traffic control systems and optimising the traffic route network. On shipping cabotage Ministers hope to establish a basis for a balanced agreement on liberalisation acceptable to all member states. Regarding prevention of accidents causing pollution, we advocate strict compliance with the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972. The Council will support all appropriate measures to improve passenger safety which may be tabled. On road haulage, Ministers will discuss crisis measures to ensure corrective measures will be available to reduce the impact of any possible disruption resulting from increasing liberalisation. It is proposed to fix the Community quota for 1991 and 1992, hopefully increasing the proportion of operations under Community authorisations and ensuring smooth transition to a fully liberalised road haulage market. Discussion on vehicles hired without drivers should ratify abolishing restrictive clauses. The road safety resolution is likely to be discussed, and we strongly support it as drafted because it is in line with United Kingdom views in pressing for early EC agreement on improved construction standards as a means of significantly reducing road haulage casualties. The high-speed network may be discussed under any other business, and we will support the concept of co-ordinating plans, but consider that the case for additional links must be assessed on a commercial basis. Ministers are also likely to discuss fiscal harmonisation of road haulage and infrastructure cost coverage for goods vehicles.

The Internal Market Council will meet on 20 June to discuss a number of measures relevant to the completion of the single market.

The European Council will meet on 25 and 26 June in Dublin. Heads of Government are likely to discuss political union, economic and monetary union, the 1992 programme, the environment, drugs, German unification and the EC's external relations.

The Agriculture Council will meet on 25 and 26 June and is likely to discuss poultry meat marketing standards, non-food uses of agricultural products, foot and mouth disease, the veterinary fund, animal health (horses), trade in live animals, Aujesky's disease, poultry hatching eggs, enzootic bovine leukosis, pesticide residues and pesticide approval. It may also discuss pathogens in feedingstuffs, welfare of calves and pigs, veterinary medicines and organic farming.

The Fisheries Council will meet on 27 June and is likely to discuss technical conservation measures, Mediterranean fisheries, negotiations with third-world countries, seasonal price adjustment for herring, allocation of additional quotas at Greenland, structural measures for small-scale fisheries, submission of data on landing of fishery products, and EC/USSR. It may also discuss revision of 1990 TACs and quotas for 1990.

At the Telecommunications Council on 28 June Ministers will discuss the open network provision (ONP) which sets out to define the terms and conditions under which telecommunications administrations will be required to give access to users in general and private service operators in particular to the telecommunications network infrastructure and certain specific services. The proposed directive on ONP does not itself specify any detailed ONP conditions but sets out a legal framework within which subsequent measures dealing with specific areas are to be drawn up. A common position on the proposal was reached as a result of a political agreement on two market measures to open up the Community telecommunications services markets to competition and the Council may be expected formally to adopt the directive. The Presidency may seek to obtain political agreement on aspects of the mutual recognition of type approval for telecommunications terminal equipment proposal, which aimed at ensuring the mutual recognition of type approval procedures for telecommunications terminal equipment as between different member states and as a necessary step to the creation of a single market in those equipments. Ministers may discuss the integrated services digital network (ISDN), based on the 1989 progress report on the implementation of Council recommendation 86/659/EEC on the co-ordinated introduction of ISDN in the European Community. The progress report presents several proposals for discussion on further activity at the Community level in respect of ISDN. A proposal for a resolution has not yet been received from the Commission. The Council may hold orientation debates on co-operation with eastern European countries in the telecommunications field, and on proposals for a directive and a recommendation aimed at establishing the necessary conditions for the commercial exploitation of digital European cordless telecommunications (DECT) technology throughout the EC. Ministers will also discuss the resolution on frequency management which lays down policy guidelines on management of the radio frequency spectrum aimed at strengthening European co-ordination of the allocations of radio frequencies, taking full account of the role of the conference of European post and telecommunications administrators in this field.

The Research Council will meet on 29 June. It is expected that common positions will be agreed on the EURET (transport) and EUROTRA II (machine translation) research programmes. The human genome research programme may be adopted. The Research Council will have a preliminary discussion of the Commission's papers on scientific and technological collaboration with third-world countries and eastern Europe and will also discuss a draft Council resolution on the participation of central and eastern European countries in COST (European co-operation in the field of scientific and technical research). The Council may also discuss general issues arising from the proposals for specific programmes of the recently adopted framework programme for R and D, 1990-94.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Benefits in Kind

Ms. Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security by how much the yield of national insurance contributions would be increased if all taxable benefits in kind were treated as earnings.

56. Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security by how much the yield of national insurance contributions would be increased if all taxable benefits in kind were treated as earnings.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Any increased yield of national insurance contributions would depend on the effects of the employees' upper earnings limit and the various earnings limits for employers" contributions. Because of these factors, the information available about the value of taxable benefits to individual employees compared with their levels of other earnings is insufficiently precise to enable an accurate estimate of additional contributions to be made. However, based on predictions about the total of taxable benefits in kind that are likely to be made available to employees during 1990-91 it is thought that the additional yield could amount to some 1 to 2 per cent. of national insurance contribution income.

Action Credit

Ms. Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how participation in action credit affects eligibility for housing benefit (a) while a claimant is on a part-time placement and receiving the income support disregard and (b) when a claimant remains unemployed after the scheme and is receiving accrued wages and income support disregard.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: A person on income support is entitled to maximum housing benefit and maximum community charge benefit. This applies both during participation in action credit and if a person remains on income support after the end of such participation in the scheme.

Benefit Payment

Sir John Farr: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make arrangements for it to be possible for payments made by his Department to be a cheque on the request of the claimant or his accredited representative.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Arrangements exist for benefit payments to be made by girocheque where an immediate payment is necessary or payment is for a short period only. Regular payments of benefit are normally made by order book encashable at a post office.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Adelaide Hospital, Dublin

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he will make representations at a meeting of the Anglo-Irish Ministerial Conference to have the present Protestant medical ethics at Adelaide hospital, Dublin, retained in the proposed new hospital to replace it.

Mr. Brooke: I have no present plans to do so, but the right hon. Gentleman knows that his actions will have ensured that the Irish Government will be aware of his concerns.

Running Cost Limits

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement about the 1990-91 running cost limit for the Northern Ireland Office and Northern Ireland Departments.

Mr. Cope: The running cost limit for 1990-91 for the Northern Ireland Office and the Northern Ireland Departments is being set at £592·6 million. Further details of provision for individual Departments are set out in the appropriate estimates volumes.

ENVIRONMENT

Local Government Finance

57. Dr. Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the average rates bill as a proportion of earnings for a one-earner family with two children on 75 per cent. average earnings in 1989-90; and what he estimates the proportion of income going on the poll tax will be for the same family in 1990-91.

58. Mr. Ted Garrett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the average rates bill as a proportion of earnings for a one-earner family with two children on 75 per cent. average earnings in 1989-90; and what he estimates the proportion of income going on the poll tax will be for the same family in 1990-91.

Mr. Chope: I shall write to the hon. Members.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much, in cash and as a percentage of local government income, was met by (a) revenue support grant, (b) uniform business rate and (c) community charge in England in 1990-91.

Mr. Chope: The figures are given in the table.

	£ billion	Per cent.
1989-90
Rate support grant	9·6	33
Non-domestic rate income[1]	9·5	33
Domestic rate income[2]	9·7	34
1990-91
Revenue support grant	9·5	29
Non-domestic rate income	10·4	32
Charge income[3]	12·7	39

Notes:

Figures shown for 1989-90 and 1990-91 are not on a comparable basis because of extensive changes to the system of local government finance.

In 1990-91, local authorities also received special transitional grants totalling £187 million.

[1] Net of disabled non-domestic rate relief grant and enterprise zone grant.

[2] Net of domestic rate relief grant, but including domestic rate rebates.

[3] Including community charge benefits and household transitional relief grant.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment on how many occasions officials from his Department met officials of Westminster city council in December, January, February and March to discuss matters relating to the community charge.

Mr. Portillo: None.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidance was given to local authorities and what allowance was made in standard spending assessments for provision for bad debts and non-payment of the poll tax; and what is Her Majesty's Government's policy on what local authorities should allocate for this provision.

Mr. Chope: It is for each charging authority, in setting the community charge for its area, to make such reasonable provision for non-collection as may be necessary in the light of its individual circumstances. Since there are approximately twice as many charge payers as ratepayers, the absolute number of slow payers can be expected to be greater, but there is no reason why the cash volume of arrears should be greater than under the rating system. Losses through non-payment represent a reduction in revenue rather than an item of expenditure, and are therefore not reflected in standard spending assessments.

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what would be the cost of extending to one year the period during which empty properties are not subject to the standard community charge.

Mr. Chope: The information is not available. But charging authorities already have the discretion to extend the prescribed three-month period for which no standard charge is payable. We are currently collecting information on the use which authorities have made of their discretion and, from the evidence so far, it is clear that a number have decided to extend this period to 12 months.

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to withdraw the discretion given to local councils to fix the level of community charge on property which is not classed as the main or principal residence; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: We have made it clear that if local authorities do not make sensitive use of the wide discretion available to them we shall introduce more prescription in time for 1991-92. My right hon. Friend will make a statement on this as soon as we have completed the review of local authority standard charge practices.

Mr. Churchill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate he has made of the cost of granting an automatic 50 per cent. community charge rebate (a) to all retirement pensioners and (b) to pensioners over the age of 75 years.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 5 June 1990]: Many pensioners are already entitled to reductions in their community charge through the transitional relief scheme or community charge benefit or both. Many of these already pay less than 50 per cent. of the full charge. The cost of allowing all pensioners who currently pay more than 50 per cent. a reduction to 50 per cent. in 1990-91 is estimated at about £600 million. Of this, about £200 million is for pensioners aged over 75.

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what would be the cost of basing transitional relief for the community charge, for a full financial year, on (a) £56 and (b) £106, in place of the limit of £156.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 5 June 1990]: It is estimated that the transitional relief scheme will provide £350 million of relief in 1990-91. This is based on a threshold of £156, equivalent to £3 per week. Reducing the threshold to £2 per week would increase the estimated cost to £570 million; and reducing the threshold to £1 per week would cost £900 million.

Mr. Churchill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate he has made of the cost of granting exemption from the community charge for mothers with a child (a) under the age of five years and (b) under the age of 10 years.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 5 June 1990]: Assuming an average personal community charge of £363, it is estimated that exempting mothers with children under five from the community charge would mean a revenue loss of £0·8 billion and exempting mothers with children under 10 years of age would mean a revenue loss of £1·4 billion.

Peat

Sir Gerard Vaughan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will list the action his Department is taking to safeguard the peatlands from commercial devastation.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The Government are committed to assessing the practical operation and implementations of the powers contained in the Town and Country Planning Act 1971 and to consider the available options to balance nature conservation against existing mineral extraction interests on key peatland areas. The Government are encouraging research into alternatives for peat and are working with commercial firms in the re-evaluation of alternatives currently available. Whenever appropriate, we are encouraging the use of alternatives.

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will review all pre-1948 planning permissions for the extraction of peat which affect sites of special scientific interest; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The Government are committed to assessing the practical operation and implementation of the power contained in the Town and Country Planning Act 1971 and are considering the available options to balance nature conservation against existing mineral extraction interests on key peatland sites.

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to receive the peatland resource data inventory; how many full-time and part-time staff are involved in carrying out the research at the Nature Conservancy Council; what funds the Government have provided for the research; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave her on 5 June, Official Report, column 480, concerning the peatland resource data inventory.

I am advised by the NCC that it is currently recruiting two full-time staff in addition to the three full-time officers currently employed on the survey. It is for the NCC to decide what portion of its grant in aid of £44·069 million should be devoted to this project.

Ryedale District Council

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will direct the Audit Commission to undertake an extraordinary audit of the accounts of Ryedale district council, north Yorkshire, under section 22(2) of the Local Government and Finance Act 1982 in respect of treatment of receipts from the rent revenue account; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: No. The Secretary of State may direct an extraordinary audit if it appears to him in the public interest to do so. No matters have been brought to his attention which would warrant his making such a direction.

Palace of Westminster (Cleaning)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the panelling and shelving adjacent to the Members' and Strangers' Dining Rooms were last cleaned; who supervised such cleaning; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: The cleaning contract requires panelling and shelving up to a height of 5·5 ft to be dusted daily. Direct responsibility for supervising the work rests with the contractor; the Serjeant at Arms or the Refreshment Department are responsible for checking that the work has been done.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the interior of the Palace of Westminster was last thoroughly cleaned; what inspection was made of that cleaning; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: My Department is responsible for cleaning only parts of the Palace—generally public areas and meeting rooms. The work is carried out at the frequency set out in the contract specification. Cleaning of floors and dusting for example is a daily task.

Inspection of the work is the responsibility of the Serjeant at Arms, or Refreshment Department, who bring any shortcomings to the attention of the Parliamentary Works Office's office keeper.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he proposes to take to ensure a thorough cleaning programme is implemented and supervised in the Palace of Westminster; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: Subject to agreement of the details with the Accommodation and Administration Sub-Committee, the Parliamentary Works Office will shortly commission a review of the cleaning arrangements. It will look at options for setting up a coherent management structure, to replace the existing fragmented arrangements, and at the means of ensuring a consistently high standard of cleaning throughout the Palace.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the arrangements which he has now made to ensure that the Members' Tea Room is properly cleaned.

Mr. Chope: The discussions that I mentioned in response to the hon. Member's earlier question on 10 May, Official Report, column 190, have:

(a) clarified the existing responsibilities of the Refreshment Department's and Parliamentary Works Officer's cleaning contractors,

(b) confirmed that the arrangements cover all the cleaning requirements, and

(c) established new arrangements for reporting any shortcomings in the work.

These arrangements, particularly the use of the two contractors in one room, will be considered further in the proposed review of cleaning arrangements generally within the Palace of Westminster which I referred to in answer to another question by the hon. Member today.

Tyneside Enterprise Zone

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what payments he expects to make in 1990-91 to (a) Newcastle and (b) Gateshead metropolitan district in order to offset forgone uniform business rate in the Tyneside enterprise zone; and what payments he made in 1989-90 in respect of business rate forgone.

Mr. Chope: In 1989-90 the payments to Newcastle upon Tyne city council and Gateshead metropolitan borough council in respect of business rates forgone on the Tyneside enterprise zone were £1,845,007 and £12,921,234 respectively. Under the new local government finance system business properties in enterprise zones are exempt from rating. The amount which Newcastle and Gateshead contribute to the national pool reflects this exemption. A figure broadly equivalent to the amount of rates that would have been paid but for this exemption was added to the revenue support grant for England for 1990-91.

Contracts

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to place contracts for materials and services to his Department with companies and orgnisations that have conducted an environmental audit of their operations.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: My Department is currently considering the scope for cost-effective measures to improve environmental performance in purchasing and building management. We are also looking at further ways of encouraging industry to adopt positive environmental policies.

CITES Inspector

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if Her Majesty's Government are prepared to match the offer of £30,000 per annum made by the World Wide Fund for Nature towards the costs of the investigation and enforcement officer employed by the CITES secretariat; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if Her Majesty's Government intend to make a contribution towards the operating costs of the investigation and enforcement officer employed by the CITES secretariat; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The Government are fully committed to CITES and are considering the World Wide Fund for Nature's request for a contribution towards the costs of the investigation and enforcement officer employed by the CITES secretariat.

London Residuary Body

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many properties have been transferred to London boroughs or sold to sitting tenants by the London residuary body at less than market value.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Islington, South and Finsbury (Mr. Smith), on 30 March, Official Report, column 564.

Ivory

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his reply of 1 May, Official Report, column 504, where information is held on tradeable ivory currently in the United Kingdom; and what steps he is taking to monitor it.

Mr. Trippier: Details of ivory which may be allowed in trade under current CITES controls will be known only to traders and individuals who possess such ivory. Such information as the Department has is limited to individual records of import, export and sale applications. Records of imports and exports of ivory are maintained by the Department in accordance with article VIII.6 of CITES for the purpose of monitoring international trade.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his reply of 23 May, if he will give details of exemptions granted under article 6.1 of EC regulation 3626/82 since October 1988.

Mr. Trippier: I will write to the hon. Member.

Fenn's Moss

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will give details of the proposals put to his Department regarding the preservation of Fenn's moss; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if his Department will provide funds for the Royal Society for Nature Conservation to purchase the Fenn's and Whitehall mosses as a national nature reserve; what representations he has received on this matter; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: No proposals have yet been put to my Department. I am advised by the Nature Conservancy Council that it is considering a number of options to secure the future of the site, including a possible lease or purchase. Neither the Department nor the NCC has however been approached by the Royal Society for Nature Conservation for funds to enable it to purchase the site. Almost 200 representations have been received concerning this site.

Home Improvement Scheme

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment to what time scale the Government are working in introducing the new means-tested home improvement scheme.

Mr. Chope: The new house renovation grants system will be introduced, under part VIII of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989, on 1 July 1990. A commencement order, bringing into force the relevant sections of part VIII, will be made shortly.

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what advice is being issued to local authorities about the new means-tested home improvement grants.

Mr. Chope: Two departmental circulars will be issued to all local authorities in the next two weeks. These will contain detailed advice on all aspects of the new house renovation grants system, being introduced under part VIII of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989.

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many representations were received in response to the consultation process on the revised procedures for means-testing home improvement grants to people with disabilities; and if he will list those for and those against.

Mr. Chope: Ten organisations responded to the consultation exercise on the proposed test of resources for the new disabled facilities grants, being introduced under part VIII of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989. Consultees were invited to submit comments on the content of the test of resources regulations and not the principle of resource-testing such grants which had already been approved by Parliament.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much money his Department has awarded in housing renovation grants in each of the last 10 years at (i) current prices and (ii) historic prices.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 5 June 1990]: The amounts of Exchequer contribution given by the Department to local authorities towards their expenditure on home improvement grants for the financial years 1981-82 to 1988-89 are shown in the table. Information is not available for years prior to 1981-82.

	Current prices (£000s)	Historic prices (£000s)
1981-82	225,927	137,522
1982-83	284,345	185,564
1983-84	415,401	283,760
1984-85	517,255	370,871

	Current prices (£000s)	Historic prices (£000s)
1985-86	562,222	424,702
1986-87	588,585	459,744
1987-88	605,780	498,557
1988-89	609,533	537,364

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much money his Department awarded in grants for housing renovation purposes in 1989-90.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 5 June 1990]: Figures for 1989-90 are not yet available, but the amount of Exchequer contribution given by the Department to local authorities towards their expenditure on home improvement grants for 1988-89 was £537·4 million.

Correspondence

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the hon. Member for Rugby and Kenilworth will be sent a reply to his letter of 26 March concerning Mr. P. G. Tolan of Kenilworth.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I have replied to my hon. Friend today.

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will reply to the letter of 20 April from the hon. Member for Rugby and Kenilworth concerning development in the A5 corridor.

Mr. Moynihan: I wrote to my hon. Friend today.

Pollution

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment on what date he intends to issue a consultation paper on the Control of Pollution (Amendment) Act 1989; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: I refer the hon. Member to the answer which I gave on 10 May, Official Report, column 187.

Water Charges

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has now determined the charges limits for all the statutory water companies.

Mr. Trippier: Yes. I have placed in the Library a summary of the limits—the "K" factors—for all the statutory water companies up to 1999-2000. Our proposals will allow charges to rise by 6·5 per cent. a year on average in real terms over the next five years and by less than 2 per cent. a year on average in the following five years.

Shetland Seabirds

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress is being made by the marine top predator group under his Department's chairmanship co-ordinating a multi-disciplinary study of seabird and sand-eel breeding interactions, with particular reference to the breeding failure of Shetland seabirds; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 6 June 1990]: The marine top predator group has been making good progress. Its first remit was the co-ordination of two major research projects on seabird and sand-eel breeding interactions in the Shetland-Orkney region: a Natural Environment Research Council study to look at seabird dynamics, and a collaborative project funded jointly by Government, NGOs and industry on sand-eels.

A successful pilot project to assess the best geographical sites for study was funded by this Department last year and the NERC study commenced in the autumn for a three- year period. An announcement will be made on the parallel sand-eel project shortly.

Methane Emissions

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to the answer of 8 May, Official Report, columns 105-8, why the constant emission factors for methane from coal are higher for (a) domestic sector and (b) power stations than for other sectors.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 6 June 1990]: Emission factors used in preparing the national emission inventory are derived from the latest data available. Where possible, they relate to specific source categories. Methane emissions from fuel combustion in each source category are affected by the combustion conditions and the fuel mixture.

LORD PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Select Committee on Education, Science and Arts

Mr. Amos: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will list the airline used, and the destination of each of the overseas visits undertaken, by the Select Committee on Education, Science and Arts for the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: In the 12-month period from 1 May 1989 to 30 April 1990 the Committee undertook two visits overseas. In May 1989 for a visit to Paris the Committee flew by British Airways, except for three Members who, for the return journey, flew by Air France to London, Birmingham and Manchester respectively. In March 1990 the Committee visited Heidelberg, Grenoble and Geneva, flying from London to Frankfurt and from Geneva to London by British Airways, except that on the outward journey two Members flew by Lufthansa and on the return journey one Member flew by British Airways from Geneva to Manchester.

HEALTH

Family Planning (Government Expenditure)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the level of Government expenditure for each year since 1979 on family planning services.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The available information relates to expenditure on health authority community health services, including overheads, the contraceptive fees paid to general practitioners and the estimated net ingredient cost of contraceptive drugs and appliances prescribed by GPs and dispensed by retail pharmacy and appliance contractors.

In each year since 1979 for which full figures are available, these components give an estimated total cost as follows:

Expenditure on family planning

Year	£ million
1979	37·7
1980	46·8
1981	51·4
1982	58·5
1983	65·4
1984	71·0
1985	76·7
1986	81·6
1987-88	90·5

Cancer

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the records of newly diagnosed cases of cancer as submitted by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys on magnetic tapes, for the Yorkshire region for the last three years for which records are available.

Mr. Dorrell: The Office of Population Censuses and Surveys collects data on newly diagnosed cases of cancer from the regional cancer registries on an on-going basis, and publishes such data when it is judged that all regions' data for a year are reasonably complete. Receipts from Yorkshire region since 1984 are shown in the table. Nationally the years 1984 and 1985 are deemed to be complete, and are analysed and published. Subsequent years are not considered complete.

Number of receipts of records of newly-diagnosed cases of cancer[1] for Yorkshire region, 1984-90[2]

Year	Number of receipts of records
1984	17,058
1985	17,759
[2]1986	16,798
[2]1987	16,305
[2]1988	6,730
[2]1989	11
[2]1990	—

[1] International Classification of Diseases (ICD) code 140-239.
[2] Provisional as records are still being received.

Tobacco Advertising

Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will publish the third annual report of the Committee for Monitoring Agreements on Tobacco Advertising and Sponsorship.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The Committee for Monitoring Agreements on Tobacco Advertising and Sponsorship has submitted its third report and copies have been placed in the Library. I am very grateful to the committee, and particularly to the chairman, Sir Peter Lazarus, for its valuable work in continuing to monitor the agreements, and for its third report to the United Kingdom Health Ministers and to the Minister for Sport. It shows that, in general, the system of voluntary agreements is working well and that the tobacco companies have continued to honour their commitments.

The chairman has expressed the hope that the Government and the tobacco industry will soon reach agreement on the replacement of old signs without health warnings. My colleagues and I note his comments which in our view are fully justified. We are currently discussing how to update the advertising agreement with the tobacco industry and will press for early progress on this issue.

RU486

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many representations he has received in connection with the introduction of RU486 into Britain; and if he will list the total number of (a) organisations and (b) individuals (i) in favour of and (ii) against its introduction.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: In the past 12 months we have received 86 representations about the drug RU486. Five were in favour of its introduction, 42 against and 39 sought information. Eighty-five were from individuals and one was from an organisation opposed to introduction of the drug.

Mr Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what directives he has given to directors of social services arising from the recommendations of the report of the inquiry into child abuse in Cleveland in 1987.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [pursuant to her reply, 2 May 1990, c. 548]: The social services inspectorate's inspection of Cleveland is now complete and the report is being published today. The inspection was conducted by the social services inspectorate with advice and assistance from representatives of Her Majesty's inspectorates of constabulary and schools. In addition, the Northern regional health authority made available as advisers a consultant paediatrician and a community unit general manager, both from outside the Cleveland area. The findings of the report are positive and the progress made by Cleveland since the last inspection is encouraging. The inspection has been a valuable exercise and the lessons learnt will be helpful for all agencies that undertake collaborative working for the protection of children from abuse. Copies will be placed in the Library.

SCOTLAND

NHS Expenditure

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give for each five-year period from the year 1960 to the present, the amount spent on the Health Service, expressing it as (a) a percentage of the United Kingdom gross domestic product and (b) for each five years the percentage increase over the previous five years.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Complete information covering the period requested is not available.

Milk Marketing

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what action he has taken with regard to the two smaller milk marketing boards in Scotland following the completion of the study on Scottish Pride quality dairy foods.

Mr. Rifkind: My Department has now completed a study on the relationship between the Aberdeen and district milk marketing board's producer activities and its commercial division. Copies of the report are now available in the Library of the House. The study on the North of Scotland milk marketing board will be completed shortly.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he has issued any circular guidelines to Scottish local authorities regarding the use of their discretion in waiving small amounts of community charge payments due from persons who are deceased; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 5 June 1990]: Although my right hon. and learned Friend has no plans to issue formal guidance on this question, he hopes that individual authorities, when deciding what their policy is to be towards the collection of community charge amounts that are outstanding at the time of a person's death, will discharge their duties sensitively. In making such decisions, authorities will probably wish to take the advice of their legal advisers and auditors.

Sand-eels

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information his Department has on the recruitment level of sand-eels in Shetland waters in 1986, 1987, 1988, and 1989.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 6 June 1990]: The latest assessment of sand-eel recruitment in Shetland waters—the number of young fish which become available to the fishery each year—is as follows:

	Million
1986	48,955
1987	2,258
1988	1,273

Insufficient data on the 1989 year class are available so far to give a reliable estimate. The figures refer to "0" group fish—that is, young of the year at 1 July.

Insulation

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proportion of dwellings in each district in Scotland are insulated to the standard required by his Department.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 6 June 1990]: The Scottish Office does not lay down insulation standards for existing houses, but gives guidance to housing authorities on standards where application is made for insulation grant. Information of the type requested by the hon. Member is not held centrally.

TVEI

Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received with regard to the future of the technical and vocational education initiative within Highland region; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 24 May 1990]: I have been asked to reply.

Highland region's director of education has written to ask that Highland may start to extend TVEI to all 14 to 18-year-olds in maintained schools and colleges in August 1990. It will do so.

TRANSPORT

Lorry Tax (West Germany)

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the decision by the West German Government to impose a lorry tax on foreign vehicles.

Mr. Atkins: The German Government have announced that from 1 July they will introduce a new lorry tax for all vehicles using German roads. The EC Commission considers this tax to be in contravention of articles 5, 76 and 95 of the EC treaty of Rome. On 10 April the Commission served the German Government with an article 169 letter, the first step in a process leading to the European Court of Justice. On 17 May my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport wrote to the EC Transport Commissioner Van Miert congratulating the Commission on this positive step. He also wrote to the West German Transport Minister expressing concern at effects on United Kingdom hauliers and pointing out the danger to Community plans to complete the internal market if other states take retaliatory action. On 4 June, Commissioner Van Miert advised that the Commission had sent a "reasoned opinion" to the Germans, requiring a response by 22 June. The United Kingdom strongly supports this action.

Cross-channel Ferries

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what are the fire drill regulations for cross-channel passenger ferries.

Mr. Parkinson: The international convention on the safety of life at sea 1974 requires that a drill takes place every week on a cross-channel passenger ferry, and that each member of the crew participates in at least one such drill every month. The Merchant Shipping (Muster and Training) Regulations 1986 apply this requirement to United Kingdom-registered ferries.

British Rail

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he last met the chairman of British Rail to discuss the relationship between rail and car transport.

Mr. Freeman: Before the current objectives for British Rail were published last December.

Jumbo Jets

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what regulations govern the amount of fuel which should be held in reserve by jumbo aircraft approaching Heathrow.

Mr. Parkinson: The international standards for fuel and oil supply are contained in annex 6, part 1, to the convention on international civil aviation, at section 4.3.6. The fuel required varies according to several factors, but in general terms, for flights into Heathrow the aircraft must be able to make an approach, then divert to an alternative aerodrome and hold for 30 minutes at the alternate aerodrome, plus a further reserve determined by the state of registry of the operator.

The international standards are amplified in states' regulations which apply to aircraft registered in those states. In the United Kingdom the Civil Aviation Authority has the statutory responsibility for the regulation of civil aviation and the regulations concerning fuel are contained in the Air Navigation Order at article 26.

Mr. McCrindle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has had any discussions with the Civil Aviation Authority regarding the desirability of an in-flight engineer on board Boeing 747-400 aircraft; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Parkinson: No. The composition of flight crew is entirely a matter for the Civil Aviation Authority, which has the statutory responsibility for the safety regulation of civil aviation. I understand that as a consequence of the duty time limitations imposed by the CAA, one or more pilots in addition to the basic two are employed on long-range flights.

Fire Risks (Tottenham Court Road Underground Station)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will call for a report from the chairman of London Underground as to which of the 126 fire risks at Tottenham Court Road station, as detailed in its fire hazards analysis, have been rectified; if he will list all those which have not been tackled to reduce the fire risk to a level acceptable to the London fire brigade; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: In 1988, London Underground commissioned John Brown Engineering to carry out a study of potential fire hazards at Tottenham Court Road station. The consultant made a detailed survey to identify risks arising from combustible materials and how each material might be ignited. The consultant considered that 73 of the potential risks could be dealt with satisfactorily by the provision nearby of fire extinguishing appliances. I understand that action has been taken on the remaining 53 items.

When the LFB inspected the station on 3 November 1989, it found one item which required attention. I have been assured that London Underground has taken action on this.

Departmental Savings

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what were the value-for-money savings in his Department's operations identified by internal audit and internal efficiency arrangements and by external audit and by management consultants retained by his Department between 1983-84 and 1988-89; and what is the amount of those savings fulfilled to date.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 5 June 1990]: The results of the many such studies are measured on different bases and are not aggregated centrally. Improved quality of service may be as significant as savings. The results are reflected in the budgets and targets set out in the annual departmental management plans, and the business plans of the Department's agencies, copies of which are placed in the Library.

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what mechanisms exist in his Department for identifying and tracking value-for-money savings in its operations.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 5 June 1990]: In the Department and its agencies, which comprise some 60 per cent. of manpower, prime responsibility for identifying and delivering value for money rests with a range of managers with delegated financial authority. Their responsibilities are reflected in the targets and plans included in the Department's management plan and in the business plans of the agencies. These plans, which include specific efficiency targets agreed with the Treasury, are all published and placed in the Library. Managers use a number of mechanisms to satisfy themselves about value for money, including market testing, efficiency scrutinies and management reviews, depending on the type of expenditure. These mechanisms are discussed from time to time with Treasury and are subject to scrutiny by the National Audit Office.

DEFENCE

Correspondence

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the hon. Member for Walsall, North will be receiving a reply to his letter of 26 April regarding a constituent's wish for assistance for his late sister's headstone renewal.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Armed Forces will be writing to the hon. Member shortly.

WALES

Euro Info Centre

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what are the locations of the offices of the Wales Euro Info centre; and whether he has plans to establish additional such offices;

(2) if he will make a statement on the objectives of the Wales Euro Info centre;

(3) if he will make a statement on the funding of the Wales Euro Info centre, giving the financial contribution of (a) the European Commission, (b) the Welsh Development Agency, (c) local authorities and (d) other bodies.

Mr. David Hunt: The Wales Euro Info centre is part of an EC-wide service which aims to help small and medium-sized businesses by providing a one-stop shop for information about the European Community. It will enable Welsh businesses to be well informed about such matters as EC directives, grants and tendering opportunities. The centre will also provide a means to inform the European Commission about the needs of Welsh business.

The Wales centre is operated by WEIC Ltd., a consortium consisting of the Welsh Development Agency, Clwyd county council and the university of Wales college of Cardiff. The European Commission will provide 50,000 ecu (£35,000) in the first year and 20,000 ecu in each of the next two years. The Welsh Development Agency will contribute £65,000 in the first year, with the other two partners contributing library and accommodation facilities. The budgets for succeeding years have yet to be determined, although it is expected that an increasing proportion of income will come from charges for services. The Wales centre has offices in Cardiff and Mold. I understand that there are no present plans to open additional offices, but the position will be kept under review.

Rented Accommodation

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the average rent for new lettings of (a) Welsh Development Agency and (b) Development Board for Rural Wales properties in 1987-88, 1988-89 and 1989-90 and the average rent for new lettings in 1990-91; and what projections he has made for the financial years to 1992-93.

Mr. David Hunt: This information is provided in the Welsh Office commentary to the 1990 public expenditure White Paper, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his Department's policy on the level of rents for new lettings of Welsh Development Agency and Development Board for Rural Wales properties.

Mr. David Hunt: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave him on Tuesday 5 June.

Hospitals, Buckley

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will meet members of staff of Dobshill hospital, Buckley;

(2) if he will meet members of staff of Meadowsla hospital, Buckley;

(3) if he will visit Meadowslea hospital, Penyffordd, Clwyd;

(4) if he will visit Dobshill hospital, Buckley, Clwyd;

(5) if he will make a statement on the future of Dobshill hospital, Buckley;

(6) if he will make a statement on the future of Meadowslea hospital, Buckley.

Mr. Grist: The future role of Meadowslea and Dobshill hospitals is entirely a matter for Clwyd health authority at this time, and at present neither I nor my right hon. Friend have plans to visit them.

Water Shortages

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what measures he has taken to avoid water shortages this summer; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will list the investment and public works to avoid water shortages in Wales undertaken since 1980; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: Comprehensive information on works undertaken to reduce water loss and improve the water supply-distribution system is not held centrally but among the most important are the River Wye transfer scheme and continuing work on the mini-grid system in south-east Wales.

It is the responsibility of Dwr Cymru Cyf to ensure that water supplies within its area can be maintained. The company, in liaison with the National Rivers Authority which has overall responsibility for water resource management, is keeping the present position under review.

Beef

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received from the farming unions concerning the problems of Welsh beef producers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: I have received representations from the farming unions concerning the effects of interest rates and BSE on Welsh beef producers' returns and about the level of suckler cow premium. My agriculture colleagues and I are currently considering the suckler cow premium rate for 1990-91 and will make an announcement as soon as possible.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will take urgent steps to assist the beef farmers of Wales following the recent difficulties in that sector; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: Beef producers in Wales will benefit from the intervention arrangements agreed in 1989. At the tender which closed on 30 May 1990, all United Kingdom bids were accepted and some 2,045 tonnes of beef will be purchased into intervention in Great Britain over the two weeks ending on 15 June. At the beef management committee meeting on 1 June it was also agreed that a further tender for automatic intervention should be opened immediately.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he proposes to meet the farming unions of Wales concerning the impact of BSE upon the farming industry and the consumer; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: I intend to meet the Farmers Union of Wales to discuss the whole range of issues affecting Welsh agriculture. My officials have already met representatives to discuss BSE.

Salmonella, Clwyd

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the Clwyd salmonella outbreak of 1989.

Mr. Grist: The draft report by the Department on the handling of the outbreak was sent to Delyn borough council and Clwyd health authority last month. We have asked for their comments by the middle of this month. The report will then be finalised and published as soon as possible.

Holyhead-Crewe Railway Line

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish his Department's reasons for not supporting proposals to electrify the Holyhead to Crewe railway line.

Mr. Roberts: It would be for British Rail to bring foward the necessary investment proposals. The Government are always willing to approve investments put forward by British Rail provided that they are worth while. No economic case has been made however to justify the cost of electrifying this line.

Health Authorities

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales with which chairpersons of health authorities in Wales he or his predecessor has met since 1 January; and on how many occasions he has met each such person during this time.

Mr. Grist: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has not met chairmen of health authorities in Wales since 1 January; he will, however, meet both DHA and FPC chairmen on 10 July.

Gwynedd Health Authority

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales with whom he is holding consultations concerning the future membership and terms of reference of Gwynedd health authority following the coming into force of the National Health Service and Community Care Bill.

Mr. Grist: No formal consultation has been held, but suggestions for membership of all reconstituted authorities have been received from various sources.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he began inviting nominations for the chairmanship of Gwynedd health authority for the period following 3 July when his present appointment expires; by what date nominations should be received by him; and whether these same procedures will be applied for the nomination of other members for that authority to fill vacancies which will arise with the expiration of current appointees following that date.

Mr. Grist: Consideration is being given to the appointment of chairmen of district health authorities whose appointments terminate on 31 July 1990. Nominations were not invited.

It is proposed that the appointment of non-executive members of the reconstituted authorities will be made under the provisions of the National Health Service and Community Care Bill currently before Parliament. Anyone who wishes to put his name forward can do so or nominate others.

Cystic Fibrosis

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what contribution his Department is making to the funding of the pilot programme of screening for cystic fibrosis which will be carried out at the university of Wales medical school, Cardiff.

Mr. Grist: None. I understand from the university of Wales college of medicine that this pilot project is to be funded by the Cystic Fibrosis Research Trust.

Training Agency

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the number of trainees pursuing (a) mainstream and (b) non-mainstream schemes under the aegis of the Training Agency of each of (i) Gorseinon, (ii) Neath, (iii) Swansea and (iv) Afan colleges.

Mr. Roberts: The number of contracted employment training places for each of the colleges is shown in the table:

	Mainstream	Non-mainstream
Gorseinon	160	5
Neath	155	5
Swansea	262	8
Afan	112	8

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the average payment per trainee paid by the Training Agency in (a) the financial year 1988-89, (b) the financial year 1989-90 and (c) the current financial year for (i) Gorseinon college, (ii) Neath college, (iii) Swansea college and (iv) Afan college; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Roberts: Details of unit allocations are confidential to the Training Agency and individual training managers.

Tuberculosis

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report, the reported cases of tuberculosis for each health authority in Wales, for each year between 1979 and 1990.

Mr. Grist: The number of notifications of tuberculosis made to the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys each year from 1979 to 1989 and for the first 20 weeks of 1990 are shown in the table. Data for 1982 onwards may not be strictly comparable with that for earlier years as the system was revised to enable notification associated with chemoprophylaxis to be excluded.

[1] Provisional

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the correlation coefficient between the incidence of HIV infection and the incidence of tuberculosis in Wales over the period 1980 to 1990.

Mr. Grist: There is no evidence of a correlation between HIV and the overall incidence of tuberculosis in Wales.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Child Benefit

12. Mr. Faulds: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he next expects to meet representatives of the Child Poverty Action Group to discuss child benefit.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I will be meeting representatives of the CPAG tomorrow.

Charitable Giving

Mr. Stevens: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received on his proposals to encourage charitable giving.

Mr. Lilley: The Budget proposals to encourage charitable giving have been widely welcomed by the charity world.

52. Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the effect of the Treasury's incentives upon the level of charitable donations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lilley: Since 1979 we have improved and extended the range of tax reliefs for charitable giving. These have helped charitable giving to increase substantially in real terms. For example, the Charities Aid Foundation's estimates show that donations to the top 200 fund-raising charities have doubled in real terms since 1978-79.

Interest Rates

15. Mr. Speller: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his policy on the use of interest rates to influence the number of small business start-ups.

Mr. Ryder: The best way to encourage small businesses is by creating and sustaining an environment in which they can flourish, and that means defeating inflation. The only way to achieve this is to set interest rates at the appropriate level.

20. Mr. Eastham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received from the Confederation of British Industry on the current level of interest rates.

Mr. Ryder: My right hon. Friend has received a number of such representations.

29. Mr. Benn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will next meet the Governor of the Bank of England to discuss interest rate policy.

Mr. Major: I meet the Governor of the Bank of England from time to time to discuss a variety of matters.

31. Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what impact he assesses his interest rate policy has had on the level of unemployment.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The effects of the Government's interest rate policy were taken into account in the discussion of the prospects for unemployment published in chapter 3 of the "Financial Statement and Budget Report" at paragraph 3.48. The defeat of inflation is essential for economic prosperity and employment.

34. Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received on the effect of interest rates on Scottish economic performance.

41. Mr. Sillars: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received on the effects of interest rates on Scottish economic performance.

47. Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received on the effects of interest rates on Scottish economic performance.

53. Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received on the effects of interest rates on Scottish economic performance.

Mr. Ryder: My right hon. Friend has received a number of such representations.

38. Mr. Knox: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the current level of interest rates.

Mr. Ryder: Bank base rates are 15 per cent.

43. Mr. Dykes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the extent to which high interest rates add to the rate of inflation, other than in the effects from home mortgage rate increases.

Mr. Ryder: By curbing demand growth, high interest rates, supported by a firm fiscal policy, will in time reduce inflation.

VAT

18. Mr. McAllion: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has any plans to review the rate of value added tax on energy efficiency products.

Mr. Ryder: My right hon. Friend keeps all taxation under review.

Corporation Tax

21. Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what benefit he expects to flow to small companies as a result of his corporation tax proposals.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Over 20,000 companies—40 per cent. of all companies paying corporation tax at more than 25 per cent.—will pay less tax. The reduction will amount to about £40 million in a full year.

50. Mr. Bidwell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much corporation tax has been paid by United Kingdom branches of United States banks for the six years to 31 December 1988; and how much tax has been assessed and stood over for the same period.

Mr. Lilley: I regret that the information could be provided only at a disproportionate cost.

Inflation

21. Mr. Adley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the contribution made by wage and salary increases to inflation.

Mr. Major: Excessive wage settlements threaten job prospects rather than sustained higher inflation.

24. Mr. Allen Adams: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the underlying rate of inflation.

Mr. Ryder: There are a number of ways of estimating the underlying rate of inflation. As measured by the RPI excluding mortgage interest payments and the community charge, it was 6·5 per cent. in April.

44. Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what distinction he draws for policy purposes between price rises and inflation.

Mr. Ryder: Policy is set to bring down inflation, defined as the change in the aggregate price level. It would be entirely inappropriate to seek to control movements in the relative prices of individual goods and services, since these are essential for the efficient working of a competitive economy.

46. Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last met the Governor of the Bank of England to discuss policy on reducing inflation.

Mr. Ryder: My right hon. Friend meets the Governor of the Bank of England from time to time to discuss a variety of matters.

48. Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what effect upon the annual rate of inflation he expects the introduction of the community charge to have.

Mr. Ryder: The average personal community charge in Great Britain is estimated to be 34 per cent. higher than the analogous rates per head figure in 1989-90 for households covered by the RPI. This increase has added about 1 percentage point to the annual rate of retail price inflation.

Environmental Considerations

22. Ms. Mowlam: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the decisions on taxation he has taken since becoming Chancellor informed by environmental considerations.

Mr. Lilley: My right hon. Friend takes into account all relevant considerations, including where appropriate the effect on the environment, before making any decision on taxation.

Local Government Expenditure

23. Mr. Paice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the total cost to central Government of support for local government expenditure throughout the United Kingdom.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Central Government support for local authorities in 1990-91 is planned to be £41·8 billion.

Growth Rates

25. Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the growth rate of (a) the United Kingdom, (b) Germany and (c) France during the last decade.

27. Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the growth rate of (a) the United Kingdom, (b) Germany and (c) France during the last decade.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Since 1980, growth has averaged 2·7 per cent. a year in the United Kingdom, compared with 2·1 per cent. in France and 2·0 per cent. in Germany.

42. Mr. Butterfill: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the expected growth for the United Kingdom economy for 1990.

Mr. Norman Lamont: GDP growth is forecast to be 1 per cent. in 1990, as published in the "Financial Statement and Budget Report."

Economic Performance

26. Mr. Robertson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last met the Governor of the Bank of England to discuss United Kingdom economic performance.

Mr. Major: I meet the Governor of the Bank of England from time to time to discuss a variety of matters.

Taxation

28. Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of gross earnings the married couple with one earner on 75 per cent. of average earnings, with two children, paid in tax, treating child benefit as negative income tax, in 1978-79 and in 1989-90.

Mr. Lilley: A married man on 75 per cent. of average male earnings with two children would have paid 8·1 per cent. of his gross earnings in income tax in 1989-90, the same proportion as in 1978-79. Over the same period he has enjoyed an increase in real net income of 30 per cent.

Mr. Speller: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he has any plans to impose any form of taxation upon newspapers, magazines and books.

Mr. Ryder: No.

Mortgage Rates

30. Mr. Morley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will next meet the Building Societies Association to discuss mortgage rates.

Mr. Ryder: My right hon. Friend has no plans to do so at present.

Business Investment

32. Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his forecast for the growth of business investment is for 1990.

Mr. Norman Lamont: My latest forecast, published in the "Financial Statement and Budget Report", projects business investment to fall by 1 per cent. in 1990. Some slowdown in the growth of business investment in 1990 must be expected as growth in the economy as a whole slows; but this follows three years when business investment has grown by over 40 per cent.

Building Societies (Bad Debts)

33. Mr. Caborn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received from building societies about increasing the provision for bad debts.

Mr. Ryder: None.

Interest and Exchange Rates

35. Mr. Yeo: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last met the Finance Ministers of the Group of Seven countries to discuss interest and exchange rates.

Mr. Ryder: My right hon. Friend met his counterparts in the other Group of Seven countries in Washington on 6 May.

Executive Pay

36. Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received on current levels of executive pay.

Mr. Ryder: My right hon. Friend has recently received some letters from members of the public on the pay of company directors and senior executives. Levels of pay are a matter for the parties concerned as only they can know what is right for their particular circumstances. However, the Government have said repeatedly that we are opposed to excessive pay increases since they threaten jobs.

Village Shops

37. Mr. Colin Shepherd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what advice he is giving to district valuation officers in respect of the valuation for the purposes of assessing the business rateable value of village shops.

Mr. Ryder: Valuation officers are required to determine the rateable value of village shops having regard to the provisions of the Local Government Finance Act 1988. An estimate has to be made of the rent at which the property might reasonably be expected to be let from year to year.

European Monetary System

39. Mr. Beith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the average inflation rate of countries in the exchange rate mechanism of the European monetary system.

Mr. Ryder: The average inflation rate of members of the exchange rate mechanism of the EMS was 4·3 per cent. in March 1990.

40. Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects the Madrid conditions concerning United Kingdom entry into the exchange rate mechanism of the European monetary system to be met; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder: I refer the hon. and learned Member to the answer my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer gave to the hon. Member for Birkenhead (Mr. Field) on 26 April at column 475.

Public Spending

45. Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the average annual public spending from (a) 1970 to 1979 and (b) 1980 to 1989 as a percentage of gross domestic product.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The averages of the annual ratios of general Government expenditure (excluding privatisation proceeds) to GDP for the financial years 1970-71 to 1979-80 and 1980-81 to 1989-90 are 43¾per cent. for both periods. In the earlier period the ratio peaked at 48½ per cent. in 1975-76. The highest level in the later period was 46¾ per cent. in 1982-83; the ratio in 1989-90 was 39 per cent.

54. Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much total public spending will be in 1991-92.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Planned general Government expenditure, excluding privatisation proceeds, in 1991-92 has been set at £230 billion.

Monetary Growth (Prices)

49. Mr. Gow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the relationship between the present rate of monetary growth and the Government's declared purpose of achieving stable prices.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The role of monetary policy in the defeat of inflation, the central objective of the medium-term financial strategy, was fully described in the FSBR. Consistent with this objective, the FSBR set a target range of 1-5 per cent. for MO's 12-month growth in 1990-91, although the FSBR noted that it could take some months for MO growth to fall within the range.

EC Contribution

51. Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of the net contribution to the EC in 1990; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder: The latest estimate of the United Kingdom's net contribution to the Community budget in 1990 is £2,175 million. This appeared in the recently published "Statement on the 1990 Community Budget" (Cm. 1059).

Freezones

Mr. Hanley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the outcome of the Treasury's evaluation of the freezone experiment.

Mr. Ryder: A copy of the evaluation report on the United Kingdom freezone experiment (1984-89) by the Treasury's consultants Roger Tym and Partners is being made available today in the House Libraries. Further copies are available from the Treasury.

The experiment has shown that freezones can be worth while and viable enterprises in the United Kingdom. The Government have therefore decided to offer a further designation for 10 years from August 1991 to the three currently operating freezones at Birmingham, Liverpool and Southampton. In addition, the Government intend to announce later in the year objective criteria against which further similar designations of freezones under existing EC and United Kingdom legislation will be considered by Customs and Excise. Applications from potential freezone operators will be invited at that time and will be judged primarily against the criteria of their commercial viability without public sector assistance and sufficient volume of demand to justify the Customs resources required at the freezone.

Finally, the Government have decided in the light of the evaluation report to introduce certain improvements to the freezone regime. Subject to EC approval, VAT zero rating will be allowed for supplies of imported freezone goods where, under an agreement with the supplier, the customer is required to clear the goods from the freezone. Furthermore, the Customs and Excise guidance on the freezone regime will be updated and consolidated to take account of technical amendments made since the scheme was introduced to ensure that the scheme operates as clearly and simply as possible within the necessary EC and Customs procedures.

Tax-exempt Special Savings Accounts

Mr. David Martin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many banks and building societies have expressed an interest in TESSA.

Mr. Lilley: Most of the main high street banks and building societies have welcomed this proposal and indicated that they will offer TESSAs.

Departmental Savings

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what mechanisms exist in the Treasury for identifying and tracking value-for-money savings in its operations.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 5 June 1990]: The core mechanism is the annual cycle of delegated budgeting and work programming in which progress against objectives is assessed and forward priorities are established. This is supported by information technology and purchasing strategies, by rolling programmes of staff inspection and reviews, internal audit and market testing and by other efficiency studies.

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what were the value-for-money savings in his Department's operations identified by internal audit and internal efficiency arrangements and by external audit and by management consultants retained by his Department between 1983-84 and 1988-89; and what is the amount of those savings fulfilled to date.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 5 June 1990]: Total efficiency savings and gains amounted to some £2.2 millon in 1988-89 and £2.6 million in 1989-90. The principal methods of identification were purchasing savings and staff inspections and reviews. Comparable figures for earlier years are not available because of machinery of Government changes.

EMPLOYMENT

Restart

Ms. Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what plans there are for the options courses or other restart menu items to be made compulsory.

Mr. Eggar: As my right hon. and learned Friend announced to the House on 11 May, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security intends to introduce regulations later this year which will enable employment service staff to require the attendance at a restart course of those who have been unemployed for two years or more and who, at subsequent restart interviews, refused to participate in any of my Department's employment and training programmes. In some areas, restart courses are known locally as options courses and they will be covered by these regulations.

There are no plans at present to make attendance at any of the other opportunities offered at the restart interview compulsory. However, the conditions attached to Department of Employment programmes are kept continuously under review.

Special Needs Training

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what specific new measures are expected to be made available for the training of people with special needs arising from disabilities and learning difficulties in each region.

Mr. Eggar: The new training and enterprise councils (TECs) are required to set out how they intend to meet the training needs of local people, including those with disabilities and learning difficulties, in their corporate and business plans.

Subject to approval of these plans, and to certain general contractual requirements, it will be a matter for individual TECs to decide what specific new measures they adopt.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he has any plans to appoint a TEC director to have explicit responsibility for the disabled and people with learning difficulties; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: It is for each training and enterprise council (TEC) to determine the membership of its board within the broad parameters set out by my Department.

Collectively, the TEC board will be responsible for identifying and meeting the training needs of people in its area including those of people with disabilities.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what steps are being taken to encourage TECs to fund the higher unit cost training of disabled people.

Mr. Eggar: Training and enterprise councils will be expected to offer a full range of training opportunities for people living in their area including people with disabilities.

TECs will also have access to specialist residential training providers offering places to people with disabilities who need special facilities and support.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many board members are on training and enterprise councils.

Mr. Eggar: There are 175 board members on the 13 operational training and enterprise councils.

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many training and enterprise councils have been formed.

Mr. Eggar: Thirteen training and enterprise councils have signed an operating contract and a further 63 are in their development stage.

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many board members on training and enterprise councils are women.

Mr. Eggar: There are 17 women board members on the 13 operational training and enterprise councils.

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many training and enterprise councils have a woman chair.

Mr. Eggar: To date, one training and enterprise council has appointed a woman to chair the council.

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many board members on training and enterprise councils are from industry and what is the make-up from other entries.

Mr. Eggar: There are 122 board members from the private sector on the 13 operational training and enterprise councils (TECs). Other board members include 15 representatives from local authorities, nine representatives from trade union organisations, six representatives from voluntary organisations, six representatives from local education authorities, five representatives from educational institutions, two representatives from local health authorities, two representatives from employers associations and two representatives from economic development bodies. Six chief executives are also board members.

TVEI

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, pursuant to his oral reply to the hon. Member for Clydebank and Milngavie (Mr. Worthington) of 22 May, Official Report, column 161, concerning the implementation of the technical and vocational education initiative, how much was allocated to the London borough of Newham for the current financial year; and how much is indicated for 1991-92.

Mr. Eggar: Newham has been invited to start the extension of its technical and vocational education initiative this year. The precise amount available to it in 1990-91 will be subject to contract and detailed discussion is under way. The amount available for 1991-92 onwards will be reviewed annually so that it can be contained within available resources.

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he intends to continue funding the technical and vocational education initiative in Scotland.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 17 May 1990]: The Government are committed to TVEI and to extending it to all 14 to 18-year-olds in maintained schools and colleges throughout Great Britain.

Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many 14 to 18-year-olds have participated in the technical and vocational education initiative within Highland region since its inception; and what proposals have been submitted to him for participation in further projects.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 24 May 1990]: Over 700 14 to 18-year-olds have participated so far in the TVEI pilot project in Highland region. A further 200 are due to participate in the next academic year. Highland will start extending TVEI to all 14 to 18-year-olds in its maintained schools and colleges later this year.

Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what are the total moneys involved in the setting up and running of the technical and vocational education initiative in Highland region since inception; what are the costs involved in evaluating, preparing and submitting any proposals for future projects; what are the anticipated costs of such future projects; and when he expects to be able to make an announcement with regard to future projects.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 24 May 1990]: By the end of March 1990, Highland had spent £1·2 million on the technical and vocational education initiative. The pilot initiative is still proceeding with £0·9 million planned to be spent by summer 1992. The education authority will begin the extension phase of TVEI in summer 1990. Highland is participating in the TVEI-funded modern language Scottish project and Scottish flexible learning project.

Age Discrimination

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what steps he is taking to assess the impact on employers of his Department's encouragement not to discriminate against employees on the grounds of age.

Mr. Nicholls: My Department is using a number of means to monitor the effect of our policy of encouraging employers not to discriminate against employees on the grounds of age. A survey of vacancies notified to jobcentres was carried out in 1989 which showed a reduction, as against the previous year, in the number of vacancies specifying age limits. The Institute of Manpower Studies has recently conducted research, on behalf of my Department, into the employment and utilisation of older workers and will report shortly. Research was also carried out in support of the National Economic Development Office and Training Agency report, "Defusing the Demographic Time Bomb", which showed an encouraging number of employers are taking steps to widen their recruitment sources, including initiatives to attract mature workers.

Employment Training

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the level in money terms from the Government of funding granted to APEX, north-west region, for employment training from 1 April; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: The information requested is confidential to the Training Agency and individual ET training managers.

Departmental Savings

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what were the value-for-money savings in his Department's operations identified by internal audit and internal efficiency arrangements and by external audit and by management consultants retained by his Department between 1983-84 and 1988-89; and what is the amount of those savings fulfilled to date.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 5 June 1990]: This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what mechanisms exist in his Department for identifying value-for-money savings in its operations.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 5 June 1990]: Mechanisms to identify and track value-for-money savings include internal audit; follow-up of NAO reports; reviews by management services; external consultants; policy evaluations; efficiency scrutinies; internal reviews; energy efficiency; and a purchasing co-ordination unit. In addition, since 1989-90, value-for-money savings on running costs have been identified in management plans for each part of my Department.

I also expect the establishment of the employment service as an executive agency and of the training and enterprise council network to produce greater value for money in the delivery of my Department's objectives.

Workshops for the Blind

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) how many workers are employed by workshops for the blind in England and Wales at the latest date;

(2) what funding is made towards the upkeep of workshops for the blind in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement;

(3) if he will list the workshops for the blind in England and Wales; and if he will indicate how they are funded.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 6 June 1990]: The employment service, which is responsible for the sheltered employment programme, became an executive agency on 2 April 1990. Mr. Mike Fogden, the employment service agency's chief executive, will be replying in writing to the hon. Member.

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will take steps to provide direct funding support for workshops for the blind.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 6 June 1990]: There are no plans at this time to change the existing arrangements for the funding of sheltered workshops.

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what representations he has received on the threatened closure of the Birkenhead, Liverpool, workshops for the blind; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 6 June 1990]: My Department has received representations from the National League of the Blind and Disabled about the decision by the management of the Liverpool Workshops and Birkenhead Society for the Blind to close their workshop from 1 October 1990. I understand that this decision was taken following the withdrawal of support for the workshop by one of the four sponsoring local authorities. Officials of the employment service are working closely with the sponsoring local authorities and with organisations involved in supporting sheltered employment in seeking to find suitable alternative employment for the workpeople affected.

Departmental Policies

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will set out (a) the failures and (b) the successes of his Department's policies since May 1979.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 4 May 1990]: Since May 1979 my Department's policies have met with considerable success. This can be illustrated by taking for example the fields of employment, training and industrial relations law.

In the field of employment, policies to remove unnecessary restrictions and barriers from the labour market and to stimulate enterprise have helped create conditions under which employment can flourish. At over 27 million, the work force in employment now stands at its highest level ever and the number of self-employed has risen by 1·4 million since June 1979, after little change in the 1970s.

In the training field, we have established ET, the largest adult training programme ever launched in this country, and YTS, which has provided high quality training to thousands of young people and will be further enhanced as the new youth training programme. We have built imaginative and effective links between the worlds of education and work through the technical and vocational education initiative (TVEI), compacts and the enterprise in higher education initiative. Our programme to give local employers responsibility for the design and delivery of training through a national network of training and enterprise councils (TECs) is some two years ahead of schedule.

A further example of success is our step-by-step reform of industrial relations and trade union law. We have redressed the balance between management and unions, and helped make union leaders properly answerable to their members. It can be no coincidence that these reforms have coincided with a dramatic reduction in the number of working days lost because of industrial action. In the 1970s nearly 13 million working days were lost every year; in the 12 months to February 1990 only 5 million working days were lost, and the number of stoppages in February was the lowest since 1933.

I am satisfied that my Department's policies and programmes have generally proved sucessful. We keep them under review and are always looking for ways to improve their effectiveness.

Lambeth Skill Centre

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the sale of Lambeth skill centre to the Training Business Group; what information he has on (a) access for transferred staff to trade unions, (b) proposed redundancies and (c) renegotiation of staff contracts; and whether the Training Agency will meet the owners of the centre to discuss these issues.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 5 June 1990]: The sale of the business at Lambeth skill centre to the Training Business was completed on 11 May. The centre is now in the private sector and issues relating to trade union recognition and any renegotiation of staff terms and conditions are matters for the new owners and their staff. However, I understand that a number of staff at the centre have volunteered for redundancy and I have no reason to believe that the Training Business will not meet its contractual obligations.

Energy Consumption

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give the number of energy audits carried out in his Department in the last five years and for each audit a statement of its main conclusions.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 5 June 1990]: Over the past five years energy surveys have been undertaken on 171 buildings. Because of the large number of surveys and the wide variety of recommendations it is not practical to list the main recommendations for each of the surveys.

Implementation of the recommendations of the surveys has led to reduced consumption and cost savings.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give the number of dedicated energy managers in his Department and the number of person years devoted to energy management in the latest year.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 5 June 1990]: The Department does not have any full-time dedicated energy managers. Energy management forms part of the duties for those staff engaged in estate management. The total number of person years devoted to energy management in 1989-90 was four.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will estimate the numbers removed from the unemployment register since October 1989 as a result of (a) actively seeking work suspensions and disallowances, and (b) disqualifications for refusal of employment.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 5 June 1990]: The employment service became an executive agency on 2 April 1990. Mr. Mike Fogden, the employment service agency's chief executive, will be replying in writing to the hon. Member.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Accountancy Firms

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether, further to his reply to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby on 15 January, Official Report, column 17, he will provide a list of the accountancy firms used by his Department.

Mr. Cope: The information requested was given in my reply to the hon. Member on 20 April (Vol. 170, column 1044). That answer included one firm, John Compton Associates, which was not employed on accountancy work. The figures given in my reply on 15 January to the hon. Member also included some firms not employed on accountancy work and contained an element of double counting. I am grateful for the opportunity to clarify the position.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Science Teachers

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement about the numbers of science teachers he expects to be employed in schools in 1991.

Mr. Alan Howarth: It is for LEAs and schools to decide what teachers to employ and how to deploy them. It is therefore not possible to estimate with any precision how many teachers will be employed and in which subjects. In 1988—the most recent year for which figures are available—provision for science in secondary schools in England was made by the equivalent of some 27,600 full-time teachers. We expect that in 1991 a similar number of science teachers will be needed.

School Closures

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many schools were closed in each of the past five years in the Wiltshire education authority area.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The number of schools which were closed in each of the past five years in the Wiltshire education authority area was as follows:

Year	Number
1989	5
1988	6
1987	1
1986	None
1985	8

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many schools were closed in each of the past five years within the area now covered by Greenwich local education authority.

Mr. Alan Howarth: Greenwich local education authority came into being on 1 April 1990. Information on school closures in Greenwich is not readily available before this date as it is not possible to identify accurately those schools in the former Inner London education authority that fall within the Greenwich area. Information on schools closures held by the Department is coded at local education authority level. The codings could be subdivided to areas below this level only with the assistance of LEAs concerned, and would involve disproportionate cost.

The Department is not currently aware of any closures in Greenwich since April 1990.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many schools were closed in each of the past five years in the Cambridgeshire education authority area.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The number of schools which were closed in each of the past five years in the Cambridgeshire education authority area was as follows:

	Number
1989	8
1988	12
1987	7
1986	10
1985	16

Students

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish in the Official Report the number of (a) undergraduate and (b) postgraduate students in England who have home addresses in Wales.

Mr. Jackson: The requested information is as follows:

Welsh domiciled full-time and part-time higher education students in England, 1988-89

	Postgraduates	Undergraduates	Total
Universities	1,177	6,971	8,148

Youth Service

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what was local government expenditure on the voluntary sector of the youth service in 1990 and equivalent figures for 1979-80 and each year from 1984-85 to 1989-90.

Mr. Alan Howarth: There have been several changes over the period 1979-80 to 1988-89 in the coverage of the categories in local education authority spending returns which relate to expenditure by local education authorities on the voluntary youth service. So it is not possible to give the figures requested on a comparable basis. As a rough guide, however, the trend in spending in the relevant categories is estimated as:

	£ million cash
1979-80	9·0
1984-85	17·2
1985-86	18·7
1986-87	18·0
1987-88	17·5
1988-89	20·6

Figures for subsequent years are not yet available.

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list by education authority (a) expenditure on the voluntary sector of the youth service and (b) the related grant-related expenditure allocation for 1988-89 and 1990-91.

Mr. Alan Howarth: Not all local education authorities have yet submitted spending returns for 1988-89. Of those that have, 23 have recorded expenditure on services provided by voluntary associations relating to the youth service, as follows:

	£'000s
Bexley	15
Bromley	51
Croydon	227
Merton	53
Birmingham	921
Coventry	109
Knowsley	1
Wirral	90
Bolton	34
Rochdale	102
Doncaster	38
Bradford	750
Newcastle-upon-Tyne	7
South Tyneside	79
Avon	1,129
Buckinghamshire	152
Devon	492
Humberside	217
Lancashire	368
North Yorkshire	101
Oxfordshire	90
Suffolk	83
Warwickshire	6
ENGLAND TOTAL	5,115

No figures are yet available for spending in 1990-91. There has been no sum specifically identified for spending on the voluntary sector of the youth service within the grant-related expenditure or standard spending assessments of individual LEAs.

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what was central Government expenditure on the voluntary sector of the youth service in (a) 1990, (b) 1979-80 and (c) each year from 1984-85 to 1989-90.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The information is not readily available in the form requested. The table sets out total expenditure by the Department on the youth service as a whole. While the majority of this expenditure is specifically on voluntary work in the field, the figures include payments for general support made direct to national youth bodies.

Expenditure on the youth service

£ thousand

Financial years	Current	Capital[1]
1979-80	1,623	4,003
1984-85	3,158	263
1985-86	3,493	511
1986-87	3,592	536
1987-88	3,727	511
1988-89	3,940	463
1989-90	4,190	368
1990-91[2]	4,577	651

[1] From 1981-82, the responsibility for grant-aid for local voluntary building projects for the youth service and for village halls and community centres devolved to local government.

A-Levels

Mr. Walden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what plans the Government have for the future of A-levels.

Mrs. Rumbold: The Government are committed to maintaining the standards of A-level and Advanced Supplementary examinations and improving their effectiveness in meeting the needs of students and the requirements of higher education and employment.

My right hon. Friend asked the School Examinations and Assessment Council last August to draw up general principles to govern Advanced level syllabuses and examinations, with a view to having an improved system in place by 1994. These principles will provide controls on standards, syllabus development and progression from GCSE. Draft principles will be considered by the council in July, before wider consultation.

My right hon. Friend has also more recently asked the council to advise him in July on the scope for embodying in the programmes of all Advanced level students a range of core skills needed for adult working life; and on the possibilities for credit transfer between Advanced level and vocational qualifications.

My right hon. Friend will consider carefully the implications of what the council proposes.

Voluntary-aided Schools

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will set out the criteria which his Department applies in considering requests for the establishment of new voluntary-aided schools.

Mr. MacGregor: Under section 13 of the Education Act 1980 a voluntary body of any religious persuasion which wishes to establish a new voluntary aided school, whether or not the school already exists as an independent school, is free to seek the approval of the Secretary of State, after consulting the relevant local education authority. When making the decision whether to approve an application for voluntary-aided status, the Secretary of State considers each case on its merits, taking account of a number of factors, including:

(i) the overall need for school places in the area, as well as denominational need;
(ii) whether the proposal has the support of the LEA, which would be responsible for the cost of maintaining the VA school;
(iii) whether the premises are up to standard;

(iv) whether the teachers are suitably qualified and the school is able and willing to deliver the national curriculum and to provide equal opportunities for boys and girls;
(v) whether the promoters are able to meet the expenses which would fall to them.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Know-how Fund

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the use of the know-how fund to date.

Mrs. Chalker: Expenditure for 1989-90 under the know-how fund for Poland was £2·3 million. The know-how fund for eastern Europe now covers operations in Poland, Hungary, Czechoslovakia and the German Democratic Republic. Commitments are growing rapidly, and we expect to spend fully the £15 million available for expenditure in the current financial year.

Mr. Jim Lester: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has any plans to provide assistance in support of Operation Lifeline II in Sudan.

Mrs. Chalker: I have allocated £3 million, of which I have pledged £1 million to the International Committee of the Red Cross for its relief operations in southern Sudan. The balance will be apportioned between British non-governmental organisations and international agencies once their specific appeals have been received and evaluated.

NATIONAL FINANCE

War Loan

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the cost to the Treasury of holders of 3½ per cent. war loan having their stocks redeemed at par value.

Mr. Ryder: The cost of redeeming 3½ per cent. war loan at par would be £1,909 million.

Tax Returns

Miss Lestor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people from whom a completed tax return was not obtained because, after inquiries, they could not be traced there were in 1988-89 and 1989-90.

Mr. Lilley: No count is maintained. Address details are nearly always held for the people from whom returns are wanted.

Gross National Product

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will tabulate for each fiscal year since 1963-64 the proportion of gross national product represented by (a) public expenditure, (b) taxation and (c) the public sector borrowing requirement.

Mr. Lilley: The information requested is in the table.

TRANSPORT

London Bus Routes

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many bus routes have been put out to tender by London Regional Transport; and what savings have been achieved.

Mr. Freeman: To date approximately 180 routes have been put out to tender, which is about 25 per cent. of the London Regional Transport bus network. LRT estimates that tendering of routes has resulted in real net savings of some 15 per cent. on total operating costs.

Vehicle Emissions

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what further provisions he is making to reduce emissions from motor vehicles; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: Amendments to the Construction and Use Regulations were laid before the House on 5 June.

The new amendments follow up European requirements on gaseous emissions that are already being applied in the Type Approval Regulations. They also apply the strict stage II emission limits for small cars set by Community directive 89/458 from 31 December 1992. This means that virtually all new petrol-engined cars from 1993 onwards will need to be fitted with catalysts.

Limits on particulate emissions from diesel cars are also introduced.

The regulations require the user of a vehicle to keep the engine in tune and any emission control equipment, such as a catalyst, in good working order. It is important for drivers to recognise this responsibility and it is in their own interest to do so. Keeping the engine in tune helps to reduce fuel consumption as well as keeping emissions down.

The new regulations also introduce the first gaseous emission limits for lorries and buses. Community directive 88/77 covers diesel-engined vehicles over 3·5 tonnes gross weight. These limits for heavy duty diesels are just a first step. The Commission has just announced proposals for a substantial tightening of these limits and the introduction of a particulate standard. However, they do not go quite as far as I would like. The Government believe that for the mid-1990s the European Community should adopt limits for other gaseous and particulate emissions as close as possible for the United States 1994 standards, which are the strictest worldwide.

Business Aviation

Mr. Warren: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has received representations from companies operating in the United Kingdom concerning their possible need to relocate to continental bases because of current restrictions at London Heathrow on business aviation.

Mr. McLoughlin: My right hon. Friend has received representations concerning the restrictions on business aviation at Heathrow, asserting that adequate access to the airport is important to maintain the United Kingdom's international competitiveness. It has also been stated that inadequate access could lead business aircraft owners and operators to relocate to other countries, but specific cases have not been put to us.

Mr. Warren: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what evidence has been obtained by his Department from business aircraft operators concerning their operations at London's airports following publication of document CAP 559.

Mr. McLoughlin: My Department has frequent and continuing contacts with business aviation interests through which it obtains information and views on the effects of Government policy in this area.

Mr. Warren: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will review the competitiveness of London's airport provision for business aviation; if he will make a comparable assessment of the strategy of the Paris airports; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: Business aviation interests keep before us their views on the sector's needs in the London area. It is our policy that the peripheral London airports should accommodate business aviation displaced from Heathrow and Gatwick. If the industry felt that a dedicated facility on the lines of Paris Le Bourget was desirable, we should expect it to develop proposals.

Air Service Agreements

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the current round of talks with the United States of America on bilateral air service agreements.

Mr. McLoughlin: Negotiations are continuing.

DEFENCE

Plutonium Contamination

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans or studies have been made by his Department to assess what measures would have to be taken in the event of contamination by airborne plutonium resulting from a nuclear weapons accident aboard a Royal Navy ship docked at Greenwich; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans or studies have been made by his Department to assess measures that would have to be taken in the event of contamination by airborne plutonium resulting from a nuclear weapons accident aboard a Royal Navy ship docked at Greenwich.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It has been the policy of successive British Governments neither to confirm nor to deny the presence of nuclear weapons on Her Majesty's ships. There are, however, detailed contingency plans for dealing with the extremely remote possibility of an accident involving the release of radioactive material from a weapon while in the custody of the Royal Navy, and these include plans to deal with such an accident on board a warship.

Mr. Jonathan Moyle

Mr. Galloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the capacities in which the late Jonathan Moyle served Her Majesty's Government; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Royal Air Force records show that the late Jonathan Moyle served as an officer in the Royal Air Force from 1980 to 1988.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Benefits (Blyth Valley)

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the total sum of unclaimed social security benefits in Blyth Valley and Northumberland in the latest convenient 12-month period.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Such estimates can be made only at national level.

Local Offices

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether he has any plans to increase the local office allocations previously announced to the House; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: We have no plans to do so, but are continuing to monitor local office budgets closely.

I regret that there were errors in the list of 1990-91 social fund budget allocations in the Official Report on 26 March at column 35 for Portsmouth, South and Havant local offices. Boundary changes in Birmingham, following the closure of Birmingham Bradford street office, and in London South region have also resulted in revised allocations to four offices. The amended allocations for the offices concerned are set out in the table.

	Loans £	Grants £
Havant	198,973	78,996
Portsmouth South	222,318	84,125
Birmingham Ladywood	623,631	260,652
Birmingham Ravenhurst	492,642	214,821
Oval	370,937	179,390
Balham	480,070	205,798

Posts (Newcastle)

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many of the jobs announced in April for the Newcastle Central office at Long Benton are (a) existing posts relocated to Newcastle and (b) completely new additions to his Department's overall manpower.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Of the 1,000 jobs to be located at the Newcastle site for the contributions agency, 800 are existing posts from the Department's regional organisation dealing with contributions record keeping. The centralisation of this function will enable a better service to be provided. The offsetting staff savings will fall in very small numbers over approximately 450 local offices throughout the country. About 200 new posts will be created to form the headquarters of the agency, but because of efficiency savings overall there will be no commensurate increase in the Department's total manpower.

National Insurance

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the average amount of national insurance paid by (a) married men and (b) single men, in the age groups (i) 16 to 20 years, (ii) 20 to 25 years, (iii) 25 to 30 years, (iv) 30 to 35 years, (v) 35 to 40 years, (vi) 40 to 45 years, (vii) 45 to 50 years, (viii) 50 to 55 years, (ix) 55 to 60 years and (x) 60 to 65 years, in the last five years.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The information is not available in the exact form requested. The latest available information which relates to 1987 is in the table.

Average amounts of National Insurance paid, 1987[1] (£ per week)

Fraud

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his latest estimate of the amount defrauded from the social security system as a total cash amount and as a number of pence on the basic rate of income tax.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: No reliable estimate is available of the cost of fraudulent social security claims.

Disabled Young People

206. Mr. Jerry Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether he has any plans to improve the benefit entitlement of disabled young people.

Mr. Scott: Yes. We propose that where single young people of 16 to 17 who qualify for the disability premium are claiming income support independently from their parents, they should in future be entitled to the higher rate of personal allowance normally appropriate for those of 18 to 24. Thus their income support rate, including the premium, will rise from £37·30 to £44·20.

We estimate that this will help some 4,000 disabled young people at an annual cost of £1,500,000. Regulations to provide for this change are being laid today, with a view to bringing it into effect from 2 July 1990.

Separated Parents

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he has any plans to assist separated parents by the provision of financial assistance towards long-distance travelling costs of accommodation.

Mr. Scott: A separated parent may obtain help with these costs from the social fund. If receiving income support, he or she may be awarded a community care grant, whether for visiting a child living with the other parent pending a custody decision, or where the child or other parent is ill, or where the payment would ease a domestic crisis. Alternatively, crisis loans are available to anyone where payment is the only means of avoiding serious risk or damage to the health or safety of the applicant or a member of his family. We have no plans to alter these arrangements.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Manufacturing Industry

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has of the total cost to public funds on an absolute and per-employee basis of support for manufacturing industry and on both national and regional levels in the five most recently available years in (a) France, (b) West Germany, (c) Italy, (d) Denmark and (e) the United Kingdom.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The information is as follows:

Aid to manufacturing (excluding shipbuilding and steel) in national currency at constant 1986 prices (millions)

	1982	1983	1984	1985	1986

Steel Imports

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the amount of special engineering steels imported into the United Kingdom, from which countries, by tonnage and by estimated price, for each of the years 1980 to 1989.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 7 June 1990]: Data are not available on the basis indicated.

HEALTH

Mentally Ill and Mentally Handicapped People

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give a breakdown by age of the patients resident in each of the hospitals for the mentally ill and the mentally handicapped which he listed as becoming empty over the next five years in his answer to the hon. Member for Nottingham, North (Mr. Allen) of 5 April, Official Report, column 737.

Mr. Dorrell: This information is not collected centrally.

Community Care

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of the £50 million bridging fund to improve community care for people with mental illness or mental handicap has so far been claimed on behalf of mental handicap services and mental illness services, respectively.

Mr. Dorrell: The capital loan fund provides for £10 million to be allocated in England this year with a further £15 million and £25 million respectively in the following two years; thus establishing a £50 million rolling programme. A substantial number of applications for funds has been made and are now being assessed with priority being given to mental health projects which develop care in the community facilities, without distinction between mental handicap and mental illness. The intention is to announce successful applications which will cover the first year's allocation by the end of the month.

Newspaper Deliveries

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he has any plans to prohibit the employment of young people aged under 16 years in the delivery of newspapers.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We have no such plans. Only children over the age of 13 may be employed in the delivery of newspapers as provided in the Children and Young Persons Act 1933 and local authority byelaws made under that Act.

Sugared Medicines

7. Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he has any plans to prohibit or reduce the use of sugared medicines for children;

(2) what steps the Government are taking to overcome the dangers of tooth decay inherent in the use of sugared medicines for children.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The danger of tooth decay in children from the use of sugared medicines is small in comparison with that arising from their consumption of confectionery. Although sugared liquid medicines which have to be taken by children for long periods are undesirable, sugar may be useful in a formulation, to improve palatability or as a natural preservative. Nevertheless, a move towards sugar-free medicines has been accelerated by the recent report on dietary sugars and human disease by the Committee on Medical Aspects of Food Policy. New sugar-free medicinal products are emerging and, in addition, a briefing paper prepared for health professionals by the Health Education Authority, based on the report, recommends that when medicines are needed, particularly in the long term, parents and medical practitioners should select sugar-free formulations.

Non-milk Extrinsic Sugars

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to reduce the consumption of non-milk extrinsic sugars.

Mr. Dorrell: The steps are twofold. First, we sought and have published COMA's authoritative advice on the relationship between dietary sugars and human disease. Secondly, we are acting on the report's recommendations. One of the main recommendations was that the population as a whole reduce its consumption of non-milk extrinsic sugars. The recommendations for action in support of this aim were mainly directed at health education. I am pleased to say, therefore, that the need to reduce the consumption of non-milk extrinsic sugars is now an integral part of the Health Education Authority's major new programme of nutrition and dental health education. The HEA has already produced a well-received briefing paper for health professionals based on the COMA report. In addition new guidelines on all aspects of diet, including sugars consumption, are being prepared jointly by this Department, the HEA and the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food. These will be published shortly.

Other Government action includes encouragement for more sugar-free medicinal products and for manufacturers to adopt current MAFF guidelines that suggest inclusion of sugar content as part of nutrition declarations on food labels.

Child Protection Teams

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the number of child protection teams allocated to each health board within the United Kingdom; and what is the number of people in each team.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: It is for local agencies in England to decide in the light of local needs and circumstances on the allocation of staff to child protection work. Information on the number of staff working specifically in this field is not collected centrally.

Arrangements for the rest of the United Kingdom are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland and my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland.

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the number of cases reported to child protection teams in the United Kingdom in the last 12 months; and what was the number of cases actively pursued.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Information is not collected centrally about the number of cases reported to child protection teams or the number of cases actively pursued. For England, information is collected centrally about the number of names added to child protection registers. The most recent information relates to the year ending 31 March 1989 and is published in the provisional feedback "Children and Young Persons on Child Protection Registers England 1989". Copies are available in the Library.

Statistics for the rest of the United Kingdom are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales and my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland.

Child Psychologists

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many child psychologists were employed in National Health Service clinics in (a) 1989, (b) 1984 and (c) 1970.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The information requested is not available. However, the hon. Member may like to know that there were 291 (whole-time equivalent) clinical psychologists working with children and adolescents in England in 1989. This is the first year for which such data have been collected.

Child Abuse

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he intends to meet representatives of the National Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, the Association of Directors of Social Services, the Children's Society and Childline to discuss the co-ordination of information relating to ritual child abuse and child abuse networks.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Officials from the Department of Health and the Home Office held a meeting on 3 May 1990 with representatives of the NSPCC, the Children's Society, Childline, the National Children's Home, local authorities and the police. It was agreed that the Department of Health would continue to meet individuals and groups during the summer further to explore the issues involved.

Cerebral Palsy

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the current cost of treatment being offered to children suffering from cerebral palsy.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not available centrally.

Minor Surgery

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether the new guidelines on the minor surgery list will preclude general practitioners from conducting minor surgery in which they are totally competent on the basis that they are not competent in all the areas of minor surgery which are listed on the revised claim forms; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what effect upon waiting lists for minor surgery he expects the revised provisions for payment and competence to have.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: No changes have been made to the criteria for admission to the list of doctos providing minor surgical services or to the remuneration arrangements for these services. To be admitted to the minor surgery list a doctor must display competence in all the approved procedures. This is to encourage GPs to extend their skills and provide additional services to their patients. By this means patients will be saved the inconvenience of attending an out-patients department and waiting lists should be relieved.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for how many minor surgical procedures claims may be made in an appropriate period by general practitioners; and who will be responsible for such minor surgery once these limits have been reached.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: General practitioners on the minor surgery list receive payment on a sessional basis. A session consists of at least five procedures. A GP is allowed to claim three sessional payments a quarter. Where a GP is a member of a partnership or group practice he or she may claim a higher number of payments in a quarter up to a maximum of three times the number of partners or members of the group. There is of course nothing to stop a GP doing more procedures if he or she wishes, but they will not generate any further income.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Passports

Mr. Walden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the reasons are for renewing passports after 10 years.

Mr. John Patten: The validity of the United Kingdom passport is normally limited to 10 years in line with international passport practice. As a document of nationality and identity, a passport must reflect the changes that can occur over time in a person's appearance and national status. There is also the problem of wear and tear.

Police Remand Prisoners

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners are being held in custody at police stations (a) in the Metropolitan area and (b) outside the London area, as of 1 June; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The number of prisoners held in police cells in the Metropolitan police area and elsewhere in England and Wales from 1 June were as follows:

Date	Metropolitan police area	Elsewhere in England and Wales
1 June	245	809
2 June	245	809
3 June	245	809
4 June	216	864
5 June	218	893
6 June	177	900
7 June	143	951

We very much regret the current situation which has resulted in part from industrial action by prison officers in the London area—now over—and from difficulties we are facing in getting prisoners into prison establishments following the recent prison disturbances. My right hon. and learned Friend is determined to return to the situation where it is no longer necessary to resort to the use of police cells, and I am sure the great majority of responsible prison officers will wish to do likewise.

Crime Figures

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he next plans to meet the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis to discuss crime figures.

Mr. John Patten: My right hon. and learned Friend meets the Commissioner on a regular basis to discuss a wide range of policing matters, including crime in London.

Concessionary Television Licences

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many representations he has received over the past 12 months about concessionary television licences.

Mr. Mellor: In the year ended 31 May 1990 we received four petitions and 1,463 letters about free or reduced price licences for pensioners. One thousand two hundred and two of the letters were cyclostyled and clearly sent as part of a local campaign. Of the rest, 123 were from hon. Members.

Police Cells

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) men and (b) women were being held in police cells in England and Wales on 21 May.

Mr. Mellor: On 21 May there were 1,047 male and no female prisoners held in police cells in England and Wales.

Crime Figures

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he next plans to meet the chief constable of Nottinghamshire to discuss crime figures.

Mr. John P. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he next plans to meet the chief constable of South Wales to discuss crime figures.

Mr. John Patten: My right hon. and learned Friend meets chief officers of police on a regular basis to discuss a wide range of policing matters, but he has no present plans for meetings to discuss crime figures in particular.

Burglaries

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the number of burglaries reported in each of the last three years.

Mr. John Patten: The information requested is published in table 1 of the Home Office statistical bulletin 10/90, a copy of which is available in the Library.

Court Users Committees

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many court users committees are now operating in England and Wales.

Mr. John Patten: Up-to-date information is not at present available, but it should become available by the end of the year as part of the returns for the magistrates courts management information system.

Women's Issues

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any plans to appoint a women Minister as chairman of the ministerial group on women's issues.

Mr. John Patten: Ministers attend the ministerial group on women's issues on the basis of their departmental responsibilities for matters within the remit of the group. The group is chaired by myself, as the Home Office Minister of State with special responsibility for equal opportunities. The vice-chairman is my hon. Friend the Member for Mitcham and Morden (Mrs. Rumbold) who is also co-chairman of the Women's National Commission.

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what policy initiatives have been undertaken as a result of discussions by the ministerial group on women's issues.

Mr. John Patten: The ministerial group was established in 1986 to provide a co-ordinated examination of policy issues of special concern to women, and with a particular duty to consider the Government's response to the forward looking strategies for the advancement of women (adopted during the UN Decade for Women). The main initiatives taken as a result of the group's discussions have been:

(i) A review of the Government's policy in areas covered by the Forward Looking Strategies (published in April 1987);
(ii) the issue of guidance designed to ensure that civil servants recognise the equal opportunities implications of policy proposals;
(iii) the agreement of initiatives aimed at increasing the number of women appointed to public bodies;
(iv) the agreement in April 1989 of a five-point plan designed to improve the range and quality of childcare options, followed by a second five-point plan on childcare agreed in February 1990; and

(v) a package of initiatives drawn up in July 1989 to tackle domestic violence.

Copies of the group's report on the forward looking strategies were placed in the Library in 1987. Further details of the initiatives on equal opportunity "proofing", child care and domestic violence are given in the press releases that were issued after the group's meetings in October 1988, April 1989, July 1989, October 1989 and February 1990 (copies of which have been placed in the Library).

WALES

Health Authorities

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make it his policy to appoint as chairpersons and new members of health authorities in Wales persons resident within the district which their authority serves.

Mr. Grist: Persons appointed will usually live, work or have connections with the area served but it would be unnecessarily prescriptive to adopt the policy requested.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he has any plans to introduce any change in the salary of the chairpersons of health authorities, or in the terms of reference of the appointment of members of the authorities, following their reconstitution during 1990; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: We expect to introduce changes in chairmen's current remuneration levels which will reflect their greater responsibilities accruing from our planned programme of NHS reforms. The terms of reference of members will remain substantially as at present.

Training Credits

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many training and enterprise councils in Wales have made a bid for the introduction of training credits for young people.

Mr. Roberts: Two TECs in Wales submitted outline bids. The North-East Wales TEC has been invited to develop its bid further.

Youth Training

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what the budget for the Training Agency in Wales was in 1988-89, and 1989-90 for youth training schemes; and what his estimate is of the budget 1990-91.

Mr. Roberts: The budgets for 1988-89 and 1989-90 were £55·278 million and £50·884 million respectively. For 1990-91 the budget is £45·750 million. This is a reflection of the decline in youth unemployment and demographic change.

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment his Department has made of the contribution made by the Training Agency and the managing agents of youth training schemes in 1988-89 and 1989-90 to the finances of each technical college in Mid Glamorgan.

Mr. Roberts: The contribution has been significant but no formal assessment of it has been made.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 16 May, Official Report, columns 479-80, if he will list the occasions since the introduction of service planning paper 5 when a health authority in Wales has failed to follow the consultation provisions of that document; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: I will write to the hon. Gentleman and place a copy of my reply in the Library of the House.

Community Hospital Beds

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 21 May, Official Report, column 62, (1) on what date he asked district health authorities to submit new local strategies for health; what guidance he gave on local public consultation; and if he is taking any steps to monitor the progress in developing these strategies;

(2) what is his Department's guidance to health authorities in Wales on publishing strategic options which are currently being developed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: In November 1989 the Department launched a wide-ranging consultation exercise on the Welsh Health Planning Forum's proposals for developing a better basis for long-term strategic planning in the NHS in Wales. The planning forum recommended that district health authorities and family practitioner committees should submit their long-term response strategies to the Welsh Office by December 1991.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will shortly announce his response to the consultation exercise. Health authorities will then be given advice on a range of related issues, including timetabling and arrangements for monitoring the progress of the planning exercise.

Advice on district health authorities' short-term "pathfinder" procurement and unit business plans was contained in Welsh Office circular WHC(90)19, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House. No advice has been given on the framework for publishing these plans, as this is a matter for individual health authorities.

Gwynedd Health Authority

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 21 May, Official Report, column 58, whether any consultative bodies in Gwynedd will be allowed to comment on the proposed list of chairman and five members of the Gwynedd health authority, as reconstituted under the provisions of the National Health Service and Community Care Bill; and by what date he hopes to publish these names.

Mr. Grist: No shortlist of names will be published for consultation.

District Health Authorities

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what directives he has issued to district health authorities in Wales during the past 12 months on the need to reduce administrative and clerical spending; and what assessment he has made of the performance of each health authority in Wales in this regard.

Mr. Grist: No such directives have been issued in the last 12 months. Management costs of health authorities are the subject of monitoring and assessment by the Welsh Office as part of the process of annual review of performance. Authorities are reminded of the need to subject such costs to the most rigorous scrutiny and to keep them to the minimum.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will state how much expenditure has been increased by his Department in each of the past five years on consultants, investigations and reports relating to district health authorities in Wales; and if he will list those district health authorities which are currently being helped by financial consultants in respect of their strategic options and business plans for the period from 1 April 1991, and for which his Department is meeting either part, or the whole, of the consultancy costs, noting in each instance the Department-borne part of the costs.

Mr. Grist: The expenditure incurred directly by the Department in each of the past five years on consultants, investigations and reports relating to district health authorities in Wales was as follows:

1985-86	Nil
1986-87
C. Squares Ltd.—Data envelopment analysis	1,150
Taylor Nelson Group—Welsh inter-censal study	17,250
1987-88
Deloitte, Haskins and Sells—Gwynedd DHA—Financial review and development of action plan	173,650
University of Birmingham—Inter authority comparisons	5,000
1988-89
Deloitte, Haskins and Sells—Oncology study	40,250
Cancer treatment study	40,030
Touche Ross—Report on paymaster function	13,141
Deloitte, Haskins and Sells—Gwynedd DHA—Assistance in implementing action plan	6,326
1989-90
Deloitte, Haskins and Sells—Cancer service study	67,930
Cancer treatment services	7,370
Price Waterhouse—Project 2000	79,922

The Department's contributions towards the cost of preparing pathfinder district procurement and unit business plans for 1990-91 are as follows:

Clwyd	20,000
East Dyfed	9,000
Gwent	27,500
Gwynedd	26,500
Mid Glamorgan	12,000
Pembrokeshire	20,000
Powys	44,000
South Glamorgan	35,000
West Glamorgan	2,034

The pathfinder plans will inform district health authorities for 1991-92.

With the exception of the funding provided to Gwynedd health authority, which represented 50 per cent. of the costs of a management consultancy to assist with the determination of strategic options and the production of a pathfinder business plan, it is not possible to say how much of the money made available to individual district health authorities will be used to engage the services of management consultants. This is a matter for individual district health authorities to decide in the light of their own local management arrangements.

Beef

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the state of the beef industry in Wales.

Mr. David Hunt: The December 1989 sample census figures showed that the Welsh beef breeding herd had increased by 6 per cent. compared with December 1988. Specialist beef producers have also benefited from last year's 42 per cent. increase in the rate of suckler cow premium which was worth some £8 million to producers in Wales in the 1989-90 scheme year; and hill livestock compensatory allowance payments on cattle in 1989 amounted to more than £8 million.

Following the devaluation of the green pound agreed at the 1990 price fixing, support prices have increased by 8·5 per cent. with the rate of beef special premium increasing from £29·19 to £31·80 a head from May 1990.

Although market prices are currently depressed, the beef intervention system can now be managed very flexibly to provide support where it is most needed.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will estimate the effect on beef production in Wales of France's continuing ban on British beef; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: It is not possible to separate the effects of the illegal French ban from other factors which affect the beef market.

Local Management of Schools

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he expects there to be any cuts in the staffing of schools of less than 200 pupils in Wales as a result of the implementation of local management of schools; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Roberts: There is no evidence that the introduction of local management of schools will lead to a reduction in the number of teaching jobs. Local management of schools of itself in no way affects the overall amount of money available within authorities for school education. It simply represents a more open way of distributing the same resources to secure better educational value for money.

SCOTLAND

Press Releases

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many press releases have been issued by himself, his Minister of State and each of his Parliamentary Under-Secretaries, from May 1989 to the present date.

Mr. Rifkind: The total number of news releases issued by the Scottish Information Office in the period 1 May 1989 to 31 May 1990 covering the activities of myself and my ministerial colleagues was 1,286. The number issued on behalf of each Minister was as follows:

	Number
Secretary of State for Scotland	307
Minister of State (Commons)	336
Minister of State (Lords)	118
Minister for Home Affairs and the Environment	284
Minister for Health and Sport	241

Life Sentences

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many prisoners serving life sentences have been granted parole or released on licence during the past 20 years in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: A total of 335 prisoners sentenced to life imprisonment or detained during Her Majesty's pleasure or without limit of time were released on licence in the 20 years to 31 December 1989. Separate figures are not maintained for life sentence prisoners alone, nor are such prisoners eligible for the grant of parole.

Land Registration

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list (a) the areas in respect of which the provisions of the Land Registration (Scotland) Act 1979 relating to registration have come into operation and (b) those areas in respect of which said provisions have not yet come into operation showing when it is estimated that provisions will come into operation.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: As regards (a), I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave her on 19 December 1989 at columns 145-46. By definition, the remaining areas of Scotland are not yet operational. No new areas are currently planned to become operational before 31 March 1993. My right hon. and learned Friend has asked the Keeper of the Registers of Scotland to present to him, this financial year, a phased programme for extending the Land Register to the remaining two thirds of Scotland.

Farm Pollution

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what action he is taking to stop the increase in farm pollution cases in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I am pleased to say that the number of farm pollution incidents has fallen from 713 in 1987 and 572 in 1988 to 462 in 1989. The Government are presently considering the outcome of public consultation earlier this year on proposals for regulations to control silage, slurry and agricultural fuel oil installations on farms with the aim in due course of laying new regulations before Parliament.

Polmont Young Offenders Institution

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the cost of the new perimeter fence and other recent increased security arrangements at Polmont young offenders institution.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The figure is £1,265,000 (including VAT).

Bed-and-Breakfast Accommodation

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will obtain for his departmental library a copy of the speech on Friday 18 May by Superintendent Donald McLean, president of the Association of Scottish Police Superintendents, on the subject ot homeless young people in bed-and-breakfast accommodation funded by the Department of Social Security.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 7 June 1990]: The Scottish Home and Health Department already has a copy of the speech on which I commented at the association's annual meeting.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

El Salvador

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made in investigating the murders in El Salvador in 1989 of six Jesuit priests, their cook and her daughter.

Mr. Sainsbury: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave to the right hon. Member for Tweeddale, Ettrick and Lauderdale (Sir D. Steel) on 5 June at column 465.

Nuclear Non-Proliferation

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has on the number of countries other than the existing six nuclear weapons states which either possess, are about to possess or plan to possess nuclear weapons; if he will name the countries concerned; and which of them are signatories to the non-proliferation treaty.

Mr. Waldegrave: There are five nuclear weapons states (NWS), of which three are signatories of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty (NPT). There are six states not parties to the NPT (Argentina, Brazil, India, Israel, Pakistan and South Africa) which have significant unsafeguarded nuclear activities, though none has declared itself to have or to be seeking nuclear weapons. North Korea, which is not recognised as a state by Her Majesty's Government, has acceded to the NPT, but has so far failed to conclude a safeguards agreement with the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA), although it also has significant nuclear facilities.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations Her Majesty's Government will be making to the non-proliferation treaty review conference.

Mr. Waldegrave: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 9 May to the hon. Member for Edinburgh, East (Mr. Strang) at column 181.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his latest information on the status of military nuclear developments in Brazil.

Mr. Waldegrave: Although not a party to the nuclear non-proliferation treaty (NPT), Brazil has signed and ratified the treaty of Tlatelolco which bans nuclear weapons in South America.

The Brazilian constitution introduced in October 1988 provides that Brazil's nuclear activities are to be for peaceful purposes only. However, there are some unsafeguarded nuclear activities in Brazil which appear to be concentrating on the use of nuclear propulsion for submarines.

Council of Europe Officials

Sir Geoffrey Finsberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the number of senior officials employed by the Council of Europe from the United Kingdom and other member states; and what steps are taken to ensure a balance between the numbers.

Mr. Waldegrave: On 1 May 1990, 23 of the 138 senior officials (grades A4 to A7) of the Council of Europe came from the United Kingdom; others were: Federal Republic of Germany 23, France 21, Italy 20, Netherlands nine, Belgium eight, Austria five, Switzerland five, Sweden five, Spain four, Turkey four, Greece three, Republic of Ireland two, Luxembourg two, Cyprus one, Denmark one, Malta one, Norway one. British nationals occupied two of the 25 top A6 and A7 posts (France seven, Italy four, Federal Republic of Germany three, Switzerland two, and one each from Austria, Belgium, Cyprus, Denmark, Ireland, Netherlands and Spain). We are broadly satisfied with the current overall balance, which reflects the requirement that posts should be fairly distributed among member states. If an imbalance were to arise we would discuss it with the Secretary-General, who has statutory responsibility for the question.

Cambodia

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the current Khmer Rouge offensive in western Cambodia, Kompong Speu province and Phnom Penh; and what steps he is taking individually or with the international community to prevent the reimposition of tyranny on the Cambodian people.

Mr. Sainsbury: We note with concern reports of increased military activity by the Khmer Rouge in Cambodia, but cannot confirm their accuracy. As permanent members of the United Nations Security Council, we continue to work for a comprehensive political settlement enabling the Cambodian people to elect a Government of their choice, free from the fear of Khmer Rouge atrocities, foreign occupation or civil war.

South Africa

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what response he has made to the decision of the Government of the Republic of South Africa to end apartheid in the health services.

Mr. Waldegrave: Our goal remains the complete eradication of apartheid in all forms. We welcome the opening of hospitals to all races as further evidence of the South African Government's commitment to this objective.

Mediterranean Basin

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what commitment has been made by the Government of Gibraltar in support of the Nicosia charter to protect the environment of the Mediterranean basin.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 21 May 1990]: The principal aim of the Nicosia charter was to reiterate the commitment of the parties to the convention for the protection of the Mediterranean sea against pollution (the Barcelona convention). The United Kingdom and Gibraltar are not parties to this convention, although Gibraltar does comply with relevant provisions of it. We naturally welcome measures which will lead to an improvement in the Mediterranean environment.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Potato Marketing Scheme

Mr. Andy Stewart: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the latest state of play on the amendments to the potato marketing scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: The Potato Marketing Board has submitted proposed amendments to Ministers, the main purpose of which is to involve non-producer interests in the board's market management decisions, as requested by Ministers in July 1989. The amendments will also reduce the size of the board. The Secretaries of State and I have made certain modifications to the board's proposals, as a result of which they will be implemented more quickly. An order will be laid before the House shortly.

Agriculture Council

Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the outcome of Agriculture Council held on 6 June; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: I refer my hon. Friend to the statement that I made in the House last night.

EMPLOYMENT

Value Added Tax

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) if he will list the category of businesses which were registered for value added tax in 1988 in the counties of North, South and West Yorkshire;

(2) what are (a) the category of businesses and (b) the numbers in each category which came off the value added tax register in 1988 in the counties of North, South and West Yorkshire.

Mr. Eggar: The information requested is given in "VAT registrations and deregistrations: analysis by county: 1980-1988" which is available in the Library.

Employment Training

Ms. Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the number of participants on employment training over the last year and the number that have not had a place on a training scheme or found employment on leaving employment training in Avon.

Mr. Nicholls: At 30 March 1990, the latest date for which information is available, there were 3,134 people on employment training in Avon. Information about the destinations of people leaving employment training is not yet available for Avon.

Energy Conservation

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, pursuant to his answer of 1 May, Official Report, column 471, whether the study to examine labour market and skills implications of increased environmental awareness includes an examination of opportunities in the field of energy conservation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: The Employment Department Training Agency-funded study of increased environmental awareness will focus on the labour market and skill implications of air and water pollution control and solid waste management. It will not deal directly with energy conservation.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the locations of the training and enterprise councils which have been approved.

Mr. Eggar: The following 13 training and enterprise councils have signed operational contracts:

Hertfordshire
Thames Valley
Devon/Cornwall
Dorset
Calderdale and Kirklees
Cumbria
ELTEC (East Lancashire)
Oldham
Rochdale
South and East Cheshire
Teeside
Tyneside
Wearside

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many training and enterprise councils have been approved; and how many are waiting approval.

Mr. Eggar: Thirteen training and enterprise councils (TECs) have signed operational contracts, and 63 TECs are in their development stage and preparing their corporate and business plans. I expect a further six to enter the development phase shortly.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment in how many of the approved training and enterprise councils the post of chief executive has been filled by a person who was in post as a regional manager of a training commission; and in how many cases such people have negotiated an entitlement which would allow them to return to the training commission.

Mr. Eggar: Of the 13 training and enterprise councils so far operational, 10 have chief executive posts filled by people who previously held civil service posts within the Training Agency. One of those has resigned from the civil service and become a TEC employee, the remaining nine being on secondment. All secondees remain in the civil service and have the right to return to the Employment Department group at the end of the secondment period.

Leptospirosis

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the incidence of leptospira hardjo and Weil's disease among those in occupations of greatest risk over the last five years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: There were 299 confirmed cases of leptospirosis in England and Wales in the period 1985-89, of which 180 are known to have been occupationally related. Leptosprosis hardjo, which is associated with cattle, accounted for 139 of these cases among agricultural and abattoir workers, those involved in pig, cattle and dairy farming, and veterinary workers. Weil's disease can develop from any leptospiral infection but is most common in infections associated with rats, although few cases actually occur. Those at risk include sewer and water workers. In the five-year period there were 15 deaths from leptospirosis infection reported in England and Wales.

Energy Consumption

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give for each year from 1978 the energy consumption, broken down by fuel, of the buildings occupied by his Department, expressing the figures in (a) cash terms, (b) 1978-79 money terms and (c) units of consumption for electricity in kilowatt hours, gas in therms, liquid fuel in litres and solid fuel in tonnes.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 5 June 1990]: I regret that this information is not available. Before April 1990 the PSA was responsible for energy monitoring and did not retain this information in the form requested.

ENVIRONMENT

Disabled Facilities Grant

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what would be the maximum disabled facilities grant payable in respect of eligible works amounting to (a) £5,000, (b) £10,000, (c) £15,000, (d) £20,000 and (e) £25,000 to (i) a single disabled person with a disability premium, (ii) a single disabled person with a severe disability premium, (iii) a married couple, one of whom is in receipt of a disability premium, (iv) a married couple, one of whom is in receipt of a disability premium, and with two children and (v) a married couple with two children, one of whom is in receipt of a disability premium, where, in each case, there were (1) no savings and where there were savings of (2) £3,000, (3) £5,000, (4) £8,000 and (5) £10,000.

Mr. Chope: Regulations laid down before the House today (the Housing Renovation etc. Grants (Reduction of Grant) Regulations 1990—SI 1990 No. 1189) provide that the amount of disabled facilities grant will depend on the cost of the eligible works, the composition of the applicant's household and the applicant's income, including notional tariff income in respect of any savings in excess of £5,000. There will be no overriding maximum grant.

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, in respect of disabled facilities grants where income exceeds the lower income threshold and the universal £20 grant premium, and every 20p in the pound is regarded as being available to help finance the works through a notional loan secured on the property, what are the currently proposed loan generation factors for owner-occupiers and for tenants for every excess £1 per week.

Mr. Chope: Regulations laid before the House today (the Housing Renovation etc. Grants (Reduction of Grant) Regulations 1990—SI 1990 No. 1189) provide for a loan generation factor of 51·54 to be applied to owner-occupiers' applications for disabled facilities grants, and a factor of 34·62 to be applied to tenants' applications. These factors incorporate the 20p in the pound contribution rate.

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the proposed lower income thresholds for disabled facilities grants for (a) a single disabled person with a disability premium, (b) a single disabled person with a severe disability premium, (c) a married couple, one of whom is in receipt of a disability premium and (d) a married couple, one of whom is in receipt of a disability premium, and with two children and (e) a married couple with two children, one of whom is in receipt of a disability premium.

Mr. Chope: In accordance with regulations laid before the House today (the Housing Renovation etc. Grants (Reduction of Grant) Regulations 1990—SI 1990 No. 1189), the lower income thresholds (or applicable amount) for disabled facilities grants in each of the cases cited will be as follows:

(a) single disabled person: £72·10 pw (£3,760 pa)
(b) single severely disabled person: £100·30 pw (£5,230 pa)
(c) Maried couple, one disabled: £99·70 pw (£5,199 pa)
(d) Married couple, one disabled, with two children: £143·55 pw (£7,485 pa)
(e) Married couple with two children, one disabled: £136·85 pw (£7,136 pa)

In each case the adults are assumed to be between 25 and 59 years old and any children are 11 to 15. These thresholds do not include the appropriate earnings disregards (£15 per week in cases (a) to (d), £10 per week in case (e)).

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the proposed upper income thresholds for a disabled facilities grant for eligible works amounting to (a) £5,000, (b) £10,000, (c) £15,000, (d) £20,000 and (e) £25,000 to (i) a single disabled person with a disability premium, (ii) a single disabled person with a severe disability premium, (iii) a married couple, one of whom is in receipt of a disability premium, (iv) a married couple, one or whom is in receipt of a disability premium, and with two children and (v) a married couple with two children, one of whom is in receipt of a disability premium.

Mr. Chope: In accordance with regulations laid before the House today (the Housing Renovation etc. Grants (Reduction of Grant) Regulations 1990—SI 1990 No. 1189), the upper net income thresholds for disabled facilities grants in each of the cases cited would be as follows:

Case	Upper net income threshold for disabled facilities grant entitlement—£pw (£pa) by cost of eligible works
	£	£	£	£	£
Works costings	5,000	10,000	15,000	20,000	25,000
(i) Single, disabled	184·11 (9,600)	281·12 (14,658)	378·14 (19,717)	475·15 (24,776)	572·16 (29,834)
(ii) Single, severely disabled	212·31 (11,070)	309·32 (16,129)	406·34 (21,188)	503·35 (26,246)	600·36 (31,304)
(iii) Married couple, one disabled	211·71 (11,039)	308·72 (16,098)	405·74 (21,156)	502·75 (26,215)	599·76 (31,273)
(iv) Married couple, one disabled, two children	255·56 (13,326)	352·57 (18,384)	449·59 (23,443)	546·60 (28,501)	643·61 (33,560)
(v) Married couple, two children, one disabled	243·86 (12,716)	340·87 (17,774)	437·89 (22,833)	534·90 (27,891)	631·91 (32,950)

These figures assume that income includes earnings, and take into account the appropriate earnings disregards (£15 per week in cases (i) to (iv), £10 per week in case (v)). In each case it is assumed that the application is in respect of an owner-occupied property, that the adults are between 25 and 59 years old, any children are aged 11 to 15, and that any capital, after any appropriate disregard, in £5,000 or less.

Housing

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list Government policies for housing help for people with HIV or AIDS.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The Department's capital allocation to housing authorities enable them to take into account any special housing needs of people with AIDS. The Housing Corporation will also consider bids from housing authorities on behalf of people with AIDS.

Management Consultants

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what (a) guidance and (b) encouragement is given by his Department to local authorities to use management consultants to improve the efficiency of local government; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: None. It is for authorities themselves to decide whether to use consultants for this or other purposes. The Audit Commission and its auditors issue a great deal of very valuable advice to help authorities improve their efficiency.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what involvement his Department had in the recent study by the PA Consulting Group and Local Government Chronicle entitled, "The Management of Change in Local Authorities"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: None.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of Stste for the Environment what are (a) the average cost per person of Government provision towards local government services and (b) individual community charges in each district of Devon.

Mr. Chope: The amount of external support (revenue support grant, special grant and business rates) per adult and the community charge for each district in Devon are:

District	External support (£ per adult)	Community charge (£ per adult)
East Devon	426	345
Exeter	462	344
Mid Devon	462	339
North Devon	470	319
Plymouth	481	350
South Hams	431	334
Teignbridge	441	365
Torbay	458	395
Torridge	511	285
West Devon	443	331

In addition the Government contribute towards the cost of local government through specific grants, community charge rebates, and transitional relief.

Beaches

Mr. Churchill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps his Department takes to monitor beaches round the United Kingdom for the presence of viruses in water; and if he will publish the most recent figures available.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The measurement of viruses in bathing water identified under directive 76/160/EEC is a matter for the competent authority, which in England and Wales is the National Rivers Authority. The available results for the 1989 bathing season are in the report placed in the Library on 25 January (Official Report, c. 785.).

House Prices

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish for each county, metropolitan district and London borough area latest estimates of average house prices for (a) all houses, (b) flats, (c) terraced houses, (d) semi-detached and (e) detached houses.

Mr. Michael Spicer [holding answer 5 June 1990]: I have today placed a table giving the available information based on the building society mortgage survey in the Library.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 173

SESSION 1989–90

21st May—8th June 1990

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc, between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes, and cannot, therefore, be used in conjunction with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instrument etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Mr. Speaker and his deputies are brought together under the heading Speaker's rulings and statements.

Other contributions by Mr. Speaker and his deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates, Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates etc (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Money res = money resolution, Com = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
